H.M. Stationery Office was established in 1786 and is the British Government's central organization for the supply of printing, binding, office supplies and office machinery of all kinds, and published books and periodicals, for the Public Service at home and abroad; it also undertakes larger towns act as agents; and there are wholesale departments in London, Edinburgh and Belfast from which booksellers may obtain supplies. It is also the agent for the sale of publications of the United Nations and its specialized agencies. The Controller of the Stationery Office is under Letters Patent the Queen's Printer of Acts of Parliament and in him is vested the Copyright in all British Government documents.

The aggregate net estimate for the department in 1956-57 was £13,381,100 (an increase of £582,200 on the same estimate for 1955-56). The gross estimate amounts to £18,381,800 and includes £2,373,000 for salaries and wages of office and warehouse staffs, £5,650,000 for printing and £2,795,000 for y and £625,000 s. The receipts sale of government from the sale of waste paper recovered from all departments.

Generally the department obtains its supplies from commercial sources by competitive tender. On the printing and binding side, however, the Stationery Office has its own printing works and binderies which produce about one-third of the total requirement, including telephone directories, pension allowance books, national savings certificates and stamps, postal orders, tobacco tokens and National Insurance stamps. The annual face value of these certificates and stamps is nearly £1,715,000,000.

Government publications are of a wide and varied range and about 5,700 titles are published each year. They include the London Gazette, which has been issued twice weekly since 1665, and Hansard, the verbatim report of the proceedings in both Houses of Parliament, available on the morning following the debate. The Stationery Office has in stock some 300,000 titles and its subscription lists contain 65,000 names. The annual sales total about 17,000,000 copies.

The staff employed on April 1, 1956, was 6,794, including 1,911 in warehouses and 2,233 at printing works; the total space occupied was two million square feet, including 1,250,000 sq. ft. for warehouse space and 448,000 sq. ft. for the printing works.

BOARD OF TRADE

[Trafalgar: 8855]

The Board of Trade has general responsibility for the industry and commerce of the United Kingdom, and particular responsibility for most industries except in the following: agriculture, maritime shipping, transport, food, in culture and fisheries and fuel and power, and to other Government Departments. The Board's general responsibility includes certain powers and duties in relation to insurance and company law, bankruptcy, patents, the administration of enemy property and the distribution of the proceeds of its realization, the distribution of industry, commercial relations with overseas countries, the promotion of exports and the Censuses of Production and Distribution.

The Board administers its responsibilities through three main groups of divisions: overseas, home and regulatory, to which are added the Commodity and General Division, the Tariff Division and common service divisions such as the Information, Statistics, Finance and Establishment Divisions and the Solicitor's Department.

On the overseas side, the Commercial Relations and Exports Department is responsible for general commercial policy and trade relations with individual countries abroad.

On the home side, the Textile and Clothing Industries Division is responsible for the organization and capital investment and with the long-term efficiency of industry; and it carries the Board's responsibility for the tobacco manufacturing and tourist industries. The textile industry is the concern of Division 3, together with a number of consumer goods industries and flax, hemp, jute (and jute goods), paper, newsprint and timber. Division 4 is concerned in the main with the chemical industry, including its raw materials, and with metals. The other divisions in the Board's structure are:

The Distribution of Industry Acts and for the central administration of Industrial Estates in Development Areas. This division is also administratively responsible for the Board's regional organization, through which Industrial Development Certificates are issued under the Town and Country Planning Acts, and is responsible

THE TREASURY

[Whitehall: 1234]

The office of the Lord High Treasurer has been continuously in commission for well over 200 years. The Lords Commissioners of H.M. Treasury consist of the First Lord of the Treasury (who is also the Prime Minister), the Chancellor of the Exchequer and five Junior Lords. This Board of Commissioners is assisted at present by a Parliamentary Secretary, a Financial Secretary and an Economic Secretary who also are Ministers, and a Permanent Secretary who is the head of a staff of officials. The Prime Minister and First Lord is not primarily concerned in the day-to-day aspects of Treasury business, and the Junior Lords and the Parliamentary Secretary are Government Whips in the House of Commons. The higher departmental direction of Treasury business, therefore, devolves on the Chancellor of the Exchequer, assisted at Ministerial level by the Financial Secretary and the Economic Secretary, who both advise the Chancellor on general financial and economic policy. The Financial Secretary devotes himself in particular to the Treasury's long-standing responsibilities for financial administration, including questions relating to the Civil Service; the Economic Secretary is concerned primarily with the co-ordination of general economic policy and planning and supply questions connected therewith.

TRINITY HOUSE

[Royal: 6601]

Trinity House, the first General Lighthouse and Pilotage Authority in the Kingdom, was a body of importance when Henry VIII. granted the Institution its first charter in 1514, inter alia "for the relief, increase and augmentation of the Shipping of this Realm of England." Since that period the duty of erecting and maintaining lighthouses and other marks and signs of the sea has by Royal Charter and Acts of Parliament been entrusted to the Corporation of Trinity House, and until 1874 Masters of the Navy were examined by the Elder Brethren of the Corporation. In the present day, the principal duty of the Corporation of Trinity House, as a Public Department, is the administration of the Lighthouse, &c., Service of England and Wales with certain statutory jurisdiction in regard to lighthouses and other seamarks in Scotland, Ireland, the Channel Islands and Gibraltar, while the Corporation is also the chief Pilotage Authority in the United Kingdom, and in its capacity as a private corporation or guild it administers certain Charitable Trusts specifically dedicated to the relief of aged and distressed master mariners, their widows and children. The Corporation also controls and maintains a fleet of 9 steam and motor vessels. The Active Elder Brethren of the Corporation also sit with the Judges of the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice to act as Nautical Assessors in Marine Causes tried in that Court. The Lighthouse Service of the Trinity House is maintained out of the General Lighthouse Fund, this fund being provided by means of special dues called Light Dues levied on shipping using the ports of the United Kingdom. The accounts are submitted annually to Parliament.

MINISTRY OF WORKS

[Reliance: 7611]

The Ministry of Works was constituted in 1940. It took over the functions of the Commissioners of H.M. Works and Public Buildings who had been incorporated by the Commissioners of Works Act, 1852. The principal functions of the Commissioners were to provide, furnish and maintain buildings, and to administer the Ancient Monuments Act.

The Ministry is now also responsible for co-ordinating the work of the building and civil engineering industries and of the building materials industries. It encourages efficiency and increased production by supplying technical information and making known the results of research.

THE NATIONAL TRUST

40-42 Queen Anne's Gate, Westminster, S.W.1.

The National Trust was founded in 1895 by Miss Octavia Hill, Sir Robert Hunter and Canon Rawsley, their object being to preserve as much as possible of the history and beauty of their country for its people. It has since become an organization incorporated by Act of Parliament to ensure the preservation of lands and buildings of historic interest or natural beauty for public access and benefit. It is a non-profit-making organization and relies mainly on subscriptions and donations for working funds. The State, however, allows it certain tax exemptions. A further, and only recently instituted, branch of the Trust's work is the acquisition and preservation, with the co-operation of the Royal Horticultural Society, of gardens of national importance. It also has under its care bird sanctuaries and nature reserves, together with several hundred farms.

The National Trust now administers more than 230,000 acres of land in England, Wales and Northern Ireland; and in this area are over 1,000 properties. These properties have come into its hands mainly by gift or bequest; but since 1946 certain land and buildings accepted by the Treasury in lieu of death duties have been handed over to the Trust, the Treasury recompensing itself from the National Land Fund. The properties acquired by the National Trust before last year include the Ashridge Estate (Bucks. and Herts.); Cliveden (Bucks.); West Wycombe Park and village (Bucks.); Wicken Fen (Cambs.); Lyme Park (Cheshire); Cotehele House (Cornwall); Pentire Head (Cornwall); St. Michael's Mount (Cornwall); Trerice (Cornwall); Doveclade (Derbys. & Staffs.); Arlington Court Estate (Devon); Hatfield Forest (Essex); Chedworth Roman Villa (Glos.); Hidcote Manor Gdn. (Glos.); Knole (Kent); over 30,000 acres in the Lake District including the Buttermere Valley, Monk Coniston Estate, Scafell Pike and Troutbeck Park Farm; Tattershall Castle (Lincs.); Osterley Park (Middx.); Blickling Hall Estate (Norfolk); Farne Islands (Northumberland); Clumber Park (Notts.); Holnicote Estate (Somerset); Montacute House (Somerset); Flatford Mill (Suffolk); Box Hill (Surrey); Ham House (Surrey); Bodiam Castle (Sussex); Petworth House (Sussex); Charlecote Park (Warwicks.); Lacock Abbey and village (Wilts.); Stourhead Estate (Wilts.); Derwent Estate (Yorks. and Derbys.); Penrhyn Estates (N. Wales); Bodnant Gardens (N. Wales); Powis Castle (Mont.); Castlecoole (N. Ireland); Hanbury Hall (Warwicks.); Lanhydrock (Cornwall); Tintinhull House (Somerset); Nymans Gardens (Sussex); Sheffield Park Gardens (Sussex); Uppark (Sussex); Nostell Priory (Yorks.); Staunton Harold Church (Leics.); Penard Cliff (Glam.); Blundell's Old School (Devon); Castleward (N. Ireland).

Acquisitions last year include Ashdown House (Berks.); Boscastle (Cornwall); Trellisick (Cornwall); Ickworth House (Suffolk); Holmwood Common (Surrey); Clandon Park (Surrey); Mount Stewart Gardens and Rowallane Gardens (N. Ireland).

THE PILGRIM TRUST

Millbank House, a Great Peter Street, S.W.1

Trustees, The Right Hon. Sir Alan Lascelles, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., C.M.G., M.C. (Chairman); The Right Hon. Sir Oliver Franks, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., C.B.E.; Richard Fleming, M.C.; The Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, K.T., G.B.E.; W. F. Oakshott; The Lord Evershed, Master of the Rolls.

Secretary, The Lord Kilmaine, C.B.E.

The Pilgrim Trust was founded in 1930 by the late Edward S. Harkness of New York, who placed in the hands of trustees £2,000,000 to be for the benefit of Great Britain. Since then the Trust has been able to make substantial grants for the repair of ancient buildings, the preservation of historical records, the support of learned societies, the purchase of works of art and the assistance of social welfare schemes.

Since its foundation the Trust has paid out grants amounting to £2,750,534, yet it still retains investments with a market value of £3,494,158. In 1955 the Trustees voted grants totalling £158,163. The grants were made under the three heads: Preservation (£69,062), Art and Learning (£84,464) and Social Welfare (£2,672).

Among ecclesiastical buildings Ripon Cathedral received assistance and grants were made for the restoration of notable treasures within churches: 15th-century painted panels in the church of St. Michael-at-Plea, Norwich (£1,052); 17th-century woodwork in the chancel of Passenham Church, Northamptonshire (£1,000); 13th- and 15th-century glass in the church of St. Michael-at-the-Northgate, Oxford (£500).

Grants for the preservation of secular buildings included: Chetham's Hospital, Manchester (£5,000); The Town Hall, Berwick-upon-Tweed (£2,500); Kenyon Peel Hall, Lancashire (£2,000); Ashleworth Tithe Barn, Gloucestershire (£1,600) and the Abbey House, Winchester (£1,000).

For the preservation of historical records grants were voted to the Church authorities in four dioceses: London (St. Paul's Cathedral Library) (£5,000); Chichester (£1,200); Hereford (£2,075) and Worcester (£1,000).

In the field of Art and Learning the Trustees made a grant of £3,000 towards the acquisition of the Butler-Bowdon Cope by the Victoria and Albert Museum. They assisted a number of libraries, including that of the Royal Geographical Society (£2,000); Stion College (£524) and the Plume Library, at Maldon, Essex (£500). The cause of archaeology was supported by grants to the University of Durham for excavations at Hadrian's Wall (£3,000) and to the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland for excavations at Inchuthil, Perthshire (£2,000).

Other grants included: Cambridge Preservation

Society (£3,000); Royal Academy of Dramatic Art (£3,000); National Library for the Blind (£5,000).

65 Davies Street, W.1

The British Council was established in 1934 to promote abroad a wider knowledge of the United Kingdom and of the English language, and to develop closer cultural relations between the United Kingdom and other countries. Almost the whole of the Council's funds are derived from grants voted by Parliament. Grants for 1956-57 amounted to £3,283,700.

The Council's activities include the formation of new, and the encouragement of existing, British cultural centres, Anglophilic societies and British schools abroad; the encouragement of English language teaching and British studies in schools, universities and other institutions abroad. Scholarships and bursaries for study in this country of British institutions, methods and achievements are granted to overseas graduates and others.

In July, 1956, the Council had staffs at work in most European countries, in many Latin-American Republics, in most countries of the Middle East, in Burma, Indonesia, Japan and Thailand in Australia, India, Pakistan, Ceylon and in most British colonies. At the request of H.M. Government it set up in 1955 the Soviet Relations Committee to promote cultural relations with the Soviet Union, primarily by sponsoring visits in both directions by professional and other groups.

The Council maintains centres in the United Kingdom, mainly in university cities, to provide services for students, professional visitors, holders of U.N. and Colombo Plan awards and others from overseas. It is responsible for accommodation and welfare services for the main body of colonial students in the U.K., funds for this work being provided from the Colonial Development and Welfare Fund.

President, General Sir Ronald Adam, Bt., G.C.B., D.S.O., O.B.E.

Chairman, Sir David Kelly, G.C.M.G., M.C.

THE ARTS COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN

4 St. James's Square, S.W.1

The Arts Council of Great Britain was incorporated under Royal Charter on August 9, 1946, "for the purpose of developing greater knowledge, understanding and practice of the fine arts exclusively and in particular to increase the accessibility of the fine arts to the public . . . to improve the standard of execution of the fine arts and to advise and co-operate with . . . Government Departments, Local Authorities and other bodies on any matters concerned directly or indirectly with those objects. . . ."

The Members of the Council, who may not exceed 16 in number, are appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer after consultation with the Minister of Education and the Secretary of State for Scotland. They normally serve for a period of five years.

In addition to the Headquarters Office there are separate offices in Edinburgh and Cardiff.

The Council receives an annual grant from the Treasury. For the year 1955-56 the amount was £820,000.

Chairman, Sir Kenneth Clark, K.C.B., U.D., F.R.A.

Secretary-General, Sir William Williams, C.B.E.

Threadneedle Street, E.C.2

Incorporated in 1694 under Royal Charter, the Bank of England is the central reserve bank of the country and the Government's banker. On behalf of the Government it manages the National Debt, administers the Exchange Control regulations, and manages the Note Issue; the profits on the last named are paid to the Exchequer. It is also the banker of British banks and of most overseas central banks; but it no longer undertakes new commercial business.

As from March 1, 1946, the capital stock, amounting to £14,553,000, was transferred to a nominee of the Treasury (the Treasury Solicitor), under the provisions of the Bank of England Act, 1946, holders receiving in exchange 3 per cent. Treasury Stock, to such an amount as provided them with annual interest equal to the annual gross dividend of the previous 20 years, namely, 12 per cent.

Governor, Cameron Fromanteel Cobbold (*1959).

STERLING BALANCES

The Economic Survey for 1953 stated that one of the main overseas financial commitments of the United Kingdom for the next few years was the reduction of our sterling indebtedness to other countries. However, at the end of 1953 the totals of sterling liabilities both to sterling and non-sterling countries showed an increase over the totals at the end of 1952, and the trend continued during 1954. In 1955, although the balance of payments was in deficit as a result of an adverse balance in the second half of the year, sterling liabilities both to sterling and non-sterling countries fell during the year to about the level at the end of 1953.

About 30 per cent. of the outstanding sterling liabilities are to the colonies and a further 40 per cent. to other sterling area countries. The colonial sterling balances continued to increase up to June 1955, but they suffered a slight decline during the second half of the year. The level of these funds rose by £700,000,000 from the end of 1949 to the end of 1955 as a result of the policies pursued by the colonial territories themselves in taking advantage of a period of favourable export prices to build up reserves.

The colonial sterling balances consist of a wide variety of funds held for convenience in London. The colonies have few independent financial institutions of their own and the London money market is the natural outlet for their surplus funds. The funds take many forms such as cover for colonial governments' pension liabilities and sinking funds; reserves for budgetary purposes and for development; reserves of marketing boards and price assistance funds; and the funds of savings banks, those used as backing for the currency, and those held in London by commercial banks operating in the colonies. At the end of 1955 these funds were held in the following proportions:—

Colonial governments.	40 per cent.
Currency authorities.	30 per cent.
Marketing boards, etc.	10 per cent.
Funds with United Kingdom banks.	20 per cent.

More than one-quarter of the sterling liabilities to the colonies is held in liquid form; cash, Treasury bills or other short-term forms.

The sterling liabilities of the United Kingdom set out in the table below comprise:—

(i) the net liabilities in sterling or sterling area currencies of banks in the United Kingdom (including accepting houses, discount houses and the United Kingdom offices of Commonwealth and foreign banks) to their overseas offices and to other account holders abroad, including any British Government securities held for account of banks;

(ii) funds held for account of the United States Government, for their own use or for help to third countries, originating from the sterling equivalent of dollars made available under United States aid legislation;

(iii) funds held by the Currency Boards and with the Crown Agents for Oversea Governments and Administrations;

(iv) overseas loans to the United Kingdom Government expressed in sterling or sterling area currencies, including the capital value of payments due to the Governments of India and Pakistan under the Pensions Annuities Schemes of 1948; this was £131,000,000 at December 31, 1955, but is likely soon to be reduced by an amount estimated provisionally at £88,000,000, since the United Kingdom Government took over the responsibility for pension payments from the Indian Government as from April 1, 1955;

(v) so far as known, United Kingdom sterling securities held by official bodies but not those held by private individuals or firms.

Registered sterling is included according to the area of residence of the holder. Holdings of Dominion and Colonial sterling securities are excluded.

NOTE ON CIVIL COURTS.—Smaller civil actions are heard locally in County Courts which, with some exceptions, deal with all common law cases where the sum involved is less than £400. Jurisdiction given by special statutes is of the widest range and cases under such statutes are dealt with irrespective of the amount involved. County Courts are presided over by a paid judge sitting alone. The county court for the City of London is the Mayor's and City of London Court, which deals with small cases and has also jurisdiction unlimited

NAVAL AUXILIARY FORCES

R.N.R.—Royal Naval Reserve (Officers and Men). Volunteers at present in the Merchant Navy to serve with the Royal Navy in war. Maximum strength 1955-56, 4,621 all ranks (excluding a reserve of men who served in the Second World War).

R.F.R.—Royal Fleet Reserve (Men). Minimum period of service—5 years, following discharge from regular service. Maximum strength 1955-56, 29,000.

R.N.V.R.—Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (Officers and Men). R.M.F.V.R.—Royal Marines Forces Volunteer Reserve. W.R.N.V.R.—Women's Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

The R.N.V.R. consists of volunteers who train regularly in peace-time for service with the Royal Navy in war. It is organized in 12 divisions, 5 R.N.V.R. Air Divisions and the Royal Naval Volunteer (Wireless) Reserve (specialist officers, radio operators and electricians). Strength 1955-56, 12,145. Total establishment, including Air Squadrons, Wireless Reserve and Postal Reserve, 17,430.

Royal Naval Minewatching Service (R.N.M.W.S.)

The R. N. M. W. S. (civilian volunteers) was formed in 1952. Its role in war would be to man observation points on coasts and overlooking navigable waterways to spot and report mines dropped from aircraft.

SERVICE PAY

Details of the increases in pay of men and women of the regular forces, up to the rank of Capt. (R.N.), Brigadier and Air Commodore, granted in 1950, appeared in Whitaker's Almanack for 1951. Selective increases to reward long service, skill and responsibility were announced in March, 1954. A White Paper published in February, 1956 (Cmd. 9692) gave details of new rates of pay and pensions for all ranks of the three Services (including National Service officers and men) which came into effect on April 1, 1956. The new pay codes include higher pay for longer service engagements. Marriage allowance rates were unchanged.

THE UNION JACK CLUB

Waterloo Road, S.E.1. Tel.: Waterloo 6401.

This is one of our great National Institutions, where Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen can go when on leave or passing through London; a place where they may obtain at moderate charges good meals and comfortable bedrooms and where they find the usual amenities of a club, including Library and Writing Room, Billiards Room, Television, Baths, Barber's Shop, and also a Club Shop in which articles of everyday use and almost everything that Service men require may be purchased. It is open throughout the day and night and has a total accommodation of 940 beds.

The Union Jack Club was erected by public subscription as a National Memorial to those who had fallen in the South African War, and other campaigns, and was opened on July 1st, 1907, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. Membership is open to those below the rank of Officer who are serving on the Active List of the Regular Forces, honorary membership being extended to the Colonial Permanent Forces and to the Navies, Armies and Air Forces of Foreign Powers visiting England. A limited number of ex-Service Warrant Officers, Petty Officers, N.C. Officers and men may also be elected members.

The Club, together with the Union Jack Families Club and Women's Services Club, is managed by a Council and a General Committee, which includes representatives of the members.

THE UNION JACK FAMILIES CLUB

Exton Street, Waterloo Road, S.E.1.

Warden: Miss M. C. Purdy.

This Club was established in 1913, largely as a result of grants made by the South African Garrison Institutes, and provides board and temporary accommodation at moderate rates for the wives and children (with or without their husbands and fathers) of members and ex-members of the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force, below commissioned rank.

THE UNION JACK WOMEN'S SERVICES CLUB

Exton Street, Waterloo Rd., S.E.1. (Opened October, 1952. Adjoins the Families Club.)

All serving W.R.N.S., Q.A.R.A.N.C., W.R.A.C., and W.R.A.F. below commissioned rank are members of this Club which has 44 beds and all facilities of a residential club.

out 15 days training in camp annually. During the remainder of the year units train in the evenings and at week-ends.

THE ARMY EMERGENCY RESERVE

Like the Territorial Army the Army Emergency Reserve consists of volunteers (men and women) and National Service men. It is not, however, organized on a territorial but on a national basis, units drawing men from all over the United Kingdom. Its rôle is to provide units and individuals required overseas in peace-time emergencies, and to provide units and individuals to complete the mobilization order of battle of the Army on the outbreak of war. The majority of units are of a specialist nature. A.E.R. training is 15 days annually.

The Mobile Defence Corps, a part of the A.E.R., has a special rôle; on mobilization it will provide rescue battalions to form the second echelon of Civil Defence.

THE TERRITORIAL ARMY

The Territorial Army consists of volunteers (men and women) and National Service men. National Service men serve for 3½ years after having completed their two years with the Regular Army; they may become, and many do become, volunteers.

The rôle of the Territorial Army on the outbreak of war is to provide, with the Regular Army and the Army Emergency Reserve, a field force wherever required, to provide such anti-aircraft and home defence units as may be required in the United Kingdom, and to support the Civil Defence organization.

The Territorial Army is organised in divisions, independent brigades, etc. in the same way as the Regular Army. It has centres in towns and villages all over the country. Each unit carries

RESERVES ACT, 1954

The Navy, Army and Air Force Reserves Act, 1954, provides that men who served during or immediately after the Second World War and National Service men who have completed their whole-time and part-time service under the National Service Act, 1948-50, shall remain on the reserve. With certain specified exceptions, relating mainly to those who have already served with the Regular Forces or with the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces, these men will be liable until June 30, 1959, or their 45th birthday, whichever is the earlier, to recall for service in the event of a grave emergency. They cannot be called out for training or in aid of the civil power. They may, however, be required to notify their names and addresses and to give particulars of their occupation and qualifications.

RELATIVE RANK—SEA, LAND AND AIR

Officers of the Royal Navy, The Army, and The Royal Air Force rank with one another according to Seniority or Date of Appointment, as shown in the following table. Comparable ranks in the Women's Royal Naval Service and Women's Royal Air Force appear in italics. Compared ranks of the Women's Royal Army Corps are named as for the Army, the Director holding the rank of Brigadier.

THE METEOROLOGICAL OFFICE

Air Ministry, Kingsway, W.C.2

[Temple Bar: 1215]

The Meteorological Office is the State Meteorological Service and forms part of the Air Ministry. The Meteorological Committee of which the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air is Chairman, advises the Secretary of State for Air on matters referred to it concerning the Meteorological Service. Almost all those Government departments, to which the Meteorological Office provides services, are represented on the Committee, and there are also representatives of the Royal Society, the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and British Universities. The general functions of the Meteorological Office are:—Provision of meteorological services to the Army, Royal Air Force, Civil Aviation, Ministry of Supply, the Merchant Navy and Fishing Fleets; liaison with the Naval Weather Service of the Admiralty and provision of basic meteorological information for use by that Service; meteorological services to other Government departments, public corporations, local authorities, the press and the general public; organization of meteorological observations in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and in certain colonies; collection, distribution and publication of meteorological information from all parts of the world; maintenance of certain British observatories, and publication and distribution of magnetic and seismological information obtained from them; research in meteorology and geophysics.

RESERVE AND AUXILIARY FORCES

Royal Air Force Reserve

The Royal Air Force Reserve (including W.R.A.F. Reserve of Officers) consists of officers and men who have served in the regular air force; officers employed on air force duties under special conditions of service; and officers commissioned in ground branches during National Service and transferred to the R.A.F. Reserve of Officers (N.S. List); airmen liable to recall under the Navy, Army and Air Force Reserves Act, 1954 (Class G.); airmen transferred to Class H. of the Reserve for part-time service under the National Service Acts. The Royal Air Force Reserve also includes the Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserve, a pool of officers, airmen and airwomen who train voluntarily on a part-time basis. Strength of the Royal Air Force Reserve, 1956-57, 235,000.

Commandant, Air Commodore J. H. T. Simpson,
D.S.O., A.F.C.

CIVIL DEFENCE

Under the Civil Defence Act, 1948, all necessary steps, short of actual combat, may be taken to afford protection against enemy attack and to mitigate the effects of any such attack. Ministers are by Order in Council made responsible for different functions in the organization and the general responsibility over the whole field of civil defence is that of the Secretary of State for the Home Department whose duty it is to co-ordinate all the Government's civil defence preparations. The Secretary of State for Scotland is similarly responsible for the co-ordination of all civil defence matters in Scotland. Examples of civil defence functions of individual Government Departments are:—

Ministry of Health (in Scotland, the Department of Health for Scotland). Measures to deal with casualties and disease; welfare in shelters.

Ministry of Housing and Local Government (in Scotland, the Department of Health for Scotland). Evacuation of civil population; accommodation of the homeless and refugees; demolition or repair of damaged property; disposal of the dead; maintenance of water supplies and sewerage; public information centres.

Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Provision, storage and distribution of food, animal feeding stuffs and soap; emergency feeding services (in Scotland emergency feeding centres are the responsibility of the Dept. of Health for Scotland).

Ministry of Transport and Civil Aviation. Maintenance of the road system; operation of railways, road transport, canals, docks and merchant shipping. (In Scotland maintenance of the road system will be the responsibility of the Scottish Home Dept. from April 1, 1956.)

Ministry of Fuel and Power. Maintenance of supplies of fuel and power. (In Scotland the Scottish Home Dept. is responsible for the maintenance of electricity supplies.)

As was the case during the Second World War, local authorities have a large responsibility for civil defence, including the following functions:—
Recruitment; organization and training of local divisions of the Civil Defence Corps; Collection of information and the control of civil defence operations; Protection of the public against gas and other toxic agents; Rescue work; Air raid warnings; Issue of instructions and advice to the public; Arrangements for the reception and billeting of official evacuees; Care of the homeless; Information centres for the public; Removal of casualties to hospital; Disposal of the dead; Emergency water supplies and sewerage; War damage repairs.

CIVIL DEFENCE ORGANIZATIONS

Civil Defence Corps

The Civil Defence Corps is a voluntary force whose duty it is to assist local and other authorities in Great Britain to discharge their civil defence functions. It is organized in Local Divisions and by local authorities.

LOCAL DIVISIONS.—Composed in peace-time of men and women who have volunteered to undergo civil defence training in their spare time. In England and Wales each Division has five sections.

- (1) Headquarters: Organized in sub-sections for
 - (a) Control and communications, and
 - (b) Reconnaissance.
- (2) Warden Section: Organized in most areas by the Chief Constable, its main duties are: Assistance and advice to the public; Reconnaissance and reporting; Control of operations; Supplementary air raid warnings; Organization of street parties.
- (3) Rescue Section: Composed of a number of Rescue Parties, each of eight men trained in rescue work and first aid.
- (4) Ambulance and Casualty Collecting Section: Built up on the normal peace-time ambulance service provided by county and county borough councils, its duties in war-time include maintenance of the normal ambulance service and removal of war casualties to hospitals and other centres for treatment. Members of the Casualty Collecting Service will be specially trained for stretcher-bearing and first-aid duties.
- (5) Welfare Section: To assist the local authority in matters such as Evacuation, Reception, Billeting, Care of homeless, Welfare in shelters, Emergency Feeding and Information Services for the public.

Scotland.—Local Divisions are composed of four sections, i.e. excluding the Ambulance Casualty Collection Section. The duties of casualty collection fall to the Warden Section and the additional manpower for the civil defence requirements of the Scottish Ambulance Service come from the National Hospital Service Reserve, not the Civil Defence Corps.

London.—Divisions organized by Metropolitan boroughs consist of three sections, (1) Headquarters, (2) Warden Section, (3) Welfare Section. Divisions organized by London County Council are (1) Rescue Section, (2) Ambulance Section (3) Welfare Section. Allocation of duties to the respective Welfare Sections follows broadly the separate peace-time functions of the L.C.C. and the London boroughs.

INDUSTRIAL CIVIL DEFENCE SERVICE.—To supplement the Civil Defence Corps the larger employers of labour in the country have been invited to form units of the Industrial Civil Defence Service in their premises. Each unit comprises Headquarters, Warden, Rescue and First Aid Sections having much the same responsibilities as the corresponding section of the Corps. It is intended that the Industrial Civil Defence Service should operate in the closest association with the Civil Defence Corps and the other public civil defence services.

MOBILE DEFENCE CORPS.—To provide the necessary link between the local civil defence forces and the armed forces the Government has decided to establish a Mobile Defence Corps specially trained in, and equipped for, fire-fighting and ambulance duties. Initially the aim will be to build up during the next three or four years a force of 48 reserve battalions—made up of men from the Army and the R.A.F.—each with a minimum strength of about 600.

Special training depots will be opened to provide about 10,000 men with a month's whole-time training in them each year. On completion of their active service these men will be posted to reserve battalions as near as possible to their homes. They will carry out their 15 days' annual reserve training with their battalion. The general responsibility for the new corps will rest with the War Office, but certain training depots and battalions will be manned by the R.A.F.

TRAINING.—Members of the Civil Defence Corps are required to undertake the training necessary to enable them to carry out the duties of an ordinary member of one of the five sections of the Corps. This training is known as "standard training." When a volunteer has completed this stage, he may, if he wishes, and is considered suitable, be given further training—known as "advanced training"—either to qualify him for more responsible duties or to enable him to carry out some of the other tasks of his section. All members of the Corps who have completed standard training, or any advanced training for which they volunteered, are required to attend for a few hours refresher training each year and to take part in exercises. Similar arrangements apply to the Industrial Civil Defence Service.

Civil Defence instructors are trained either at one of three central training schools or locally, under arrangements made by local authorities in accordance with directions given by the Home Office or Scottish Home Department. Courses and studies for senior officials concerned with civil defence (see page 388) are held at the Civil Defence Staff College.

Police

Responsibilities of the police force in time of war include matters such as lighting restrictions, guarding of key points, control of the homeless, etc., in addition to the maintenance of law and order.

By virtue of regulations made under the Special Constables Acts, 1914 and 1923, special constables may be appointed at any time for the preservation of the public peace and for the protection of the inhabitants and the security of property in a police district. The assistance thus afforded to the regular force is of particular value in times of war. On May 31, 1956, the number of special constables enrolled was: England and Wales, Men, 56,694; Women, 962. Scotland, Men, 8,314; Women, 152.

Fire Service

The Auxiliary Fire Service was re-established under the provisions of the Civil Defence Act, 1948, and is organized by the local fire brigades on a voluntary basis. In the event of war the Fire Service would again be organized on a national basis.

National Health Service

Regional Hospital Boards are responsible for provision of hospital treatment of air raid casualties, first aid services and cleansing services for contaminated casualties, including both static posts and mobile units based on selected hospitals.

National Hospital Service Reserve.—Provides a reserve of trained nurses and nursing auxiliaries to reinforce the nursing staffs of hospitals and to provide the requisite staff for first aid units in war-time. Trained nurses are recruited by the hospital authorities and are required in peace-time to give at least 48 hours service a year in hospitals. Nursing auxiliaries are trained by the St. John Ambulance Brigade or British Red Cross Society, followed by a short period of training in hospital nursing and are then required to give a minimum of 48 hours a year hospital service in peace-time.

Strengths of Civil Defence Organizations

	June, 1955	May, 1956
Civil Defence Corps	338,366	330,351
Auxiliary Fire Service	20,314	19,592
National Hospital Service Reserve	41,790	43,581
Industrial Civil Defence Service (December)	175,580	206,026

Regional Directors

Regional Directors were appointed by the Home Secretary on August 16, 1955, to co-ordinate all civil defence activities in the regions. They are responsible for planning training exercises, including combined exercises between the Armed Services and local civil defence divisions.

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND is Presbyterian in constitution, and is governed by Kirk Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and the General Assembly, which consists of both clerical and lay representatives from each of the Presbyteries. It is presided over by a Moderator (chosen annually by the Assembly), to whom Her Majesty the Queen has granted precedence in Scotland, during his term of office, next after the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain. The Sovereign is represented by a Lord High Commissioner (appointed each year by the Crown), who receives the sum of £4,000 towards his expenses. The country, for Church purposes, was, before the union of the Church of Scotland with the United Free Church of Scotland, which was effected at a joint meeting of the General Assemblies of both Churches on October 2, 1929, divided into 16 Synods and 66 Presbyteries, and there were about 2,600 ministers and licentiates engaged in ministerial and other work. There have since been added: (1) The Presbytery of England and (2) The Presbyteries of (a) Northern Europe, (b) Southern Europe, (c) Spain and Portugal, (d) a number of Indian and Colonial Presbyteries, making 82 in all. The figures at Dec. 31, 1955, applicable to the Church of Scotland as now re-united after a century of separation are:—

Congregations, 2,289; total membership 1,307,573; Sunday Schools, 2,873, with 316,769 scholars and 42,103 teachers. In 17 Foreign Mission fields, there are 310 European Mission areas (and in addition 146 missionaries' wives, many of whom are doing mission work in the various fields) and 15,104 nationals, evangelists and teachers, including in both cases those of the Women's Foreign Mission.

In 1560 the Scots Parliament abolished the jurisdiction of the Pope, proscribed the Mass, and ratified a Confession of Faith drawn up by John Knox and others. In all essentials the articles of the ancient creeds of the Church were adhered to. Ceremonies were declared to be temporary in their nature, and should be altered when they began to foster superstition. Presbyterianism was settled in 1590. The restoration of the rights of the Bishops, civil and ecclesiastical, was, however, sanctioned by the General Assembly of 1610, and three Scottish Bishops were in that year consecrated in London. Further innovations by King James VI. alarmed the people, and the attempt of Charles I. to impose on the Church a Book of Canons and a Liturgy was met by the National Covenant and the restoration of Presbyterian forms, which culminated in the Westminster Confession of Faith in 1646. At the Restoration the Church again became Episcopal, but in 1690 the Scottish Parliament re-established Presbyterianism. By the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland (ratified by the English Parliament 6 Anne c. 11.) the Church of Scotland was secured in its Presbyterian form of government, and the very first official act of a sovereign of the British Empire on his or her accession is to take an oath to maintain inviolably this settlement. In 1921 Parliament passed the Church of Scotland Act, 1921, to declare the lawfulness of certain Articles declaratory of the constitution of the Church of Scotland. These Articles were framed with a view to facilitating the union of other Churches with the Church of Scotland. A committee, appointed by the Secretary for Scotland enquired into the question of endowments, following upon which the Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments Bill) was introduced and was passed into law (15 and 16 Geo. V. c. 33) in 1925. The primary purpose of this legislative measure was to transfer to and vest in the Church of Scotland General Trustees, incorporated under the Church of Scotland (General Trustees) Order Confirmation Act, 1921, the whole properties and endowments belonging to the Church as it then existed, for behoof the latter. Further legislation with reference to these was embodied in The Church of Scotland Trust Order Confirmation Act, 1932, and The Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments) Amendment Act, 1933.

The total amount of Christian Liberty received by Parishes and Charges in 1954 was £3,352,806.

GENERAL SYNOD

Consisting of House of Bishops (14) and House of Representatives (viz., 208 clerical and 416 lay).

Honorary Secretaries, Ven. H. W. Rennison, M.A.; Rev. Canon R. G. F. Jenkins, B.D.;

J. D. Smyth; C. G. Carson

Chief Officer and Secretary to the REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH BODY (INCORPORATED 1870), D. W. Pratt, 52 St. Stephen's Green E., Dublin; Deputy Chief Officer and Accountant, D. M. Hudson.

Asst. Sec., E. Taylor.

By the Act of Union, 1800, the Church of Ireland was united with the Church of England, the Sovereign, as one of its members, being supreme governor on earth. By the Act of 1869 this union was severed, and on Jan. 1, 1871, the Church of Ireland resumed her independent position. The Act of 1869 not only disestablished the Irish Church, but also took away her endowments, nothing being left but the right to the life services of the annuitant Bishops and Clergy (the annuities provided were commuted for a capital sum), the right to claim churches in use for divine service, the right to buy the See and Glebe Houses (with garden and curtilage), and £500,000 in lieu of private endowments.

The supreme governing body of the Church of Ireland is the GENERAL SYNOD, which meets annually.

Subject to the GENERAL SYNOD are 21 Diocesan Synods, which are assisted by smaller elected bodies called Diocesan Councils.

The Bishop of the Diocese is chosen by the clerical and lay members of the Diocesan Synod. The Primate is chosen by the House of Bishops from amongst their own number.

The incumbent of the Parish is appointed by a Board of Nomination, consisting of 7 persons, viz.:—The Bishop, 3 diocesan nominators (2 clerical and 1 lay) appointed by the Diocesan Synod, and 3 parochial nominators (lay) appointed by the registered vestrymen of the parish.

The financial trustees of the Church are the REPRESENTATIVE BODY, composed of the Archbishops and Bishops, 14 clergymen and 28 laymen, chosen by the Diocesan Synods, with 14 co-opted members (clerical or lay). This body holds the property of the Church, and administers its funds, subject to the General Synod.

The first property it held was the capital sum £7,581,075, representing the life annuities of the Bishops and Clergy paid over as commutation money by the Church Commissioners, and also £500,000 compensation for private endowments. The funds, however, in the custody of the Representative Body amount in all to £13,508,733, made up of Parochial Sustentation £9,978,599, General Synod Funds £842,872, Miscellaneous purposes £2,782,364.

Since 1869 members of the Church have paid in to the Representative Body a total sum of £15,290,485. The interest of the Diocesan and Parochial Sustentation and other Funds is approximately £470,535.

THE METHODIST CHURCH

UNDER the general designation of METHODISTS are included all those religious bodies which owe their existence, directly or indirectly, to the efforts of the Revd. John Wesley (born June 17, 1703; died March 2, 1791) and his brother, Revd. Charles Wesley (born Dec. 18, 1707; died March 29, 1788).

THE METHODIST CHURCH

On September 20, 1932, the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Primitive Methodist Church and the United Methodist Church, were united and became "The Methodist Church."

The Methodist Church is governed primarily by the Conference, secondarily by the Synods (held in September and May), consisting of all the ministers and of selected laymen in each district, over which a chairman is appointed by the Conference; and thirdly by quarterly meetings of the ministers and lay officers of each circuit. The authority of both Synods and Quarterly Meetings is subordinate to the Conference, which has the supreme legislative and judicial power in Methodism.

President of the Conference (July, 1956-57), Rev. H. C. Walters (Preston).

Vice-President of the Conference (July, 1956-57), D. P. Blatherwick, O.B.E. (Newark).

Secretary of the Conference, Rev. E. W. Baker, M.A., Ph.D., 1 Central Buildings, Westminster, S.W.1.

President Designate (1957-58), Rev. H. Roberts, M.A., Ph.D. (Richmond).

Vice-President Designate (1957-58), P. H. Race (Lincoln).

Statistics.—In 1956 in association with the Conference in Great Britain and Ireland (at home and abroad) there were 5,129 Ministers, 40,167 Local Preachers, 1,103,471 Members and Probationers, 17,625 Churches, 13,630 Sunday Schools, 139,922 Sunday School Officers and Teachers, and 973,844 Sunday Scholars.

The World Methodist Council, founded 1881, re-organized 1951, associates Methodism throughout the world in 82 countries. President, Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, U.S.A. Vice-President, Rev. Dr. Harold Roberts, England. Secretaries, Rev. E. Benson Perkins, 38 Belle Walk, Birmingham, 13; Rev. Dr. Elmer Clark, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York. The statistics of world Methodism are: members and probationers, 17,500,000; churches and preaching places, 99,500; ministers, 60,500; local preachers, 83,000; Sunday schools, 76,400; officers and teachers, 825,000; scholars, 8,200,000.

The Methodist Church was founded in 1739 by the two brothers Wesley and rapidly spread throughout the British Isles and to America before 1770. The Methodist Church in Great Britain was united in 1932 by the fusion of the Wesleyan Methodist Church which was the original section, the Primitive Methodist Church which arose through the evangelists Hugh Bourne and William Clowes in 1810 and the United Methodist Church, itself a fusion in 1907 of the Methodist New Connexion which dated from 1797. The Bible Christian Methodist Church dates from 1815 and the United Methodist Free Churches which originated in controversies in 1828 and 1849. The Methodist Church of America was formed by a union of three great Methodist denominations in 1939. Australasia, New Zealand and South Africa are separate autonomous Methodist Churches, and other branches throughout the world have originated from the Methodist Church either in Great Britain or in America.

METHODIST CHURCH IN IRELAND

The Methodist Church in Ireland has 262 Ministers, 453 Lay Preachers, 32,386 Adult and 16,599 Junior Members, 2,076 Sunday School Teachers and 15,886 Scholars.

President (1956-57), Rev. S. E. McCaffrey, Terenure, Dublin.

Secretary, Rev. R. S. Morris, M.A., 9 Sandy-mount Green, Dublin.

THE UNITED CHURCH OF CANADA

The United Church of Canada is the result of the union (1925) of Methodists, Presbyterian and Congregational Churches in Canada. Sec. of General Council, Rev. Ernest E. Long, B.A., B.D., D.D., Wesley Buildings, Toronto.

INDEPENDENT METHODISTS

Independent Methodists.—This body is Congregational in its organization, with an unpaid Ministry. Its first Conference was held in 1805. In 1956 there were in Great Britain 308 Ministers, 8,727 Members, 152 Chapels and 13,064 Sunday School Scholars. Secretary, W. Drummond Brown, 21 Ashley Drive, Swinton, Lancs.

WESLEYAN REFORM UNION

This Union is Methodist in doctrine, Congregational in government, with, if any church desires it, a paid ministry. It is the remnant of the original Reformers expelled from Wesleyan Methodism in 1849. The adherents are mainly in the Midland and Northern counties. In 1954 there were in Great Britain 20 Ministers, 329 Lay Preachers, 6,204 Members, 175 Chapels and 13,189 Sunday Scholars. President (1956-57), P. Johnson. President Designate, E. G. Nagle. General Secretary and Connexional Editor, Rev. A. Halladay, Wesleyan Reform Church House, 87-89 West Bar, Sheffield, 3.

THE CALVINISTIC METHODIST CHURCH OF WALES

The CALVINISTIC METHODIST OR PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF WALES is the only Church of purely Welsh origin, and embraces a very large section of the Welsh-speaking population. Its form of government being Presbyterian, it is a constituent of the Pan-Presbyterian Council or Alliance. It is also a member of the British Council of Churches and the World Council of Churches. It has foreign missions in Assam, India, and in Brittany.

In 1955 the body numbered—churches, 1,436; chapels and other buildings for Sunday-school branches, 1,610; ministers and preachers, 835; elders, 7,384; communicants, 150,071; Sunday-school teachers and officers, 12,918; Sunday-school scholars, 89,564; adherents (including communicants), 204,101. Contributions for various religious purposes (including the ministry), £758,973.

One of the features of the Welsh churches is the Sunday-school, which is attended by adults as well as children; Welsh is the language used generally in these schools.

The Eastern Association, which now includes nine of the English Presbyteries, was formed in 1947 and has 356 chapels and 28,840 communicants.

On 18 July, 1933, the Calvinistic Methodist or Presbyterian Church of Wales Act, 1933, received the Royal Assent. By this measure the autonomy of the Church in matters spiritual and the establishment of a Properties Board have been secured.

Moderators of Associations (1956)—South Wales, Rev. D. J. Jones, M.A., Morriston; North Wales, Rev. G. Williams, B.A., Bangor, The East, Rev. D. W. Lewis, M.A., Bridgend.

Moderator of General Assembly (1956-57), Rev. C. L. Williams, B.A., Liverpool.

Chief Secretary, Rev. H. R. Williams, B.A., Dolgaer, Gaeerwen, Anglesey.

THE INDEPENDENTS AND THE BAPTISTS

The INDEPENDENTS, or CONGREGATIONALISTS, are the most ancient community of Dissenters. In 1831 the majority of their churches were formed into the Congregational Union of England and Wales, incorporated in 1902, and in 1920 nine districts were formed, each under a Moderator. There are 51 county and other Associations in the British Isles, with 3,065 churches and preaching stations; the number of ministers in the British Isles is 2,524. Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales (1956-57), Rev. Elsie Chamberlain, B.D. Chairman-Elect (1957-58), Rev. H. Cunliffe-Jones, B.A., B.Litt., D.D. Secretary, Rev. H. S. Stanley, M.A. Office and Publication Department, Memorial Hall, Farringdon Street, E.C.4.

The Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, with 37 chapels and mission stations, is governed by nine trustees assisted by an annual conference of ministers and delegates. Most of the churches are affiliated with the Congregational Union.

Secretary, B. Touch. Offices, Huntingdon Lodge, Wormley, Herts.

THE CONGREGATIONAL UNION OF SCOTLAND. In 1795 James and Robert Haldane left the Church of Scotland and founded the Congregational Union, which in 1806 amalgamated with the Evangelical Union (founded in 1843 by James Morison). There are 150 Churches of the Congregational Union of Scotland with a membership of 35,190. Of the 169 Ministers, 133 are Pastors. President, Rev. A. Morton Price, M.A., B.D., Perth. Secretary, Rev. James M. Calder, 217 West George Street, Glasgow, C.2.

THE BAPTISTS have over 20,000,000 members in all countries. Like the Congregationalists, they are for the most part grouped in associations of churches, and the majority of these belong to the Baptist Union, which was formed in 1813. In the British Isles there were, in 1955, 1,989 pastors. The members numbered 326,633, Sunday-school teachers 44,292, and Sunday scholars 325,786. President of the Baptist Union (1956-57), Sir Herbert James. Secretary, Rev. E. A. Payne, M.A., D.D. Office, 4 Southampton Row, W.C.1.

The Baptist World Alliance (founded in 1905) is a Federation of Conventions and Unions of the Baptist communion throughout the world. Pres., Rev. T. F. Adams, D.D. General Secretary, Rev. A. T. Ohn, D.D., Assoc. Sec., Rev. Henry Cook, M.A., D.D. Headquarters, Washington, D.C. London Office, 4 Southampton Row, W.C.1.

Other Religious Denominations.

The General Assembly of Unitarian and Free Christian Churches has about 243 ministers, 330 chapels and other places of worship in Great Britain and Ireland. Gen. Sec., Rev. John Kieley, 15 Gordon Square, W.C.1.

The Brethren number about 80,000, of whom five-eighths belong to the "Open" body. The Society of Friends (Quakers) consists of 21,343 members in Great Britain, and has 433 places of worship (Recording Clerk, Stephen J. Thorne). The total number in the world is about 160,000 (120,000 are in U.S.A. and Canada). Central Offices (Great Britain), Friends' House, Euston Road, N.W.1, (Ireland), 6 Eustace Street, Dublin. The Oxford Group ("Moral Re-Armament") (Dr. F. N. D. Buchman), Hqrs., 4 Hays Mews, Berkeley Square, W.1. The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, U.S.A. (District Manager, Committees on Publication for Great Britain and Ireland, 30 Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C.2), has 349 branch churches and societies in Great Britain and Ireland. The Moravian Church, 42 Onslow Gardens, N.10, has in the U.K. 41 congregations and preaching stations, with 2,933 communicants. The New Church (Swedenborgian), 75 societies, with about 6,700 registered members; the Latter-Day Saints (Mormons) have 65 churches. The Churches of Christ have 165 churches in Gt. Britain and Northern Ireland. The Free Church of England (otherwise called The Reformed Episcopal Church) has 50 churches in England. Gen. Sec., Rev. W. Rodgers, 3 Bristol Avenue, Wallasey, Cheshire. The Seventh Day Adventists (Hqrs., Stanborough Park, Watford, Herts) have 113 organized churches, 52 companies, and 7,813 members in the British Isles. At Woking, Surrey, is the Shah Jehan Mosque for Muslims, built in 1889. There are also Mosques at Southfields, S.W.18, Commercial Road, E.1, Birmingham, Manchester, Cardiff and Glasgow. A Mosque is to be erected in the garden of Regent's Park Lodge, Park Road, Regent's Park, on land presented to the Muslim community by the British Government.

THE JEWS

It is estimated that about 400,000 Jews are resident in the British Isles, a little more than half being domiciled in London. The Diaspora (Dispersion) foretold by the prophet Daniel began towards the end of the third century preceding the Christian Era, but there was no appreciable settlement in England until after the Norman Conquest and the anti-Jewish reaction resulting from the Crusades led to their expulsion by edict of Edward I in 1290, the exclusion being maintained until after the Whitehall Conference called by Oliver Cromwell in 1655. Since that date there has been a steady flow of Jewish immigrants, increased during the present century owing to Nazi persecution. Of the total number in Great Britain about 90 per cent. are described as adhering to orthodox views.

The Board of Deputies of British Jews, established in 1760, is the representative body of British Jewry and is recognized by H.M. Government. The basis of representation is primarily synagogal, but secular organizations are now also represented. It is a deliberative body and its objects are to watch over the interests of British Jewry, to protect Jews against any disability which they may suffer by reason of their creed and to take such action as may be conducive to their welfare.

President of the Board of Deputies (Woburn House, Upper Woburn Place, W.C.1), Barnett Janner, M.P. Secretary, A. G. Brotman.

CHIEF RABBI—The Very Rev. Israel Brodie, born 1895, appointed 1948.

Secretary, Michael Wallach, Office, 4 Creechurch Place, E.C.4.

The Beth Din (Court of Judgment) is a rabbinic body consisting of Dayanim (Assessors) and the Chief Rabbi, who is President of the Court. The Court arbitrates when requested in cases between Jew and Jew and gives decisions on religious questions. The decisions are based on Jewish Law and practice and do not conflict with the law of the land. Dayanim, L. Grossnass; A. Rapaport; Dr. M. Lew; M. Steinberg.

Clerk to the Court, Marcus Carr (Adler House, Adler Street, E.1)

Chief Rabbi of the Community of Spanish and Portuguese Jews in London (Established 1657), Dr. Solomon Gaon.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

HIS HOLINESS POPE PIUS XII (Eugenio Pacelli), Roman Pontiff, born in Rome, March 2, 1876; ordained priest April 2, 1899; Archbishop of Sardinia May 13, 1917; Cardinal December 16, 1929; Papal Secretary of State February 7, 1930; elected Pope March 2, 1939; crowned March 12, 1939.

THE SACRED COLLEGE OF CARDINALS, when complete, consists of six Cardinal Bishops, fifty Cardinal Priests and fourteen Cardinal Deacons. In August, 1956, there were nine vacancies. The Cardinals are the advisers and assistants of the Sovereign Pontiff and form the supreme council or Senate of the Church. On the death of the Pope they elect his successor. The assembly of the Cardinals at the Vatican for the election of a new Pope is known as the Conclave in which, in complete seclusion, the Cardinals elect by secret ballot; a two-thirds majority is necessary before the vote can be accepted as final. When a Cardinal receives the necessary votes the Dean of the Sacred College formally asks him if he will accept election and the name by which he wishes to be known. On his acceptance of the office the Conclave is dissolved and the First Cardinal Deacon announces the election to the assembled crowd in St. Peter's Square. On the first Sunday or Holyday following the election the new Pope is crowned with the tiara, the triple crown, the symbol of his supreme spiritual authority. A new pontificate is dated from the coronation.

In England and Wales there are 5 Archiepiscopal and 13 Episcopal Sees; in Scotland 2 Archiepiscopal and 6 Episcopal Sees; in Ireland 4 Archiepiscopal and 24 Episcopal Sees. In the British Commonwealth and Republic of Ireland there are 66 Archiepiscopal and 234 Episcopal Sees, with 36 Vicariates and 25 Prefectures.

The Catholic Directory estimates the Roman Catholic population of England and Wales at 3,148,500, Scotland (1956) 768,420, Republic of Ireland (1955) 2,786,033, Northern Ireland (1956) 476,350. The figures for Canada (1956) are 6,260,546, Australian Commonwealth (1955) 1,554,372, New Zealand (1955) 255,199, Union of South Africa (1956) 674,589, India (1955) 4,976,194 (including Goa), Pakistan (1955) 241,822, Ceylon (1956) 651,586; and the Roman Catholic population of the world is estimated at 423,000,000.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, City of London, E.C.4 (1675-1710), cost £747,660. The cross on the dome is 365 ft. above the ground level, the inner cupola 218 ft. above the floor. "Great Paul," in S.W. tower, weighs 17 tons. Organ by Father Smith (enlarged by Willis) in case carved by Grinling Gibbons (who also carved the choir stalls). Nave and transepts free; Fees to the following parts (on weekdays only, 11 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. and—during Summer time—4.45 p.m. to 5.30 p.m.); Crypt, 6d. Library, whispering gallery, and stone gallery, 1s. golden gallery, 1s.; ball, 1s.; total, 3s. 6d. Service on Sundays at 8, 10.30, 12.15, and 6.30. Weekdays at 8, 10, 12.4. Also Wednesdays, 12.30 p.m., Litany; Fridays, 12.30 p.m. short mid-day service. (*Services are choral.) To the S. are remains of the Chapter House and Cloisters of "Old St. Paul's," destroyed by the Fire of London in 1666.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY, S.W.1 (built A.D. 1050-1760).—Open on weekdays at 8 a.m. Admission to Royal Chapels by fee of 1s., except on Mondays (open free). Transepts and Nave open on Sundays only between services. Holy Communion at 8; matins at 10.30; Holy Communion at 11.30. Evensong at 3. Evening service with Sermon at 6.30; Daily—Holy Communion at 8 a.m.; School Service at 9 a.m.; matins, 10 a.m.; evensong (choral), 5.0 p.m. (Saturday, 3 p.m.). Chapel of Henry VII, Chapter House and Cloisters; King Edward the Confessor's shrine, A.D. 1269, tombs of kings (Edward I, Edward III, Henry V, Mary, Queen of Scots, Queen Elizabeth), and many other monuments and objects of interest, including the grave of "An Unknown Warrior" and St. George's Chapel at the W. end of Nave (1920), and Poet's Corner. The Coronation Chair encloses the "Stone of Scone," brought from Scotland by Edward I in 1297.

SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL, south side of the Thames, near London Bridge, S.E.1.—Mainly 13th century, but the nave is largely rebuilt. Known as St. Mary Overie previous to 1540. Open 7.30 a.m. to 6 p.m., free. Sunday services, 8 (said), 9 (Parish Communion), 10.15, and 11 a.m., 3 and 6.30 p.m. (choral). Weekdays: 7.30, 8, and 5.15 p.m. (choral except Wednesdays) 5 p.m. (on Saturdays). The tomb of John Gower (1330-1408) is between the Bunyan and Chaucer memorial windows, in the N. aisle; Shakespeare effigy backed by view of Southwark and Globe Theatre in S. aisle; the altar screen (erected 1540) has been restored; the tomb of Bishop Andrews (died 1646) is near screen. The Early English Lady Chapel (behind the choir), restored 1930, is the scene of the Consistory Courts of the reign of Mary (Gardiner and Bonner); and is still used for this purpose. John Harvard, founder of Harvard University, was baptised here in 1607.

ALL SAINTS, Margaret Street, W.2.—Built by Butterfield in 1859. Anglo-Catholic and noted for its music.

ST. ANDREW UNDERSHAFT, St. Mary Axe, Leadenhall Street, E.C.3.—An early 16th-century church, contains a monument of Stow, the London antiquary (a new quill-pen being placed in his hand at an annual Commemoration Service), and a memorial of Holbein. The organ is by Renatus Harris, the rival of Father Smith.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S Priory Church, Smithfield, E.C.1, the oldest parish church in London (A.D. 1123).—Rector, Rev. N. E. Wallbank, M.S.D. Fine old Norman building, with tomb of the first prior, Rahere. N. transept restored and re-opened in June, 1893. Crypt, Lady Chapel and Cloisters opened 1905-1928. Open daily. Sunday services 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m.

ST. EDMUND, KING AND MARTYR, Lombard Street, E.C.3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with altar at north end; organ by Renatus Harris.

ST. ETHELBURGA, Bishopsgate, E.C.2 (14th and 15th century) with two "Hudson" windows.—On April 19, 1607, Henry Hudson (the navigator who gave his name to Hudson's Bay and to the Hudson River), his son John, and his ten sailors took communion in St. Ethelburga's, "purposing to goe to sea four days after."

ST. GEORGE, Hanover Square, W.1 (18th century; famous for fashionable marriages).

ST. GEORGE, Borough High Street, Southwark, S.E.—(Rebuilt 1736) contains the tombs of Bishop Bonner (1497-1569) and Edward Cocker (1631-1675), the author of Cocker's "Arithmetick." (The expression "according to Cocker" refers to this book.)

ST. HELEN, Bishopsgate, E.C.2.—The "Westminster Abbey of the City" from its numerous monuments; building dates from 13th century. Contains a Shakespeare memorial window presented by Mr. William Prentice, an American. In St. Helen's Place the foundations of an earlier church were uncovered during rebuilding operations in 1922.

ST. KATHERINE CREE, Leadenhall Street, E.C.3.—Rebuilt in early 17th century and ascribed to Inigo Jones. Contains a Catherine wheel E. window, an organ by Father Smith, Archbishop Laud's Prayer Book and Bible, and a monument of Sir Nicholas Throgmorton.

ST. MAGNUS THE MARTYR, Lower Thames Street, E.C.3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with steeple (185 feet) and lantern of great beauty, contains the tomb of Miles Coverdale (1488-1568), translator of the Bible, who was rector of St. Magnus (1564-1566) and Bishop of Exeter (1551-1557).

ST. MARGARET, Lothbury, E.C.2.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains Grinling Gibbons carvings (font, chancel screen, and pulpit).

ST. MARGARET PATTERNS, Rood Lane, Eastcheap, E.C.3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with a leaden spire, contains two canopied pews and other curious survivals and relics.

ST. MARGARET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.1.—Founded 11th or 12th century; buildings date from 15th century, with frequent "restorations." Since 1614 the parish church of the House of Commons.

ST. MARTIN-IN-THE-FIELDS, Trafalgar Square, S.W.1.—Built by James Gibbs (1721-6) in place of earlier church on same site. In register of burials are the names of Nell Gwynne (1687), Farquhar the dramatist (1707), and Roubiliac the sculptor (1672). A bust of James Gibbs by Rysbrack is in the church. Famous for its broadcast services.

ST. MARY WOOLNETH (above the Bank Tube Station), King William Street and Lombard Street, E.C.3.—Built by Hawksmoor early 18th century; organ by Father Smith.

ST. MICHAEL, PATERNOSTER ROYAL, College Hill, Upper Thames Street, E.C.4.—Rebuilt after the Fire by Strong (a pupil of Wren's), the former church contained the tomb of "Dick Whittington" and a Grinling Gibbons altarpiece.

ST. PAUL, Covent Garden, W.C.2.—Built by Inigo Jones. The tombstones round the exterior of the church record the burial places of Samuel Butler (Hudibras), Sir Peter Lely (painter), Wycherley (dramatist), Grinling Gibbons (wood-carver), Dr. Arne ("Rule, Britannia"), and Macklin (actor); Ellen Terry memorial.

ST. PETER, Cornhill, E.C.3.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains a carved choir screen also ascribed to him. The organ is by Father Smith.

ST. SEPULCHRE, Holborn, E.C.1.—Part of this church escaped the Fire. The organ is by Renatus Harris, in a case attributed to Grinling Gibbons. Memorials in the church to Roger Ascham (Queen Elizabeth's tutor) and Capt. John Smith, "some-time Governour of Virginia and Admirall of New England."

ST. STEPHEN, Walbrook, E.C.4.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains the tomb of Sir John Vanbrugh (architect and dramatist). Although it was much damaged by bombs, 1940-1, repairs have been carried out and it remains open.

SAVOY CHAPEL, Savoy Street, Strand, W.C.2 (rebuilt about 1505, on site of 13th-century Savoy Palace, restored after disastrous fire in 1864).—Graves of Gavin Douglas and George Withering, and memorials of D'Oyly Carte, Laurence Irving.

TEMPLE CHURCH, The Temple, E.C.4.—The nave formed one of five remaining round churches in England, the others being at Cambridge, Northampton, Little Maplestead (Essex), and Ludlow Castle. Rebuilding of the church is in progress, and the choir, re-dedicated by the Archbishop of Canterbury in March, 1954, is again open for worship. Sunday morning services, 11.15 a.m.

Master of the Temple, Rev. Canon J. D'E. E. Firth, M.A.

Education

ENGLAND AND WALES

Education in England and Wales is organized under the Education Act, 1944 (Butler Act). Minor amending Acts were passed in 1946, 1948 and 1953. The main features of the system are (a) that the State school system is highly decentralized, education being the responsibility of 146 local education authorities (61 administrative counties, 83 county boroughs and 2 joint board and London). The County Authorities exercise their powers in many instances through Divisional Executive Committees and the Education Committees of excepted Districts; (b) that voluntary agencies play an important part in educational provision often in co-operation with the State. The Ministry of Education controls the system mainly through the scheme of inspection and with power derived from statute and from its payment of money grants to Local Education Authorities. Constant detailed suggestions to L.E.A.'s, are issued in Ministry circulars and administrative memoranda. There are central advisory councils dealing with education in England and in Wales respectively.

A statutory report is published yearly by the Ministry.

The State System

The state system is in transition as the 1944 Act is being implemented. The administrative system has been reorganized and the school-leaving age raised (April 1, 1947) to 15. Attention has been given to the development of special schools and the school meals service, but the major problem at present is the provision of teachers and accommodation for the increased number of children at school between 1952 and 1962 (more than one million more children than in 1947 were in the schools in 1954). Special attention is also being paid to the development of technical education; greatly expanded building plans were drawn up during 1956 and a National Council for Technological Awards established.

Local Authorities are required by the Act to prepare development plans for education in their areas (including school reorganization and necessary building), and this work is nearing completion. Plans approved become binding upon L.E.A.'s. A total of £124,000,000 of building work was under construction at the end of 1955, £307,000,000 having been completed since December, 1945. 2,703 new primary and secondary departments were completed between April 1945 and October 1955.

Education is envisaged in the 1944 Act in three stages:—

Primary Stage (for children up to 11 years). Nursery Schools to age 5 (must be provided by Local Education Authority for all parents who desire them); Infant Schools—from age 5 (compulsory school age); Junior Schools—from age 8 to 11.

About the age of 11 all children are to go to a secondary school. The suitability of the school may be reviewed at age 13.

Secondary Stage (11 years to 15 years, later to be raised to 16)—Secondary Grammar Schools (giving an academic education); Secondary Technical Schools (for those whose abilities are of a more practical character). Secondary Modern Schools (giving a general and practical education).

These Secondary Schools are intended to be of equal status and can be combined into a single multi-lateral school. Education in Primary and Secondary Schools is free.

Pupils in Secondary Schools may sit for the examinations leading to the award of the General

Certificate of Education (G.C.E.). The nine examining bodies set papers at three levels, ordinary, advanced and scholarship. Entrance to the Universities and to many courses of professional training depends on the results in these examinations. The total number of candidates at the 1955 summer examination was 265,261.

Further Stage. [Includes all types of provision for education after 15 (later 16).] County Colleges (which, when established, all children not receiving full-time education will attend for the equivalent of one day a week from age 15 (later 16) to age 16 (later to be raised to 18)); Technical Schools and Schools of Art and Commerce (providing specialist studies); Evening Institutes (evening classes in vocational and other subjects); Service of youth (recreational and other services for youth provided in co-operation with voluntary bodies); Adult Education (liberal education for adults provided in co-operation with voluntary bodies); Community Centres, etc.

In January, 1955, 6,587,530 children were present in the schools maintained by Local Education Authorities; 6,515,676 were in 28,808 primary and secondary schools; 23,127 in 464 nursery schools and the remainder in special schools, etc.

Voluntary Agencies

The school system is complicated by voluntary agencies which have assisted greatly in educational development. A number of the primary and secondary schools are still provided by voluntary bodies, mainly religious, but have long been maintained by L.E.A.'s. Under the 1944 Act, where the managers of such schools can obtain half (or in some cases 75 per cent.) of funds required for rebuilding to modern standards, the schools will remain under their partial control as "aided schools" (if 75 per cent. is raised then as "special agreement schools"), the cost of running the schools being met by the Local Education Authority. If the managers cannot raise money necessary for rebuilding, schools become "controlled schools" under the management of the Local Education Authority, though with provisions enabling denominational religious instruction to be given. In England and Wales, by Dec. 1955, of the 9,341 voluntary schools 4,256 had been given controlled and 4,706 aided or special agreement status.

164 Direct Grant Grammar Schools (non-profit-making and with some non-local characteristics, and usually with day and boarding scholars) occupy a semi-independent position, getting money grants direct from the Ministry. They are run by Boards of Governors with Local Education Authority representatives and take fee-paying pupils chosen by themselves. For these pupils fees are graded according to parents means. At least 25 per cent. of the places must be free, and Local Authorities may claim up to a further 25 per cent. of places, for which no further fees are paid by parents. There are also 153 other schools receiving grants direct from the Ministry. In all the direct grant schools have 101,310 pupils.

About 90 Public Boarding Schools and over 5,000 Private Schools remain independent of the State system, except that many Public Schools give a limited number of places to nominees of Local Education Authorities. Under the 1944 Act all schools are being inspected by the Ministry and can later be closed if found inefficient. The total number of children in independent schools is estimated at 500,000. The number of pupils in the 1,359 such schools which are "recognized as efficient" is 258,947.

In the field of Further Education many private bodies, often receiving grants of money from Local Education Authorities and from the Ministry, are associated with the public authorities.

Teachers

The number of teachers in the maintained primary and secondary schools must be further raised from 240,345 (Jan. 1955) to deal with the increasing child population. In particular there is a shortage of women teachers. Despite an increase of the number of full-time teachers by 30,400 in the five years 1950-4, 47.1 per cent. of pupils are still being taught in classes exceeding the prescribed maximum of 40 for primary and 30 for secondary schools. Teachers are trained in a total of 176 institutions of various types. These include 23 University training departments providing a one year course for graduates. Most of the remainder provide a two-year training course. 95 of the colleges are provided by Local Education Authorities. All teachers recruited into the state system must in future be trained and hold a certificate. 19.4 per cent. of all the teachers in maintained and aided schools and establishments are graduates. Payment of teachers is regulated by the Burnham Scale, which was revised in 1956 to provide £475 to £900 per annum and £430 to £700 per annum basic rates for men and women Assistant Teachers respectively, and for Headmasters and Headmistresses according to the size of the school and with, in every case, supplementary payment for degrees, specially responsible posts, etc. Women's salaries are to be increased by seven instalments until they are, in 1961, equal to men's.

School Meals

School milk is supplied free to all children and was taken by 54.7 per cent. of children in attendance at primary and secondary schools in October, 1955. On the same day 3,074,168 dinners were supplied to 48.6 per cent. of children in attendance.

Cost of Education in England and Wales

The total public expenditure on education (excluding universities) in England and Wales in the year 1956-57 is estimated at:

From Exchequer (including Ministry of Education grants to Local Education Authorities).....	£313,901,000
From Rates.....	£170,843,000

being an increase of £41,548,000 over the revised estimates for 1955-56, and more than double the expenditure in 1944. Public expenditure on education excluding universities amounted to approximately 35. per head of the population per week in 1952. The cost per pupil per year in a maintained primary school averaged £24.3 in 1951-52 compared with £15.10s. in an elementary school in 1937-38. In a maintained secondary school in 1951-52 it was £43.2.

EDUCATION IN SCOTLAND

Scottish education is being brought into line with the system in England and Wales under the Education (Scotland) Acts, 1945 and 1946. Secondary Education having always been more widespread than in England, it will not be necessary to create as many new secondary schools but rather to ensure variety of provision in them. Though education up to the compulsory age must, as in England, be provided free under the Act by the 31 County and 4 Burgh Education Authorities they will be allowed to run fee-paying secondary schools for children whose parents wish it. Exemptions from compulsory education will be granted on grounds of inaccessibility to schools and (over age 14) domestic hardship.

In July 1955, the number of grant-aided and secondary schools was 3,046 (2,237 primary and 817 secondary) and the number of children on the registers in January was 825,088. The cost to the Exchequer of Education in Scotland in 1956-57 will be £42,537,000; the cost from rates £20,136,000.

EDUCATION IN NORTHERN IRELAND

An Education Act was passed by the Northern Ireland Parliament in March, 1947, broadly in line with that of England and Wales. The main differences are that Local Education Authorities can raise the age for compulsory education from 5 to 5½ or 6, that secondary education will be provided by Local Education Authorities in intermediate Secondary Schools (modern or technical) only, that existing grammar schools will accommodate a proportion of Local Education Authority scholarship holders and that denominational religious instruction will be more general. The date for the raising of the school-leaving age has been again postponed to not later than April 1, 1957.

An important feature of the educational system in Northern Ireland is the strength of the voluntary element in school management, an individuality deriving from the traditions of Irish education. The voluntary schools are generously assisted by grants from public funds, the grant system differing from that obtaining in other parts of the United Kingdom.

In 1955, the number of schools provided, maintained and assisted by L.E.A.'s in Northern Ireland was 1,775 with 252,423 children on the rolls. The estimated cost to the Exchequer for 1956-57 is £9,511,860 and from rates £2,256,540. This is an increase of £1,943,717 in total public expenditure over 1955-56.

THE UNIVERSITIES

There are fourteen degree-giving Universities in England (Birmingham, Bristol, Cambridge, Durham, Hull, Leeds, Liverpool, London, Manchester, Nottingham, Oxford, Reading, Sheffield and Southampton); one in Wales (University of Wales with colleges at Bangor, Cardiff, Aberystwyth and Swansea); four in Scotland (Aberdeen, Edinburgh, Glasgow and St. Andrews); and one in Northern Ireland (Queen's University, Belfast). There are also three University Colleges (Leicester, Exeter and North Staffordshire), also giving degree courses lasting for three or four years. The total number of full-time students in these Universities and other institutions receiving grants from the University Grants Committee in the session 1954-55 was 81,705 of whom 20,410 were women (compared with a total of 80,602 enrolled at the beginning of the session 1953-54 and 50,000 in 1939). 72.9 per cent. of the students were assisted by scholarships from public or private funds. All these institutions are self-governing and receive grants from the Treasury (not the Ministry of Education) through the University Grants Committee. Recurrent expenditure in 1954-55 amounted to £34,791,656. In the year 1954-55, 70.4 per cent. of the income of the universities came from the Treasury, 10.7 per cent. from fees, 4.1 per cent. from endowments and 3.2 per cent. from Local Education Authorities.

Assistants, Secretaries, &c. The Boards are the official agencies of the Universities and are in close touch with Professors and Tutors in the Colleges of the Universities. Employers with a vacancy should write to "The Secretary of the Appoint-

THE ASSOCIATION OF UNIVERSITIES OF THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH

36 Gordon Square, W.C.1

The Association (formerly the Universities Bureau of the British Empire) holds quinquennial Congresses of the Universities of the Commonwealth, and other meetings in the intervening years, publishes the Commonwealth Universities Yearbook, etc., acts as a general information centre, and provides an advisory service for the filling of staff appointments overseas. It also supplies the secretariat for the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals of the Universities of the United Kingdom.

Secretary, J. F. Foster, M.A., LL.D.

ADULT EDUCATION

Adult Education is carried on in the United Kingdom by universities and university colleges (pp. 502-510), local education authorities (pp.
512-514) and by a wide variety of voluntary organizations.

The Universities Council for Adult Education, consisting of two representatives from each university and independent university college, was constituted in 1946 for interchange of ideas and formulation of common policy on extramural education.—Hon. Secretary, W. E. Salt, O.B.E., Dept. of Adult Education, The University, Bristol.

The Central Joint Advisory Committee on Tutorial Classes, 27 Portman Square, W.1, consisting of representatives of 22 joint committees of universities and districts of the Workers' Educational Association, was established in 1909 to provide for consultation between these joint committees, to act as an advisory body to them and to provide for joint approach to the Ministry of Education and other bodies.—Joint Hon. Secs., H. Nutt; S. G. Raybould, Ph.D.

The National Institute of Adult Education (England and Wales), 35 Queen Anne St., W.1 (Sec., E. M. Hutchinson, M.A.) and the Scottish Institute of Adult Education, Old Academy House, Galashiels, exist to provide a means of consultation and cooperation between the various forces in adult education.

ARCHITECTURE

ARCHITECTS REGISTRATION COUNCIL OF THE U.K., 78 Wimpole Street, W.1.—Chairman, Denis Poulton, Dipl. Arch., F.R.I.B.A.; Registrar, Pembroke Wicks, C.B.E., LL.B.

The Council, which is set up under the Architects (Registration) Acts, 1931-1938, maintains the Register of Architects and has power to remove from the Register an architect found guilty of disgraceful conduct. It consists of representatives of all architectural bodies, organizations of kindred professions and the Government departments concerned. It is an offence punishable on summary conviction by a fine not exceeding £50 for an unregistered person to carry on business under any name, style or title containing the word "Architect." To qualify for registration an applicant must have passed one of the Examinations recognized by the Council on the recommendation of the Board of Architectural Education, set up under the principal Act. One half of the annual fee of £1 paid by Registered Architects is devoted by Section 14 of the Act to the provision of scholarships for the assistance of students in architecture of insufficient means.

THE ROYAL INSTITUTE OF BRITISH ARCHITECTS, 66 Portland Place, W.1, grants the diplomas, F.R.I.B.A., A.R.I.B.A. and L.R.I.B.A. The R.I.B.A. Board of Architectural Education, which is distinct from the Statutory Board of Architectural Education referred to above, controls and guides the whole system of higher education for Architects throughout Great Britain. VETERINARY

ROYAL COLLEGE OF VETERINARY SURGEONS

 9 & 10 Red Lion Square, W.C.1

President, Prof. L. P. Pugh, M.A.
Registrar, W. G. R. Oates.

The Veterinary Surgeons Acts, 1881-1948, provide that the Council of the Royal College shall maintain the Statutory Register of Veterinary Surgeons. Unless his name appears in that Register, no person may use the title "Veterinary Surgeon," or any name, title, addition or description, calculated to lead to the belief that he is registered in that Register.

Admission to the Register of Veterinary Surgeons may be obtained by taking the Diploma of M.R.C.V.S. at an affiliated veterinary college or under the Veterinary Surgeons Act, 1948, by obtaining the registrable veterinary degree of a recognized University.

Since July 29, 1949, veterinary practice in Great Britain and Northern Ireland (with certain minor exceptions) is illegal if carried out by any person not on the Register of Veterinary Surgeons or the Supplementary Veterinary Register on which have been placed the names of unqualified persons who satisfied the Council of the Royal College under the Veterinary Surgeons Act, 1948.

The College is also in general responsible for the supervision of veterinary education in the United Kingdom and has consultative functions in assisting the Privy Council to recognize veterinary degrees as registrable qualifications or to withdraw such recognition. In this connection the University Grants Committee has established a Veterinary Committee to enquire into the financial needs of veterinary education and to make recommendations on the application of funds provided by Parliament to meet those needs.

The Council of the Royal College is responsible for all registration and discipline of the veterinary profession and persons entered on the Supplementary Veterinary Register.

The following Universities and Teaching Colleges present their students for either the Diploma M.R.C.V.S. or the Veterinary Degree of their University:—

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY, School of Veterinary Medicine, Madingley Road, Cambridge.—Admin. Sec., H. H. Carleton, M.A.

Headmasters' Conference Schools

THE HEADMASTERS' CONFERENCE.—Chairman, W. Hamilton, M.A. (Westminster School). Sec., A. E. Nichols, C.B.E., M.A., 29 Gordon Square, W.C.1. The annual meetings are, as a rule, held in September.

Election of a Headmaster to membership requires that certain conditions with regard to his school must be fulfilled. The school must have a certificate of recognition from the Department of Education, and speaking it must either be a day school or a boarding school, or a combination of the two. The school must be a public school, whose history and traditions are well known, and who are not a member of any other association of public schools or of post school-certificate schools. The school must have a minimum of 100 boys, and the Headmaster must be a member of the present Headmaster holds office.

EVENTS OF THE YEAR, OCT. 1, 1955—SEPT. 30, 1956

HOME AFFAIRS
THE ROYAL HOUSE

(1955.) Oct. 12. The Duke of Edinburgh arrived at Copenhagen in royal yacht Britannia as guest of King Frederick, who welcomed him at the quay. 13. He entertained King and Queen of Denmark and others at luncheon on royal yacht and visited British industrial exhibition. 14. Statement issued from Clarence House said that "no announcement concerning Princess Margaret's personal future is at present contemplated." 17. The Duke of Edinburgh, on his way home, flew to Germany and presented new colours to a Canadian unit at Soest, before returning to Buckingham Palace. 18. The Queen and her children arrived at the Palace from Balmoral. 19. Her Majesty received Dr. Albert Schweitzer at the Palace and invested him with insignia of Order of Merit. The Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret attended rededication service in chapel of Lambeth Palace and dined with Archbishop of Canterbury and diocesan Bishops. 20. The Queen and the Duke visited Cambridge, seeing Newnham and Girton Colleges, new Veterinary School and the Guildhall. 21. The Queen, in the presence of other members of Royal Family and representatives of Church, State and Commonwealth, unveiled national memorial statue of King George VI in Carlton Gardens, and spoke of her father's fortitude and confidence throughout the war and his lifelong interest in his fellow men. At night Her Majesty and the Duke of Edinburgh dined with Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty at Royal Naval College, Greenwich, in commemoration of 150th anniversary of Battle of Trafalgar. 25. The President of Portuguese Republic and Madame Craveiro Lopes arrived in London on state visit and were welcomed by the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh, the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret, when they landed at Westminster Pier from royal barge in which they had travelled from Tower Bridge. Later the President received addresses from London County Council and Westminster, and was present at state banquet given by the Queen at Buckingham Palace. 26. Portuguese President and Madame Craveiro Lopes entertained the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh to dinner at Portuguese Embassy. 27. After visiting Atomic Energy Research Establishment at Harwell, the President, accompanied by Madame Craveiro Lopes, the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh, attended gala performance at Royal Opera House. Princess Margaret visited Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth Palace. 28. Portuguese visit ended and President and his wife flew back to Lisbon. 31. Personal message issued by Princess Margaret stated that she had decided not to marry Group Captain Peter Townsend, and added "Mindful of the Church's teaching that Christian marriage is indissoluble and conscious of my duty to the Commonwealth, I have resolved to put these considerations before any others." Nov. 1. The Duke of Edinburgh unveiled in York Minster an astronomical clock as memorial to 18,000 airmen from bases in Yorkshire who were killed in the war. 2. The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh began two day visit to the Midlands and were welcomed at Nantwich, Crewe, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Stoke and Stafford. 3. Proceeding to Birmingham, Her Majesty inaugurated new buildings for Colleges of Technology. 5. Her Majesty, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, unveiled on Tower Hill Merchant Navy Memorial to 24,000 members lost at sea in the war and attended Festival of Remembrance at Albert Hall. 6. The Queen led the Two Minutes' Silence at the Cenotaph and she and the Duke laid wreaths, the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret and other members of Royal Family, Ministers and Dominions representatives attending the ceremony. 14. Party was held at Buckingham Palace for Duke of Cornwall's seventh birthday. 24. The Queen Mother was installed as Chancellor of London University and conferred honorary degrees. Dec. 14. Princess Margaret launched and named new Cunard liner Carinthia on the Clyde. 16. The Queen opened new buildings of central terminal at London Airport. 22. The Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, and their children, the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret went to Sandringham for Christmas. 25. The Royal Family attended morning service at Sandringham parish church; in her Christmas Day broadcast to the Commonwealth, the Queen said each new year was an adventure into the unknown, in which everyone could help, and she urged that the spirit of Christmas should stay with all in the journey into the unknown year.

(1956.) Jan. 2. New Year Honours list included baronies for Col. J. I. Astor, Sir Raymond Evershed and Sir Frederick Godber, 3 baronetcies, 32 knighthoods and D.B.E. for Miss Margot Fonteyn. 27. The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh left England by air for their visit to Nigeria. 29. The royal visitors were given warm welcome on their arrival at airport of Lagos, where they were greeted by Governor-General and leading Nigerians. 29. The Queen and the Duke attended service at Lagos Cathedral. 30. Her Majesty presented new colours to 2nd Battalion, Nigeria Regiment, before 14,000 people on Lagos racecourse, visited hospital for spastic children, and with the Duke attended garden party. 31. The Queen received loyal address from Federal House of Representatives and inaugurated the Federal law courts. Feb. 1. Her Majesty and the Duke left Lagos by air for Kaduna, capital of Northern Region, where crowds greeted them. 2. They attended spectacular durbar at which the chiefs of the Region paid homage to their sovereign. 3. They saw parade of 1,500 children and received loyal address from legislature of Northern Region. 6. The Queen and the Duke flew to Enugu to see the Eastern Region. 7. They visited House of Assembly and received loyal address, afterwards visiting welfare hall and mine and attending display of native dancing. 8. They flew to Calabar Province and received local chiefs, and then to Port Harcourt to see display of war canoes. 9. The Queen and the Duke visited leper settlement and returned to Lagos after calling at Benin. 10. Her Majesty opened wharf extension and power station at Lagos and attended youth rally. 11. SUEZ CANAL CRISIS. July 26. President Nasser announced that Egypt was taking over the Suez Canal forthwith and would use the revenue from it to build the Aswan High Dam. He said that the Canal company had been "nationalized", and that Egyptian Government officials had already moved into the company's installations and offices in Egypt. 27. Egypt rejected a British Note protesting against the nationalization of the Canal. The Egyptian Government confiscated £2,050,000 from the Canal company's account with the Ottoman Bank in Cairo. 28. Mr. Macmillan signed statutory instruments forbidding transfer of cash, securities or gold belonging to the Canal company in the U.K., and transfers into or out of Egyptian sterling accounts in U.K. without Treasury's permission. 29. M. Pineau flew to London, and with British and U.S. representatives discussed the situation. 30. Prime Minister stated in House of Commons that all exports of war material to Egypt had been stopped. He said that no arrangements for future of Canal would be acceptable to H.M. Government which would leave it in unfettered control of a single power. Canal company stated that its employees were cut off from the company's authority and subjected to compulsory work under penalty of imprisonment in a zone under martial law. 31. Admiralty and War Office announced that certain naval movements and precautionary military measures had been ordered. Aug. 1. Mr. Dulles joined three-power discussions in London, at which it was agreed that a draft scheme for making Canal an internationally controlled thoroughfare should be presented to a conference of interested nations. 2. It was announced that the international conference would meet in London on Aug. 16. The Air Ministry ordered a number of Canberra twin-jet bomber squadrons to fly to Malta, and the Admiralty said that tank-landing craft were being brought from reserve and made ready for service. The French Mediterranean Fleet was officially stated to be assembling at Toulon for an undisclosed destination. 3. The Queen, at a Council held at Arundel Castle, issued a Proclamation for calling up the Army Reserve. The Ministry of Supply announced that a number of merchant ships would be requisitioned. Mr. Dulles, in a broadcast from the White House, said that it was inadmissible for the Canal to be exploited by one country for highly selfish purposes. 5. War Office announced suspension of discharge of regular soldiers and said that delays in release of National Servicemen serving overseas was possible. Parachute brigade group embarked at Portsmouth for the Mediterranean. Egypt ordered partial mobilization of the National Guard. 8. Sir Anthony Eden said in a broadcast that the oil route through the Canal was "a matter of life and death to us all", but that he was confident that the London conference could produce a workable scheme for the future of the Canal. 9. Soviet Government stated that it would send a representative to the London conference, though the conference was incompetent to deal with Suez Canal problem and nationalization of the Canal by Egypt was a fully legal act. 10. Two British oil company employees expelled from Egypt. 12. Colonel Nasser announced that the Egyptian Government would not attend the London Conference. The Greek Government also refused to attend. President Eisenhower invited leaders of both political parties to the White House, where he and Mr. Dulles addressed them on the implications of the Suez crisis. Two troopships with soldiers and airmen left Southampton for the Mediterranean. 13. Airlift of troops to the Mediterranean continued. 14. Mr. Gaitskill, on behalf of Opposition, asked the Prime Minister to recall Parliament immediately after the conclusion of the Suez Canal Conference. Canal Company announced that nearly all its non-Egyptian employees in Egypt had expressed their loyalty to the company and their desire to be repatriated rather than to continue working for the Egyptian authorities. 16. Suez Canal Conference opened at Lancaster House with speech of welcome by Sir Anthony Eden. Mr. Selwyn Lloyd was elected Chairman of the Conference. 17. Mr. Shepilov, Soviet delegate to the Conference, said that new international convention to replace 1888 Convention was required and suggested that if the Conference reached agreement on principles, they should be put to a fuller and wider conference. 20. Mr. Dulles proposed to the Conference an international board to control the Canal, and Mr. Krishna Menon suggested a board with consultative and advisory powers only. 21. Seventeen countries showed themselves in favour of Mr. Dulles' plan, after minor amendments to it, proposed by Pakistan, had been accepted. Russia, Indonesia and Ceylon supported the Indian plan. 22. Egyptian spokesman said that if British and French pilots ceased to work in Canal, French and British ships would only be taken through after ships of all other nationalities. 23. London Conference ended after it had been agreed by the nations forming the majority that a committee with Mr. Menzies as chairman, and representatives from U.S.A., Persia, Ethiopia and Sweden should approach the Egyptian Government and initiate discussions. Admiralty announced that R.N. ratings and R.M. other ranks whose seven-year engagements were due to end on or after Sept. 1 would be temporarily retained. 27. Two Britons arrested in Cairo on charges of espionage. 28. Col. Nasser agreed to meet the 5-power Committee in Cairo. Egyptian Government requested the withdrawal of two members of British Embassy staff whom it alleged were implicated in "espionage ring". Mr. Dulles said at Press Conference that Suez Canal was given international status by 1888 Convention. 29. Foreign Office said that British Government had agreed that contingent of French troops should be temporarily stationed in Cyprus. Third British subject arrested in Cairo. 30. Two members of Egyptian Embassy in London asked to leave within 72 hours. French troops began to arrive in Cyprus by air. Sept. 2. Col. Nasser said that he was not prepared to compromise on question of operational control of Canal. 3. Discussions between 5-power committee and Col. Nasser opened in Cairo. Fourth British subject, a member of an insurance company's Egyptian staff arrested. Thirty persons of different nationalities now stated to be detained as spies. Egyptian War Minister said that Egypt had completed military preparation and was ready to meet any attack. 6. Statement from 10 Downing Street said that Cabinet had decided to ask Chancellor and Speaker to recall Parliament on Sept. 12. 9. Discussions in Cairo ended; documents published showed complete lack of agreement. Mr. Menzies described the situation as "very, very grave." 10. British and French Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers conferred in London. Col. Nasser proposed new Conference of all states using Suez Canal. 11. Canal Company authorised its non-Egyptian employees in Egypt to cease work at the end of the week and to prepare to return home at once. 12. Houses of Parliament met for special session. Prime Minister told Commons that Government, in conjunction with U.S.A. and France, would set up association of users of the Canal, which would employ its own pilots and to which dues could be paid. After Opposition criticism, Government tabled a motion of confidence, to which Opposition proposed an amendment tantamount to censure. Foreign pilots informed Egyptian authority of their desire to leave their posts. 13. Opposition amendment defeated in the Commons by 321 to 251, after Sir Anthony Eden had said that the Government must be the judges of the best moment to have recourse to the Security Council. In Lords Opposition amendment was defeated by 145 to 18. Mr. Dulles said that America would assist Europe if passage through the Canal was denied. He said that the U.S. would not give military support to the use of force. 14. Further London conference of 18 countries arranged. 17. Mr. Dulles reaffirmed U.S. offer to finance American oil exports to Western Europe if progress through the Canal became impracticable. Mr. Krishna Menon visited Col. Nasser. Egypt asked the U.N. Security Council to keep a "vigilant eye" on the Suez Canal crisis, and accused Britain and France of "shocking acts" in violation of U.N. Charter. 19. Eighteen-power Conference opened in London, Mr. Dulles elaborating his views on Canal Users' Association, which were opposed by representatives of Denmark and Pakistan. Moscow Radio broadcast suggestion by Marshal Bulganin for meeting of heads of Governments of U.K., U.S.A., U.S.S.R., Egypt, India and France. 21. London Conference closed with declaration in favour of establishment of users' association. France expressed reserve. 23. Britain and France announced that they had instructed their permanent representatives at the United Nations to ask the President of the Security Council to call a meeting to consider the situation created by the unilateral action of the Egyptian Government. M. Mollet, speaking at Lens, said that France felt bitterness and anxiety at the lack of support from some of her friends and allies. 24. Colonel Nasser, the King of Saudi Arabia and the President of Syria, after three meetings in Saudi Arabia, issued a joint statement that they were completely unanimous on the Suez issue. 26. Sir Anthony Eden and Mr. Selwyn Lloyd arrived in Paris for discussions with the French Ministers. Security Council agreed to debate Anglo-French protest against Egypt and Egyptian counter-complaint against Western nations.

THE CENTENARIES OF 1957

In the opening months of the year 1857 a dispute with China had serious repercussions at home. A party of Chinese having boarded the vessel Arrow and torn down the British flag, the British authorities at Hong Kong took punitive action, destroying a number of Chinese forts. These steps were criticized by Cobden and others in this country as high-handed, and on March 3 a vote of censure, supported by the Conservatives and Peelites and by Lord John Russell, was carried against the Government in the House of Commons. Parliament was dissolved but at the ensuing General Election Cobden and two of his principal supporters, Bright and Milner Gibson, lost their seats, and Lord Palmerston's Government was returned by a substantial majority, computed at 87. The new Parliament met on April 30.

The state of war with Persia, consequent on the Shah's siege of Herat in the previous autumn, came to an end when a treaty between Queen Victoria and the Shah was signed at Paris on March 4. Fresh difficulties in the East, however, soon arose. Signs of disaffection among the native troops in India had been apparent as early as January, and on May 10 the natives among the garrison at Meerut broke out in revolt. The mutineers marched on Delhi and were joined by the sepoys there, and by the end of June the mutiny had spread to twenty-two stations, mainly in Bengal, the North-West Provinces and Oudh. On July 15 the massacre of Cawnpore took place.

A large body of British troops on their way to China was diverted to India, and 40,000 more were despatched via the Cape, but it was not until Sept. 20 that Delhi was recaptured by an assault in which the famous John Nicholson was mortally wounded. Meanwhile the siege of Lucknow had continued and its defender, Sir Henry Lawrence, had been killed. On Sept. 25 Sir Henry Havelock managed to reach Lucknow with reinforcements, and on Nov. 17 Sir Colin Campbell, the recently appointed Commander-in-Chief in India, relieved the city. On Nov. 24 Havelock died of dysentery contracted during the siege. By the end of the year, though the general situation had much improved, fighting continued in a number of places.

At home the chief item of legislation during the session was the Divorce Act, which was passed after strenuous opposition. The Act set up a court to hear divorce causes, and brought to an end the procedure whereby divorce could only be obtained by a private Act of Parliament, after sentence in the Ecclesiastical Court.

On February 19 one of the worst mining disasters in this country took place when an explosion at the Lundhill Colliery near Barnsley caused the loss of 189 lives. On February 23 Whitefield's Tabernacle in Tottenham Court Road was destroyed by fire.

Queen Victoria's youngest child, Princess Beatrice, was born on April 14. On February 24, a Supplement to the Gazette contained the names and citations of those to whom the Victoria Cross had been awarded for bravery in the Crimean War, and on June 26 the Queen made the first distribution of the Cross to 62 recipients in Hyde Park. In August Napoleon III, and the Empress Eugénie paid a short private visit to the Queen and Prince Albert at Osborne.

Towards the end of the year the failure of a number of banks and commercial houses and the resulting alarm caused a financial crisis. The Government authorized the Bank of England to issue £2,000,000 in excess of the statutory amount, and on Dec. 3 the Queen opened a special session of Parliament called to pass a Bill indemnifying the Government and its advisers for their action.

On June 30 the celebrated trial of Madeleine Smith, accused of murdering by poison Pierre L'Angelier, opened in Edinburgh. The trial lasted ten days and ended with a verdict of "Not Proven".

Publications in 1857 included Dickens' Little Dorrit, Trollope's Barchester Towers, Kingsley's Two Years Ago, Mrs. Gaskell's life of Charlotte Brontë and Thomas Hughes' Tom Brown's School-days, which first appeared anonymously. During the year the first serial number of Thackeray's The Virginians was published, and Matthew Arnold was appointed Professor of Poetry at Oxford. The new Reading Room at the British Museum was opened to the public on May 8 and the South Kensington Museum on June 24.

CENSUS POPULATION OF THE BRITISH ISLES

Before 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland; nor was it till 1813 that statesmen had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570.....4,160,221	1670.....5,773,646
1600.....4,811,718	1700.....6,045,008
1630.....5,600,517	1750.....6,517,035

The first general Census of Great Britain and Ireland was taken in 1801, and since that date there has been a fresh numbering every ten years (except in 1941). Results since 1851 are as follows:—

1851.....27,513,551	1901.....21,609,091
1861.....29,070,529	1911.....45,370,530
1871.....31,629,299	1921.....47,273,710*
1881.....35,026,708	1931.....49,113,870*
1891.....37,880,764	1951.....53,327,333†

Population Enumerated in England and Wales (1801–1951), Scotland (1801–1951), Northern Ireland (1851–1951), and Islands (Isle of Man, Jersey, Guernsey and Associated Islands) (1891–1951).

Cases of Murder

England and Wales

In 1954, 136 cases of murder of persons aged one year and over were known to the police. Of the 109 offenders known or suspected to have been concerned in 130 of these cases, 36 committed suicide before arrests could be made and one was accidentally killed while resisting arrest. In the other 6 cases the murderers were undetected.

72 persons were proceeded against for the murder of 75 victims over one year of age and also one infant. Of this number one died and one committed suicide while awaiting trial. Of those committed for trial 10 were found insane on arraignment, 8 were acquitted and 23 were found guilty but insane. Of 29 persons convicted, 3 (under 18 yrs.) were detained during H.M. pleasure and one sentenced to life imprisonment. Of 25 persons sentenced to death, 12 were executed, 10 had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment, 2 were certified insane and removed to Broadmoor Institution and one sentence was quashed by the court of Criminal Appeal.

Scotland

Eleven cases of murder were made known to the police in 1955. 7 persons were proceeded against and of these one was discharged and not called for trial, 5 were found insane and unfit for trial, and one was convicted of murder and sentenced to death, but was subsequently reprieved.

Smuggling.—During the year ended March 31, 1955, there was a further reduction in the number of smuggling offences detected. Diamonds to the value of £98,000 were seized from intending smugglers. Among contraventions of import duties discovered, was the irregular import through European countries of considerable quantities of nylon yarn from dollar sources. Currency seized realized £30,000 and sales of confiscated goods £390,000, including £250,000 from the sale of brass and copper. Of the total of 1,899 convictions for revenue offences in 1954-55 (1953-54, 2,041), 1,204 concerned smuggling for the evasion of duty or purchase tax, 47 the evasion of import controls, 167 Purchase Tax offences other than smuggling, and 343 Excise Licences other than Liquor Licences.

The Suez Canal Shares.—In Nov. 1875 the British Government authorized Messrs. Rothschild to buy the Khedive Ismail's shares in the Canal Maritime de Suez (176,602 shares out of a total of 400,000) for £4,080,000, the Khedive to receive the dividends thereon until July 1, 1894. Since that date the dividends have accrued to the British Treasury. Dividends received during 1954-55 on 188,144 ordinary shares and 165,360 "Actions de Jouissance" were £1,663,389 and £1,262,025. On March 31, 1955, the British holdings were valued at £36,542,450. (See Events of the Year.)

The National Fund.—Established in 1927 by a gift from an anonymous donor of approximately £500,000. The audited balance sheet, as at March 31, 1956, shows the following net additions during the year:—Contributions received, £111,000; net revenue, £95,840; net profit on investments realized £26,841. The amount of the Fund (investments at cost) on March 31, 1956, was £2,342,886.

The Elsie Mackay Fund.—The sum of £527,808 was set aside in 1929 by Lord and Lady Inchcape in memory of their daughter, to accumulate for not more than 50 years and then to be applied to reduction of the National Debt. The fund stood on March 31, 1956, at £1,534,807.

The John Buchanan Fund.—Established in 1932 under the will of Dr. John Buchanan who died in 1930 and left the residue of his estate, subject to certain annuities, to be accumulated for fifty years beginning two years after his death and then to be applied in reduction of the National Debt. The money is paid over from time to time as it falls in. The fund stood on March 31, 1956, at £13,715.

NOTE.—The legal weight of a penny is one-third, of the halfpenny one-fifth, and of the farthing one-tenth of an ounce avoirdupois; the halfpenny is one inch in diameter.

The "Remedy" is the amount of variation from standard permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint.

Bank of England Notes are issued for sums of 10s., £1 and £5. As from April 22, 1943, the Bank of England ceased to issue bank notes of denominations of £10 and upwards, and commenced to withdraw those already issued; notes of these denominations ceased to be legal tender on May 1, 1945.

Silver.—No silver coins have been struck since 1946, except Maundy money.

Nickel Brass is an alloy of copper 79 parts, nickel 1 part and zinc 20 parts.

Bronze is an alloy of copper 95½ parts, tin 3 parts and zinc 1½ parts. These proportions are subject to slight variation.

Cupro-nickel is an alloy of nickel 25 parts and copper 75 parts.

Currency Notes.—Under the provisions of the Currency and Bank Notes Act, 1928, Currency Notes (popularly known as Treasury notes) of the value of £1 and 10s. were replaced by Bank of England Notes and the profits of the whole Note issue were paid over by the Bank to H.M. Treasury.

Legal Tender of Money.—Bank of England Notes of £1 and 10s. are legal tender in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the payment of any amount; those of £5 are legal tender in England and Wales only. Notes of £5 dated before Sept. 2, 1944, are not now legal tender but, like notes of £10 to £1,000, are payable when presented at the Bank of England. Change cannot be demanded except from the Bank of England. Gold (dated 1838 onwards), if of or above the least current weight, is legal tender to any amount. Silver (dated 1816 onwards), and cupro-nickel are legal tender for sums up to £2, nickel brass 3d. up to 2 shillings, and bronze (introduced 1860, to replace copper) up to 12d.

Work of the Royal Mint in 1955.—During 1955 the Royal Mint struck 505,586,029 coins, weighing a total of 2,652 tons, an average output of over 10,000,000 coins every working week. Almost 60 per cent. of the total production was for the United Kingdom. Details are shown in the table below.

Of the total of a little under £12 million new cupro-nickel coins produced, £4½ million represented a net addition to the coinage circulation, and just over £7 million were to replace silver coins withdrawn from circulation under the scheme for recovery of silver. The £4½ million expansion in the cupro-nickel currency during 1955 was entirely in the shilling and sixpenny denominations, the net addition to the shilling circulation being over fifty million coins. This was the second year in succession when the whole of the increased coin circulation was in the two smaller denominations, but the demand for these coins remains unabated. At the beginning of the year the large surplus of pennies in circulation persisted, and in continuation of arrangements started in 1954, nearly 48,000,000 pennies were withdrawn. Towards the end of the year, however, a small demand for new pennies arose and some 5 million were issued. These were from a stock manufactured in 1949.

207,605,400 coins were struck in 51 denominations for the British Caribbean Territories, British Honduras, British East Africa, Burma, the Central African Federation, Cyprus, Irish Republic, Fiji, Iceland, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Hong Kong, Mauritius, New Zealand, and Uruguay.

During 1955 also, considerable progress was made on the production of new official Elizabeth II Seals for the Colonial Territories, and new Great Seals were also made for the Union of South Africa and for Ceylon.

AVERAGE EARNINGS AND HOURS OF WORK

Particulars of the earnings of manual wage-earners and the hours worked in manufacturing industries generally and in some of the non-manufacturing industries and services are collected periodically by the Ministry of Labour. The average weekly hours of work and average weekly earnings of workers in Great Britain in 1938 and in 1946-1956 were as follows:—

NATIONAL SERVICE IN 1955

During 1955, 242,766 men were registered for National Service, a decrease of 51,217 from the number registered in 1954. 120,286 men expressed a preference for the Army, 82,449 for the Royal Air Force and 26,263 for the Royal Navy or Royal Marines. 733 men (0·3 per cent.) were registered provisionally as conscientious objectors, 15,700 students wishing to enter universities, technical and agricultural colleges, etc., applied for deferment and in 12,700 cases deferment was granted.

221,354 medical examinations of National Servicemen were conducted by 95 civilian Medical Boards at 61 centres in the United Kingdom during 1955. The men were placed in the following medical grades:—Grade I, 143,332 (65 per cent.); Grade II, 25,878 (11 per cent.); Grade III, 21,145 (10 per cent.); Grade IV, 30,999 (14 per cent.).

156,833 National Servicemen were called up during 1955, compared with 147,975 in 1954, and were posted as follows:—

Royal Navy.....	6,105
Royal Air Force.....	42,072

In addition 45,775 men in the National Service field of call-up entered voluntary regular engagements during the year—Royal Navy, 2,579; Army, 26,692; Royal Air Force, 16,504.

FOREIGN WORKERS

During 1955 a total of 41,898 permits were issued for the admission of foreign workers for employment in Great Britain, an increase of 5,425 over the total in 1954. 2,094 permits were refused.

The principal occupations for which permits were issued were: Domestic service, 21,728; Concert, stage, film, variety and other entertainment, 4,687; Industry and commerce, 4,980;

Hotel and restaurant service, 1,956; Teaching, 1,043; Nursing, 2,382; Student Employees, 4,957; Miscellaneous, 165.

Special facilities are offered by the Ministry of Labour to undermanned industries and services for the bulk recruitment of Italian workers. During 1955 a total of 2,320 Italian men and women were brought to vacancies in Great Britain through these facilities, including a few skilled and technological workers to whom the scheme was successfully extended. The largest numbers were recruited for the brick-making, tinplate, iron and steel, and wool textile industries, for coke oven works and for hospitals. At the end of the year there were outstanding requests for 1,560 Italians.

Nationalities of workers who received permits in 1954 and 1955 were as follows:—

Agricultural Holdings

Of the total number of agricultural holdings in Great Britain in 1955, 79 per cent. were of 100 acres or less in area. In England and Wales the average size was 66 acres compared with 60 in Scotland. In 1950, 36 per cent. of the farms in England had a mains electricity supply; in Wales 10 per cent. An estimate of 16 per cent. was made for Scotland. The National Farm Survey of England and Wales, carried out in the early years of the last war, showed that 47 per cent. of the holdings with farm houses had a piped water supply, while 45 per cent. relied on wells as the principal source of water. The number of agricultural holdings in Great Britain in 1955, excluding rough grazing and holdings consisting solely of mountain and heathland, was:—

Production Objectives and Price Guarantees

In the Annual Review and Determination of Guarantees 1956, presented to Parliament in March 1956, the Government announced that the Agricultural net output for the year 1955-56 is forecast at 55 per cent. above prewar level. This compares favourably with 51 per cent. in 1954-55, although in that year outcome was seriously affected by the weather and is equal to the 1953-54 level, the highest previously recorded. The increase was mainly due to record yields of cereal crops and an upward trend in egg and milk production, which offset falls in tillage area and lower pig production.

Production objectives for the future have been made with special regard to the United Kingdom's Balance of Payments problems. For this reason importance has been attached to the saving of direct imports of food by increased home production and the saving of additional imports of feeding stuffs that might be required for this purpose. To achieve these aims, the Government calls for a policy of:—(1) Maintaining a large arable area with emphasis on feed crops and crop yields. (2) Greater use of grass in producing beef, mutton and milk. (3) Increased economy and skill in feeding methods.

To encourage the production of feed crops the prices of barley and oats have been increased by 6d. and 1s. 6d. per cwt. respectively, wheat and rye prices being reduced by 1s. 6d. per cwt. Good quality beef, mutton and lamb is still required and the standard price of fat cattle has been increased by 12s. 4d. to 151s. 0d. per cwt. and for fat sheep and lambs by 2d. to 3s. 2d. per lb. estimated dressed carcass weight. For pig meat, although production has fallen, the subsidy is still high at £50 million and a further reduction of 6d. per score dead weight is being made.

Better market prices have reduced the unit cost of subsidy for hen eggs and no change is being made in the guarantee, for milk, however, it is being increased by 1d. per gallon because of higher production costs. The price of wool paid to farmers is being brought down nearer the market value by 2d. per lb. The support price for potatoes is increased by 8s. 0d. per ton and for sugar beet by 2s. 5d. to 130s. 6d. per ton.

In the Annual Review the Government announced a new method of paying guarantees for fatstock. Under the system introduced after decontrol farmers sold their products in the open market, the Government giving support to those products which did not realize a standard or minimum price. There will now be a single deficiency payment for each group of fatstock, which will be the difference between the standard price and the average of realized prices for that group of fatstock. If necessary it will be adjusted to ensure that the average returns of producers each week remains within certain limits on either side of the respective standard price. For other products the method of payment remains the same.

The Crops of 1956

The Times (September 10, 1956) published the following table showing the condition of the principal crops in Great Britain on September 1, 1956, compared with the previous five years, and with the 10-year averages. 100 is taken to represent healthy condition, full growth and freedom from injury.

Wind and rain have played havoc with this year's harvesting. The cost has increased and many acres of corn crops have already been lost. Unless the weather holds off to enable the remaining crops to be gathered, the estimates for 1956 are probably too high. Grass and root crops are more promising and if they can be lifted a good yield is expected.

CLOSE TIMES FOR GAME

The Protection of Wild Birds Act, 1954, lays down a close season for wild birds generally from February 1 to August 31 inclusive, each year. Exceptions to these dates are made for—Capercaillie and (except Scotland) Woodcock, Feb. 1–Sept. 30.

Snipe, Feb. 1–Aug. 11.

Wild Duck and Wild Goose (in or over water areas), Feb. 21–Aug. 31.

Birds which may be killed or taken outside the close season (except in Scotland on Sundays, on Christmas Day or in a prescribed area) are the above and coot, curlew (other than stone curlew), bar-tailed godwit, moorhen, plover (golden or grey), common red-shank, certain wild duck (common pochard, gadwall, mallard, pintail, shoveller, teal, tufted duck, widgeon) and certain wild geese (bean, Canada, pink-footed and white-footed).

Certain wild birds may be killed or taken at any time by authorized persons—cormorant, crow, gull (black-backed or herring), jackdaw, jay, magpie, rook, shag, sparrow, sparrowhawk, starling, stock-dove and wood pigeon; and, in Scotland only, goosander, red-breasted merganser and rock-dove.

HUNTING AND GROUND GAME

There is no statutory close-time for fox-hunting or rabbit-shooting, nor for deer nor hares; but by an Act passed in 1892 the sale of hares or leverets in Great Britain is prohibited from March 1 to July 31 inclusive under a penalty of a pound. The First of November is the recognized date for the opening of the fox-hunting season, which continues till the following April. Otter-hunting lasts from mid-April to mid-September. The period for deer-hunting or stalking varies from about August 12 to October 12 for stags, and from November 10 to the end of March for hinds.

SHIPPING ORGANIZATIONS

(See also Societies and Institutions)

Shipowners.—The representative bodies for shipowners are the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom, the General Council of British Shipping, and the Liverpool Steamship Owners' Association, 10 Water Street, Liverpool, 2.

Labour Relations.—The National Maritime Board, Bevis Marks House, Bevis Marks, E.C.3., is the joint Industrial Council for the Mercantile Marine. It consists of representatives of the shipowners' and seafarers' organizations and is responsible for negotiation of wages and conditions of service. The employers' associations concerned with labour relations and the regulation of employment are the Shipping Federation and the Employers' Association of the Port of Liverpool: these two bodies form the Merchant Navy Establishment Administration which makes arrangements for the employment of all officers and seamen not serving continuously with one company. The Mercantile Marine Service Association, other associations and the respective trade unions represent masters, officers and seamen.

Safety and Classification.—The Ministry of Transport and Civil Aviation is responsible for the survey of shipping to ensure the maintenance of necessary standards of safety in passenger ship construction, efficiency of life-saving and fire-fighting equipment and correct marking of load-lines. Lloyd's Register of Shipping surveys and classifies shipping (including foreign ships) according to standards of safety and efficiency.

Shipping Exchange.—Contracts for movements of cargo and charter of tramp shipping are arranged at the Baltic Mercantile and Shipping Exchange, 3 St. Mary Axe, E.C.3.

NAUTICAL MEASURES

Distance is measured in nautical (or sea) miles. The nautical mile is traditionally defined as the length of a minute of arc of a great circle of the earth; but as this length varies in different latitudes (owing to the fact that the earth is not a perfect sphere), 6,080 feet, a "rounded off value" of the mean length, has been adopted in British practice as the standard length of the nautical mile. On this basis 33 nautical miles exactly equal 38 statute miles; the statute (land) mile contains 5,280 feet. A cable, as a measure used by seamen, is 600 feet (100 fathoms) approximately one-tenth of a nautical mile. Soundings at sea are recorded in fathoms (6 feet).

6 feet = 1 fathom.

10 cables = 1 nautical mile.

Note.—In the United States the nautical mile is legally defined and has a length of 6,080.2 (U.S.) feet. Some other countries have adopted the nautical mile of 1,852 metres as recommended by the International Hydrographic Bureau in 1929.

Speed is measured in nautical miles per hour, called knots. A knot is a measure of speed and is not used to express distance. A ship moving at the rate of 30 nautical miles per hour is said to be "doing 30 knots" and as the nautical mile is longer than the land or statute mile this represents a land speed of over 34½ miles per hour. In 1945 the Royal Air Force adopted the knot and the nautical mile as the standard measurements for speed and distance.

WIND FORCE MEASURES

The Beaufort Scale of wind force has been accepted internationally and is used in communicating weather conditions. Devised originally by Admiral Sir Francis Beaufort in 1805, it now consists of these numbers 0-17, each representing a certain strength or velocity of wind.

LIGHTHOUSES

In 1954-55 the income of the General Lighthouse Fund was £3,508,022, made up of £3,245,802 United Kingdom Light Dues, £17,814 Bahamas Light Dues, £4,868 Sombrero Light Dues, £15,846 Basses and Minicoy Light Dues, £68,970 Miscellaneous Receipts and £154,722 Grant by Ministry of Transport towards expenditure in connection with the removal of wrecks. Expenditure during the year totalled £2,743,954, made up of £2,652,921 in respect of maintenance and operation of lighthouses, etc., under the control of the three General Lighthouse Authorities (Trinity House, Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses, and Commissioners of Irish Lights), £69,735 in respect of Lighthouses Abroad and £20,938 miscellaneous expenditure, including the cost of collecting dues. The surplus of £764,428 was carried to the Net Revenue Account. In September 1940, United Kingdom Light Dues were increased from 150 per cent. of the statutory rates laid down in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1898, to 200 per cent., and in March, 1942, to 300 per cent. The dues were reduced to 200 per cent. in January, 1946, but general increases in costs and expenditure on renewals and replacements necessitated increases to 300 per cent. in July, 1947, to 400 per cent. in June, 1948 and to 460 per cent. in April, 1956.

BRITISH RAILWAYS IN 1955

The British Transport Commission set up by the terms of the Transport Act, 1947, organized the Railways of Britain in six Regions under the control of the Railway Executive.

(1) The London Midland Region, corresponding to the system of the London, Midland and Scottish Company in England and Wales.

(2) The Western Region, corresponding to the system of the Great Western Railway.

(3) The Southern Region, corresponding to the system of the Southern Railway.

(4) The Eastern Region, corresponding to the Southern Area of the London and North Eastern Railway.

(5) The North Eastern Region, corresponding to the North Eastern Area of the London and North Eastern Railway.

(6) The Scottish Region, corresponding to the Scottish systems of the London, Midland and Scottish and London and North Eastern Railway.

Certain revisions in the Regional boundaries have subsequently taken place, notably in the cases of the London Midland, Southern and Western Regions.

By the terms of the Transport Act, 1953, the Railway Executive ceased to exist on September 30, 1953, when its functions, together with those of the other Executives excepting the London Transport Executive, were assumed by the British Transport Commission.

Under the terms of the 1953 Act, the Commission was required to submit to the Minister of Transport and Civil Aviation a scheme for the re-organization of British Railways incorporating de-centralization of management whilst reserving to the Commission general financial control and general control of charges. This scheme, providing for the introduction of Area Boards, was received by the Minister on April 15, 1954, and came into effect on Jan. 1, 1955.

MODERNIZATION

The British Transport Commission announced on April 12, 1956, a further programme of immediate work in connection with the £1,240,000,000 railway modernization plan which was outlined by the Commission early in 1955 and which has since made significant progress. The complete plan, covering a period of 15 years, envisages the provision of at least 170 main-line locomotives, 1,000 multiple-unit diesel vehicles and a large number of diesel shunting engines; track and signalling improvements to allow for higher train speeds; electrification of certain suburban and main line services; major improvements to certain passenger stations, goods marshalling yards and goods stations; and the provision of new passenger rolling-stock and carriage cleaning facilities. Details of the 1956-57 programme included the following:—

Track and Signalling.—Construction of three new tunnels between New Barnet and Potters Bar

(Eastern Region), and quadrupling of the track, thus removing a bottle-neck on the London-Edinburgh run. New track layout, with colour-light signalling, at Manchester (Victoria).

Diesel Traction.—Delivery of 174 main-line diesel locomotives costing over £11,000,000, will start in 1957, and 400 more diesel shunting locomotives will be brought into use to augment over 500 already in service. About £23,000,000 will be spent on the construction of some 1,750 vehicles for diesel multiple-unit trains. Main line diesel services are expected to be introduced between Edinburgh-Glasgow, Birmingham-Swansea and London-Hastings, and further multiple-unit diesel trains will be introduced on cross-country and secondary lines in various parts of the country.

Electrification.—The extension of electrification from Shenfield to Chelmsford was completed in June, 1956. The extension to Southend (Victoria) will be completed in 1957. These extensions form the basis of future electrification of the Eastern Region main-lines to Ipswich, Clacton, etc. Preliminary work to begin on (a) the electrification of Fenchurch Street-Tilbury, Liverpool Street-Bishop's Stortford and remaining steam traction lines in E. Kent; (b) electrification of the line between Manchester and Crewe as a "pilot" scheme for the main-line electrification between London, Birmingham, Liverpool and Manchester.

Freight Traffic.—Work to begin on new marshalling yards at Ripple Lane, Barking, and Margam, Port Talbot. Work was in progress in 1956 on new yards at Temple Mills (Stratford) and Millerhill (Edinburgh). Work to begin on a new goods yard to serve Crawley New Town and on the modernization of goods depots at Lincoln, Liverpool (Spekeland) and in Manchester.

Passenger Stations.—Improvements to be made at Barrow (Central), Cannon Street (London), Banbury, Glasgow Central, Chichester, Weymouth, Forest Hill and Plymouth (North Road). A start will be made with the provision of escalators and deep-level interchange subways at the Bank Station (Waterloo & City Railway), and on the construction of a new station to serve Harlow New Town.

Rolling Stock.—Some £26,000,000 to be spent in 1956-57 on the construction of new passenger coaches, including multiple-unit electric vehicles and corridor main-line vehicles for haulage by either steam or diesel locomotives. 70,000 new freight wagons to be built in 1956.

INLAND WATERWAYS

About 2,400 miles of inland waterways are in use in Great Britain. Of these about 2,000 miles are administered by British Transport Waterways (British Transport Commission), which has organized them into four divisions, exclusive of Scotland, each of which is based on a major river estuary. These divisions have headquarters at Leeds, Liverpool, Watford and Gloucester. The Commission was set up under the provisions of the Transport Act, 1947.

Tonnage of traffic carried on the waterways of the Transport Commission:—

Traffic	1953	1954	1955
Coal and other	Tons	Tons	Tons
Fuel	5,205,000	4,838,000	5,055,000
Liquids in bulk ..	1,893,000	1,931,000	2,109,000
General Merchandise	3,114,000	3,284,000	3,313,000
Total	10,212,000	10,053,000	10,477,000

Waterways	Miles in use	Tonnage Carried 1955
N.E. Division	278	4,095,000

S.E. Division	409	3,177,000
S.W. Division	257	1,696,000
Scottish Canals	107	71,000

The more important of the Waterways excluded from these arrangements are as follows:—

Waterways	Miles in use	Tonnage Carried 1955
Bridgewater	40	654,868
Manchester Ship	36	16,359,612
Thames Conservancy	136	311,325

Scotland

Canals in Scotland are administered separately by a Board of Management. The Caledonian Canal, a chain of 6 lochs and connecting canals, with a total length of 60 miles, including Lochs Ness, Lochy and Linnhe, was first opened for navigation in 1823. Length of artificial canal, 23 miles; average depth 17 feet. The Crinan Canal, completed in 1801, connects Loch Crinan, off the Sound of Jura, with Ardrishaig, a distance of about 9 miles. The Forth and Clyde Canal, completed in 1790, connects Bowling on the River Clyde with Kirkintilloch, Falkirk and Grangemouth (on the Forth), a distance of about 40 miles. The Union Canal runs from the Forth and Clyde Canal near Falkirk to Edinburgh, a distance of about 32 miles.

Northern Ireland

The only inland waterways now open to traffic in Northern Ireland are the Lagan Canal (Lower Reaches), the Strabane Canal and the Lower Bann Navigation. Traffic carried on these waterways, principally building materials, totalled 18,315 tons in 1954.

ROADS

The total mileage of public roads in Great Britain is 188,095 miles, of which 160,858 are in England and Wales and 27,237 in Scotland. The cost of maintenance, improvement (widening, etc.) and new construction in 1914-15 was £18,800,000, and in 1954-55 approximately £100,107,000, which includes £12,454,000 spent on Trunk Roads but excludes sums recoverable from frontagers, public utilities, etc. In 1950-51 the amount recoverable from frontagers etc. was £7,383,000. The roads of Great Britain have been classified by the Ministry of Transport, and out of the total mileage of 188,095, 8,270 have been included in Trunk Roads, 19,606 in Class I (totalling 27,876 miles), 17,696 in Class II, and 48,781 in Class III.

Highway Authorities.—Under the Local Government Act, 1929, county councils in England and Wales, became (from April 1, 1930), the highway authorities for all roads in rural districts and all classified roads (i.e. Class I, Class II and Class III Roads) outside the county and metropolitan boroughs. The county borough, borough and urban councils are the highway authorities for roads other than county roads which lie within their areas. In Scotland similar provisions have been made. As from April 1, 1937, in England and Wales (May 16, 1937, in Scotland) the Minister of Transport became the Highway Authority for 4,460 miles of road in Great Britain, and as from April 1, 1946, in England and Wales (May 20, 1946, in Scotland) for a further 3,729 miles. These roads are known as Trunk Roads, and the Minister (or, in Scotland from April 1, 1956, the Secretary of State) is responsible for their maintenance and improvement.

The total gross receipts from the taxation of road vehicles between December 1, 1954, and November 30, 1955, amounted to £84,475,945. The number of mechanically-propelled vehicles for which licences were current at Feb. 29, 1956, was 5,816,892. The average receipt in respect of a whole year licence to Dec. 31, 1955, was £12 9s. 9d. for cars; £2 0s. 10d. for motor-bicycles; £27 8s. 1d. for internal combustion and steam-driven vehicles; £15 14s. 2d. for electric goods vehicles; £62 17s. 3d. for motor hackneys, including taxi-cabs.

The Road Fund.—The motor licence duties were paid into a Road Fund until the close of financial year 1936-37, when the liability of the Exchequer to transfer licence duties, apart from the Exchequer share, to the Road Fund ceased. Amounts were thereafter paid into the Road Fund from moneys provided by Parliament. From April 1, 1956, the Road Fund ceased to exist and the money provided by the Exchequer for road works is voted by Parliament in the ordinary way. Grants are made to highway authorities towards the cost of maintenance, improvement and construction of roads and bridges.

Grants from the Road Fund to Highway Authorities for the year ended March 31, 1955, amounted to £34,157,000 (an increase of £9,776,000 on previous year's figure). Payments for work carried out on trunk roads totalled £12,718,000 (as compared with £11,344,000 for the previous financial year).

Under Local Government Acts, 1929, grants hitherto made out of the Road Fund towards the maintenance of classified roads in London and the county boroughs (England and Wales) and large burghs (Scotland), and of unclassified roads in counties, were discontinued as from April 1, 1930 (May 16—Scotland).

Motoring Offences.—A total of £822,102 in fines was paid by motorists in 1954. The number of persons charged in respect of 417,578 offences was 348,094. In addition written warnings were sent to 171,008 persons in respect of 191,062 alleged offences. Of the 348,094 persons prosecuted, 5,465 were arrested.

Convictions numbered 398,828 (against 306,976 for 1953) and a sentence of imprisonment without the option of a fine was passed on 988 persons for 1,806 offences. The number of motorists fined was 327,242 for 385,540 offences. Licences endorsed numbered 140,105 of which 21,262 involved disqualification.

† Includes 3,762 trolley vehicles (electrically propelled).

Motorways.—Details were given on July 5, 1955, by the Minister of Transport, of the initial stages of the Government's expanded road programme, including the provision of about 340 miles of road in Britain for motor traffic only, and involving an ultimate expenditure of about £120,000,000. New building is to include two long-distance motorways, London-Yorkshire (150 miles) and Birmingham-Preston (80 miles) and a number of shorter roads of similar standard which will eventually be joined to motorways.

It was proposed to authorize construction in 1955-58 of the first section of the London-Yorkshire Motorway, between the northern end of a new St. Albans By-pass and Dunchurch near Birmingham (53 miles); and of by-pass roads at St. Albans (12 miles), Doncaster (15), Preston (9), Lancaster (11), Maidenhead (6), Maidstone (10) and Ross Spur (21), a total of 84 miles. Building of the second stage of the London-Yorkshire Motorway (about 107 miles) is to follow completion of the first section to Dunchurch and a 94-mile length of the second motorway, between a point north of Birmingham and the Preston By-pass, will be started while work on the first stage of the London-Yorkshire Motorway is still in progress.

The first section of motorway, estimated to cost £15,000,000, will have six flyover junctions to enable drivers to turn off or join the motorway without halting or slowing down the main stream of through traffic, 46 public road bridges, 8 railway, 3 canal and 5 river bridges and many public path, private access and agricultural access bridges. Motorways have been designed with dual 2 or 3-lane carriageways to allow an uninterrupted flow of traffic. Except at flyover junctions there will be no access at any point between the terminals, but emergency access for special traffic, such as fire engines and ambulances, may be provided by means of slip roads.

New Thames Road Tunnel.—The Minister of Transport and Civil Aviation announced on April 19, 1956, that the main contract had been placed for the construction of a tunnel under the Thames, from Dartford, Kent, to Purfleet, Essex. The project was authorized by Act of Parliament in 1930 and a pilot tunnel completed in 1938. War then interrupted progress. It is estimated that the scheme will take 5 years to complete and will cost over £10,000,000, of which three-quarters is to be repaid by toll revenue from 2,000,000 vehicles expected to use the tunnel each year. The tunnel and its approach roads will connect the London-Tilbury Road (A.126) and the London-Rochester Road (A.2). The northern approach road may be extended to the Barking-Southeast Road (A.13), passing over A.126 by means of a viaduct.

Situated in the Long Reach of the Thames, where the river is half a mile wide, the project provides for a single tunnel carrying a roadway for two lanes of traffic. The tunnel will be 4,700 ft. long and there will be nearly a third of a mile of cuttings between the tunnel portals and the points at which the roadway emerges at ground level (1,500 ft.). The roadway will fall from the tunnel entrances towards the river on gradients of 1 in 28 with a short section practically level underneath the river. At the lowest point in the tunnel the roadway will be 100 ft. below the high water level. The tunnel will be iron lined to an internal diameter of 28 ft., using some 34,000 tons of cast iron and 260,000 bolts. The existing pilot tunnel of 12 ft. diameter will be dismantled as construction of the full tunnel proceeds and its lining recovered for use elsewhere. The carriageway in the tunnel, carried on a reinforced concrete structure, will be 21 ft. wide between the kerbs, with minimum vertical headroom of 16 ft. at the kerb. Pedestrians will not be admitted to the tunnel.

AERODROMES AND AIRPORTS

A list of 146 aerodromes in the United Kingdom, Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, etc., available to civil aircraft, showing the class of aerodrome and the length in feet of the longest runway, grass or beach landing strip. Civil Aircraft are not permitted to land at aerodromes in U.K. other than those listed below, except in cases of genuine emergency in flight or where special permission has been obtained from the appropriate authority.

S = Airfield owned or controlled by the Ministry of Transport and Civil Aviation; airports available for International air services are also shown in bold type (27).

J = Aerodrome licensed for joint use of Royal Air Force and civil aircraft (41).

M = Municipal aerodrome, owned or controlled by the local authority (22).

Pu. = Aerodrome licensed for public use (24).

U = Unlicensed aerodrome; *available with prior permission to civil aircraft (12).

Priv. = Aerodrome licensed for private use (37).

† = Aerodrome limited to aircraft under a certain maximum all-up weight.

C = Aerodrome or airport with Customs and Immigration facilities, continuously or on call.

FUEL USED

Electricity.—Consumption of coal in the production of electricity rose from 14,010,000 tons in 1938, to 41,892,000 tons in 1955. Coke, including coke breeze, consumed in 1938 was 176,000 tons; in 1955, 1,025,000 tons. Oil consumption rose from 20,000 tons in 1938 to 211,000 tons in 1955.

Gas.—Consumption of coal in the production of gas rose from 18.5 million tons in 1938 to 27.8 million tons in 1955. Gas oil consumed rose from 123,900 tons in 1938 to 517,500 tons in 1955.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

ENGLAND AND WALES

Local government is carried on by directly elected councils whose powers and duties are defined by statute, under the general supervision of various departments of the central government. Departments principally concerned are the Ministries of Housing and Local Government, Education, Health and Transport; and, in matters affecting law and order, police, fire services, care of children, civil defence preparations, etc., the Home Office. Supervision is by means of inspections and enquiries, issue of Regulations and Orders, approval of bye-laws, loan sanctions for capital expenditure, examination of accounts and the administration of government grants.

County Councils.—Constituted by the Local Government Act, 1888, they were made responsible for administrative duties which were previously performed by the justices of the peace in quarter sessions. In the main their functions relate to the more important services. In most cases the area of the administrative county is that of the geographical county, excluding county boroughs. Lincolnshire, Suffolk, Sussex and Yorkshire are exceptions, being divided into parts, each with a separate council, for administrative convenience. Councils consist of a chairman, aldermen and councillors. The chairman, who may receive an allowance, is elected annually by the council, either from among the aldermen or councillors or from persons eligible for election as aldermen or councillors. The council elects one-third of its members to hold office as aldermen for six years, half retiring every three years. Councillors are elected by local government electors for three years. Excluding London there are 61 county councils in England and Wales (see pp. 634-6; Wales, pp. 677-8).

County Borough Councils.—Boroughs with populations of 50,000 or more in 1888 and other ancient counties were constituted by the Local Government Act, 1888, as county boroughs; their councils were given the same powers and duties as county councils, but they are also governed by the general law affecting boroughs and have the same constitution. Until 1926 other boroughs reaching 50,000 population could obtain county borough status, but the required population is now 75,000. (Although important, level of population is only one factor in the attainment of county borough status.) There are 83 county borough councils in England and Wales (see pp. 666-673; Wales, p. 677).

The district councils within a county are borough councils, urban district councils and rural district councils.

Borough Councils.—Constituted in their present form by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. Urban district councils of over 20,000 population may by royal charter be incorporated as boroughs, recent examples of this being the incorporation in 1955 of Castleford (population 1954, 42,570), Ellesmere Port (35,130), Enfield (109,200), Rhondda (108,730), Spenborough (36,760) and Uxbridge (56,840). Borough councils consist of a mayor, aldermen and councillors. The mayor, who presides at council meetings and may be paid, and the aldermen, are elected and hold office for the same terms as chairmen and aldermen of county councils (see above). Councillors are elected by the burgesses (local government electors of the borough) for a term of three years, one-third of the council retiring each year. The lists on pp. 673-675 indicate how the political parties were represented on the councils of the more important boroughs in 1956-57. There are 318 non-county boroughs in England and Wales (see pp. 666-673; Wales, p. 677).

Urban and Rural District Councils.—The Public Health Act, 1875, consolidated legislation on public health and conferred various powers and duties on local sanitary authorities and these bodies were reconstituted by the Local Government Act, 1894, as urban and rural district councils. They are corporate bodies and have a common seal. District councils consist of a chairman, elected annually by the council, and councillors elected for a term of three years. The chairman may receive an allowance. An important part of their responsibility is in the local administration of the Public Health Acts and Housing Acts. Urban district councils are also highway authorities. Both types of authority levy rates; they may raise loans for various purposes and make bye-laws with the sanction of the central Government. There are 563 urban district councils and 474 rural district councils in England and Wales.

Parish Councils and Parish Meetings.—Local government responsibility is for the area of the civil parish in rural areas and for purely secular matters. Parish meetings consist of all the local government electors of the parish under a chairman chosen by the meeting and must be held at least twice a year where there is no parish council. Parish councils consist of a chairman and a number of councillors which may vary from five to fifteen, elected for three years. Parishes with a population of more than 300 must have a parish council. A parish meeting must be held annually and is presided over by the chairman of the parish council. Rates to meet the expenses of the parish council are levied by the rural district council.

London.—Local government is carried on by London County Council (see pp. 645-8), the Corporation of the City of London (pp. 638-44) and by the councils of the 28 metropolitan boroughs listed on p. 637.

Local Government Elections

Generally speaking all British subjects or citizens of the Republic of Ireland of 21 years or over resident on the qualifying date in the area for which the election is being held are entitled to vote at local government elections. There is also a non-resident qualification (see p. 1149). A register of electors is prepared and published annually by local electoral registration officers. There are 9,544,241 local government electors in county boroughs, 15,438,174 in municipal boroughs, urban districts, the City of London and the metropolitan boroughs, and 5,657,800 in rural districts. These figures exclude "V" voters, i.e. persons having their 21st birthday between Oct. 12 and June 16, who are entitled to vote at elections held after Oct. 1 following. County council elections are held triennially, usually in April, and elections for other authorities annually or triennially in May.

Voting takes place at polling stations arranged by the local authority and under the supervision of a presiding officer specially appointed for the purpose. Candidates, who are subject to various statutory qualifications and disqualifications designed to secure that they are suitable persons to hold office, must be nominated by two electors and, except in metropolitan borough, rural district or parish council elections, must secure the assent of eight other electors to the nomination. County council elections are based on divisions of the county regulated by the Home Secretary, each of which returns a single member; most boroughs, including county and metropolitan boroughs, are divided into wards, each electing a number of members varying between three and nine; other authorities may be so divided or may remain as single units depending upon their sizes.

Local Government Services

Local authorities must in their areas provide the services and carry out the functions required by various Acts of Parliament. They may provide additional services under general permissive legislation or under "local" Acts of Parliament which they have promoted as Private Bills. The nature of the duties imposed on local authorities and the scope of the services which they provide vary according to the type of authority. The only all-purpose council is that of the county borough. In the counties functions are divided between the county council and the borough and district councils and there is considerable delegation of functions by the county council to these other authorities, e.g. in education and planning matters. The principal subjects of local government administration are:—

Public health services (prevention of epidemics, abatement of sanitary nuisances, etc.) under the Public Health Act, 1936; local health services under the National Health Service (see p. 1132); Care of deprived children; Welfare services for the aged and infirm and for the handicapped, under the National Assistance Act, 1948.

Housing; Land drainage; Water supply; Sewerage; Refuse collection and disposal; Baths and washhouses; Cemeteries.

Town and country planning; Parks and recreation grounds; Smallholdings and allotments.

Roads and bridges; Road safety; Street lighting; Harbours, docks and piers; Passenger transport.

Education; Public libraries, museums and art galleries; Municipal entertainments; Civic restaurants; Information centres.

Police; Fire services; Civil defence services.

Food and drugs inspection; Weights and measures.

Local Government Committees and Staff

Detailed administration of local government services is commonly carried out by committees, matters of policy being decided by the council as a whole; the appointment of certain committees is made compulsory by Act of Parliament. Committees may be executive or advisory; they may be constituted on a permanent basis as Standing Committees or as Special Committees set up for a limited period to deal with a particular subject; their powers and duties are laid down in the Standing Orders of the Council. Where services such as water supply and sewerage are shared between two or more authorities, Joint Committees or Boards of representatives of the authorities concerned are set up to administer the service. Police forces of counties are administered in this way by the Standing Joint Committee of members drawn in equal numbers from the county council and the justices in quarter sessions.

The executive policy of the local authority is carried out by a salaried staff varying in number according to the type of authority. The chief official is, in boroughs, the Town Clerk and elsewhere the Clerk of the Council, and these appointments, together with those of the Treasurer, Medical Officer of Health, Surveyor and Sanitary Inspector, are compulsory. Appointments of staff (including professional, technical and clerical classes, and manual workers) are made to a set establishment.

Local Government Finance

Local government is financed from various sources. (1) Rates.—Levied by county borough, borough and district councils and in London by the City Corporation and the metropolitan boroughs. Sums required by county councils are included in the rates levied by metropolitan and non-county borough and district councils. Rates are levied by a poundage tax on the rateable value of property in the area of the rating authority. De-rating.—Legislation consolidated by the Local Government Act, 1929, exempted agricultural land and buildings from rates and reduced rateable values of industrial and freight-transport properties to one quarter. Valuation for rating, formerly the responsibility of local authorities, was transferred to the Board of Inland Revenue by the Local Government Act, 1948. (2) Government Grants.—The Exchequer makes annual equalization grants to counties and county boroughs whose rateable value is below the average rateable value per head of weighted population in the United Kingdom to bring their respective rateable values up to the average level. Equalization grants replace the former "block" grants paid to local authorities until 1948, which included an element of compensation for loss of revenue through de-rating. Percentage grants cover an agreed proportion of expenditure on approved services such as education, health, police and fire services. Special grants are also made. (3) Loans.—Local authorities may raise loans on the security of the rates, with the sanction of the central Government department directly concerned, for capital expenditure on housing, roads, markets, municipal transport services, sewerage works, etc. On March 31, 1954, there were outstanding loans in England and Wales to the amount of £3,414,196,000; against this total the sum of £3,828,000 stood at the credit of various sinking funds.

SCOTLAND

Scotland is divided for local government purposes into counties, burghs and districts, and local authorities are similar to those in England and Wales.

County Councils.—First constituted in 1889, they are responsible for local government of the geographical area of the county excluding the large burghs. For certain purposes the counties of Perth and Kinross, and Moray and Nairn are combined. County councils include representatives from the landward areas and from all the burghs which are within the county for any purpose, town councils electing representatives from among their own members. Councillors are elected triennially. The chairman of the county council is the Convener of the County. There are 33 county councils in Scotland (see pp. 681-682).

Town Councils.—The town councils of the counties of cities (Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen and Dundee) are all-purpose authorities similar to the county borough councils in England and Wales and are presided over by the Lord Provost.

Scottish burghs are Royal burghs (incorporated by Royal Charter, 68), Parliamentary burghs (created by the Reform Act, 1832, with the right to send members to Parliament, 14) and Police burghs (all other burghs with a population of 7,000 or more, 115). Town councils consist of a provost (chairman), bailies and councillors. The provost and bailies (the equivalent of aldermen in England) are elected by the councillors from among themselves and hold office for three years; they are the magistrates of the burgh.

Large burghs, other than the counties of cities, are independent for all purposes except that for education and, in some cases, police, they are included in the county; small burghs are within the county not only for education and police but also for such purposes as classified roads, planning, etc.

There are 197 town councils in Scotland (counties of cities, 4; other large burghs, 20; small burghs, 173). (See pp. 684-5).

District Councils.—Outside the burghs the county council is responsible for most local government functions. Some of its functions are delegated to district councils as agents of the county council—recreation grounds, rights of way, allotments and other minor matters. Two counties are not divided into districts. District councils consist of elected members and the county councillors for the district ex officio. There are 199 district councils in Scotland.

Local Government Electors.—In Scotland there are 1,305,003 electors in counties of cities, 564,254 in other large burghs, 590,308 in small burghs and 994,550 in landward areas.—Total 3,454,113.

Product of 1d. rate in Scottish Cities

The estimated product of 1d. in Glasgow in 1956-57 was £61,027; in Edinburgh, £30,700; in Dundee, £8,846; and in Aberdeen, £9,500. Amounts of rates raised per head were: Glasgow, 32s. 11d.; Edinburgh, 22s. 1d.; Dundee, 26s. 7d.; and Aberdeen, 31s. 9d.

NORTHERN IRELAND

The structure of local government in Northern Ireland is similar to that of England and Wales. Types of local authority are: county councils, 6; county boroughs, 2; non-county boroughs or municipal councils, 9; urban district councils, 24; town commissioners, 3; and rural district councils, 32. (See p. 690.)

Electors.—The register published on Feb. 15, 1955, contained the names of 652,624 local government electors. Of this total, 191,420 related to the County Borough of Belfast and 20,842 to Londonderry County Borough. A new electoral register will be published on Feb. 15, 1958.

Local Government Debts.—The total amount of outstanding loans and capitalized annuities in

POLICE

The Police of England and Wales are administered by the Home Office, those of Scotland by the Scottish Home Department and those of Northern Ireland by the Ministry of Home Affairs.

LONDON FIRE BRIGADE

Headquarters: Albert Embankment, S.E.1.

Before the formation of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade the churchwardens and overseers in every parish were required, under Acts passed in 1707 and 1774, to provide fire engines and ladders, and the leading insurance companies also organized private fire brigades, which were amalgamated in 1832 to form the London Fire Engine Establishment. On January 1, 1866, under the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865, the Metropolitan Board of Works took over these responsibilities and established "The Metropolitan Fire Brigade," which (Jan. 1, 1867) also took over the fire escapes provided by the Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire, a voluntary body which had been founded in 1836. Under the Local Government Act, 1888, the London County Council assumed control of the Fire Brigade, and in 1904 the title of the Brigade was altered to "London Fire Brigade."

The Brigade was augmented very considerably during the 1939-45 war, and an Auxiliary Fire Service established. The London Fire Brigade and London Auxiliary Fire Service in common with all fire brigades in England, Wales, and Scotland were taken over by the State and formed part of the National Fire Service, from August 18, 1941.

The London Fire Brigade returned to the London County Council, April 1, 1948.

The number of calls to which the Brigade responded during the year ending December 31, 1955, totalled 32,197, the fires numbered 8,979, chimney fires 6,241, false alarms 5,582 (including 3,332 malicious false alarms), and the calls to perform special services numbered 2,395.

Under the provisions of the Civil Defence Act, 1948, an Auxiliary Fire Service was re-established.

THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of England occupies the southern portion of the island of Great Britain and lies between $55^{\circ} 46'$ and $49^{\circ} 57' 30''$ N. latitude (from the mouth of the Tweed to the Lizard), and between $1^{\circ} 46'$ E. and $5^{\circ} 43'$ W. (from Lowestoft to Land's End). England is bounded on the north by the summit of the Cheviot Hills, which form a natural boundary with the Kingdom of Scotland; on the south by the English Channel; on the east by the Straits of Dover (Pas de Calais) and the North Sea; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean, Wales and the Irish Sea. Area, 50,327 square miles. Population (1931) 37,354,917; 1951 Census preliminary figures, 41,147,938.

Relief.—There is a natural orographic division into the hilly districts of the north, west and south-west, and the undulating downs and low-lying plains of the east and south-east. In the extreme north the Cheviot Hills run from east to west, culminating in the Cheviot, 2,676 feet above mean sea level. Divided from the Cheviots by the Tyne Gap is the Pennine Chain, running N. by W. to S. by E., with its highest point in Cross Fell, 2,930 feet above mean sea level. West of the Pennines are the Cumbrian Mountains, which contain in Scafell Pike (3,210 feet) the highest land in England, and east of the Pennines are the Yorkshire Moors, their highest point being Urra Moor (1,489 feet). South of the Pennines are the Peak of Derbyshire (2,088 feet) and Dartmoor (High Willhays, 2,039 feet). In the western county of Shropshire are the isolated Wrekin (1,335 feet), Longmynd (1,696 feet), and Brown Clee (1,792 feet); in Herefordshire the Black Mountain (2,310 feet); in Worcestershire the Malvern Hills (1,395 feet); in Monmouthshire (now usually grouped with Wales) the Sugar Loaf (1,955 feet) and Colby (1,905 feet), and the Cotswold Hills of Gloucestershire contain Cleve Cloud (1,134 feet).

Hydrography.—The Thames is the longest and most important river of England, with a total length of 210 miles from its source in the Cotswold Hills to its outflow into the North Sea, and is navigable by ocean-going steamers to London Bridge. The Thames is tidal to Teddington (69 miles from its mouth) and forms county boundaries almost throughout its course; on its banks are situated London, the capital of the British Empire; Windsor Castle, the home of the Sovereign; Eton College, the first of the public schools, and Oxford, the oldest university in the kingdom. The Severn is the longest river in Great Britain, rising in the north-eastern slopes of Plynlimmon (Wales) and entering England in Shropshire, with a total length of 220 miles from its source to its outflow into the Bristol Channel, where it receives on the left the Bristol Avon, and on the right the Wye, its other tributaries being the Vyrnwy, Tern, Stour, Tems and Upper (or Warwickshire) Avon. The Severn is tidal below Gloucester, and a high bore or tidal wave sometimes reverses the flow as high as Tewkesbury (12½ miles above Gloucester). The scenery of the greater part of the river is very picturesque and beautiful, and the Severn is a noted salmon river, some of its tributaries being famous for trout. Navigation is assisted by the Gloucester and Berkeley Ship Canal (16½ miles), which admits vessels of 350 tons to Gloucester. The Severn Tunnel, 14 miles below the Sharpness Bridge, begun in 1873 and completed in 1886 (at a cost of £2,000,000) after many difficulties from flooding, is 4 miles 624 yards in length (of which 2½ miles are under the river). The construction of a road bridge over the Severn estuary, between Haysgate, Mon., and Almondsbury, Glos., (which will be the largest in Europe and the third largest in the world, with a centre span of 3,300 ft.) was authorized on Aug. 1, 1947, the estimated cost being £9,000,000. Of the remaining English rivers those flowing into the North Sea are the Tyne, Wear, Tees, Ouse and Trent from the Pennine Range, the Great Ouse (160 miles) from the Central Plain, and the Orwell and Stour from the hills of East Anglia. Flowing into the English Channel are the Sussex Ouse from the Weald, the Itchen from the Wiltshire and Hampshire Hills, and the Axe, Teign, Dart, Tamar and Exe from the Devonian Hills; and flowing into the Irish Sea are the Mersey, Ribble and Eden from the western slopes of the Pennines and the Derwent from the Cumbrian Mountains. The English Lakes are noteworthy rather for their picturesque scenery and poetic associations than for their size. These lie mainly in Cumberland, but partly in Westmorland and Lancashire, the largest being Windermere (10 miles long), Ullswater and Derwentwater.

Islands.—The Isle of Wight is separated from Hampshire by the Solent, total area 147 sq. miles, population (1931), 88,400; 1951 Census preliminary) 95,594. The climate is mild and healthy, and many watering places have grown up during the last century. Capital, Newport, at the head of the estuary of the Medina, Cowes (at the mouth) being the chief port; other centres are Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Freshwater, Yarmouth, Totland Bay, Seaview and Bembridge. The Scilly Islands, 25 miles from Land's End, consist of about 40 islands, with a total area of about 4,000 acres, only St. Mary's, Treco, St. Martin's, St. Agnes and Bryher being inhabited. The capital is Hugh Town, in St. Mary's. The climate is unusually mild, and vegetation luxuriant, semi-tropical plants flourishing in the open. Lundy (=Island), 11 miles N.W. of Hartland Point, Devon, is about 2 miles long and about ½ mile broad (average), with a total area of about 1,050 acres (mainly picturesque), and a population of about 20; it contains the seat of the proprietor of the island and 3 lighthouses (one disused).

Climate.—The mean air temperature reduced to sea-level varies from 52° F. at Penzance and the Scilly Islands to 47° F. near Berwick-on-Tweed. In January the south and west are warmer than the east, the mean temperature reduced to sea-level being less than 40° F. from London to the Cheviots and over the eastern half of the country. In July the warmest districts are more definitely in the south and inland, the range being from 63° F. around London to less than 59° F. in the extreme north. The decrease of mean temperature with height is about 1° F. per 300 ft. The extreme readings are -11° F. at Buxton on February 11, 1895, and 100° F. at Greenwich on August 9, 1911. The average annual rainfall decreases from west to east, owing to the preponderance of south-west winds, and also increases with altitude. Of the total area 55 per cent. has an average less than 30 in., 29 per cent. between 30 in. and 40 in. and 16 per cent. more than 40 in. In the neighbourhood of the Thames Estuary the average is only 20 in.; at Seathwaite, Cumberland, 122 in.; and at the wettest spot in the Lake District 185 in. The extreme range of recorded annual values is from 9.29 in. at Margate in 1921 to 250 in. at The Sty, above Seathwaite, in 1928. The largest amount recorded in a day was 9.56 in. at Bruton, Somerset, for June 28, 1917. The mean annual number of hours of bright sunshine varies from 1,750 hours along the south-east coast to less than 1,300 hours in the neighbourhood of the Pennine range.

EARLY INHABITANTS

Prehistoric Man.—Palaeolithic and Neolithic remains are abundantly found throughout England. The Neolithic period is held to have merged into the Bronze Age about 2000 to 1500 B.C., and a date between these years has been given to Stonehenge (10 miles N. of Salisbury, Wiltshire) which consists of two circles of menhirs (the largest monolith being 22½ feet in height). The village of Avebury and its surroundings were scheduled in 1937, and in 1943 about 1,000 acres at Avebury were purchased by the National Trust, thus preserving the Circle of megalithic monuments, the Avenue, Silbury Hill, etc., relics of Stone Age culture of 1900-1800 B.C., which make this one of the most important archaeological sites in Europe. The Devil's Arrows, near Boroughbridge, Yorkshire, are regarded as the finest remaining megalithic monoliths in northern Europe; the tallest arrow is 30 ft. 6 in. high and its greatest circumference is 16 ft. In the latter part of the Bronze Age the Goidels, a people of Celtic race, and in the Iron Age other Celtic races of Brythons and Belgae, invaded the country and brought with them Celtic civilization and dialects, place names in England bearing witness to the spread of the invasion over the whole kingdom.

The Roman Conquest.—Julius Cæsar raided Britain in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C. The Emperor Claudius, nearly 100 years later (A.D. 42), dispatched Aulus Plautius, with a well-equipped force of 40,000 all arms, and himself followed with reinforcements in the same year. The British leader from A.D. 48-51 was Caratacus (Caractacus), who was finally captured and sent to Rome. By A.D. 70 the conquest of South Britain was completed, a great revolt under Boadicea (popularly "Boadicea"), Queen of the Iceni, being crushed in A.D. 61. In A.D. 122, the Emperor Hadrian visited Britain and built a continuous rampart, since known as Hadrian's Wall, from Walsend to Bowness (Tyne to Solway). The work was entrusted by the Emperor Hadrian to Aulus Platorius Nepos, legate of Britain from 122 to 126, the work being now regarded as "the greatest and most impressive relic of the Roman frontier system in Europe." The Romans administered Britain as a Province under a Governor, with a well-defined system of local government, each Roman municipality ruling itself and the surrounding territory. Colchester, Lincoln, York, Gloucester and St. Albans stand on the sites of five Roman municipalities, while London was the centre of the road system and the seat of the financial officials of the Province of Britain. Well-preserved Roman towns have been uncovered at (or near) Silchester (Calleva Atrebatum), 10 miles south of Reading, Wroxeter (Viroconium), near Shrewsbury, and St. Albans (Verulamium) in Hertfordshire. Four main groups of roads radiated from London, and a fifth (the Fosse) ran obliquely from Ermine Street (in Lincoln), through Leicester, Cirencester and Bath to Exeter. Of the four groups radiating from London one ran S.E. to Canterbury and the coast of Kent, a second to Silchester and thence to parts of Western Britain and South Wales, a third (now known as Watling Street) ran through Verulamium to Chester, with various branches, and the fourth reached Colchester, Lincoln, York and the eastern counties. Christianity reached the Roman province of Britain from Gaul in the 3rd century (or possibly earlier), Alban, "the protomartyr of Britain," being put to death as a Christian during the persecution of Diocletian (June 22, 303), at his native town Verulamium. The Bishops of Londinium, Eboracum (York), and Lindum (Lincoln) attended the Council of Arles in 314. The Roman garrison of Britain was much harassed in the 4th century by Saxon pirates, who invaded the eastern counties. A system of coast defence was organized from the Wash to Southampton Water, with forts at Brancaster, Burgh Castle (Yarmouth), Walton (Felixstowe), Bradwell, Reculver, Richborough, Dover, Stutfall, Pevensey and Porchester (Portsmouth). About A.D. 350 incursions in the north of Irish (Scotti) and Picts became most formidable, and towards the end of the 4th century many troops were removed from Britain for service in other parts of the Roman Empire. Early in the 5th century Gaul was taken from the Romans by Teutonic invaders and Britain was cut off from Rome. The last Roman garrison was withdrawn from Britain in A.D. 442 and the S.E. portion was conquered by the Saxons. The Latin-speaking Celts of England were replaced by their heathen and Teutonic conquerors, to the submergence of the Christian religion and the loss of Latin speech. According to legend, the British King Vortigern called in the Saxons to defend him against the Picts, the Saxon chieftains being Hengist and Horsa, who landed at Ebbfleet, Kent, and established themselves in the Isle of Thanet. Bede, a Northumbrian monk, author of the Ecclesiastical History at the opening of the 8th century, described these settlers as Jutes, and there are traces of differences in Kentish customs from those of other Anglo-Saxon kingdoms.

Anglo-Saxons and Normans.—What happened in Britain during the 150 years which elapsed between the final break with Rome and the coming of St. Augustine is shrouded in the deepest mystery. The Jutes, the Saxons and the Angles (whose gods Twi, Woden, Thunor and Frigg are commemorated in "Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday") were converted to Christianity by a mission under Augustine (dispatched by Pope Gregory in 597), which established Archbishoprics at Canterbury and York, and England appears to have been again converted by the end of the 7th century. In the 8th century Offa, King of Mercia, is stated to have built a wall and rampart, afterwards known as Offa's Dike, from the mouth of the Dee to that of the Wye, as a protection against the Welsh. The greatest of the English kingdoms was Wessex, with its capital at Winchester, and the greatest of the Wessex kings was Alfred the Great (871-901), who resisted the incursions of the Northmen (Danes) and fixed a limit to their advance by the Treaty of Wedmore (878). In the 10th century the Kings of Wessex recovered the whole of England from the Danes, but subsequent rulers were unable to resist the invaders, and England paid tribute (Danegelt) for many years, and was ruled by Danish Kings from 1016 to 1042, when Edward the Confessor was recalled from exile. In 1066 Harold (brother-in-law of Edward and son of Earl Godwin of Wessex) was chosen King of England, but after defeating (at Stamford Bridge, Yorkshire, Sept. 25) an invading army under Harald Hadraada, King of Norway (aided by the outlawed Earl Tostig, of Northumbria, younger son of Earl Godwin), he was himself defeated at the Battle of Hastings on Oct. 14, 1066, and the Norman Conquest secured the throne of England for Duke William of Normandy.

(a) Administrative Counties, excluding County Boroughs, named in the First Schedule of the Local Government Act, 1933; (b) Geographical Counties, including County Boroughs; in each case as estimated by the Registrar-General on June 30, 1955; (c) includes value of property occupied by the Crown for public purposes upon which contributions in lieu of rates are paid.

Lords Lieutenant of Counties.—The actual words used in the Letters Patent relative to these appointments are "Her Majesty's Lieutenant of and in the County of . . ." and this is the official title whether the individual appointed be a Peer or a Commoner. In documents of the highest formality the proper term is therefore "Her Majesty's Lieutenant." In less formal and informal documents and colloquially, the style "Lord Lieutenant" has been applied to H. M. Lieutenants, Peers and Commoners alike, for a great many years. The duties of the Lord Lieutenant are to advise the Lord Chancellor as to the appointment of magistrates to the county bench, to appoint Deputy Lieutenants and to raise the militia, if need be, in time of riot or invasion. The Lord Lieutenant is usually a peer or a baronet and a large landowner and is often appointed custos rotulorum (keeper of the records).

THE GOVERNMENT OF LONDON

LONDON, the capital of England and of the British Commonwealth of Nations, and the greatest city in the world, is situated on both banks of the River Thames, 50 miles from the North Sea.

The City of London (see pp. 638-44) represents London within its ancient boundaries.

The City of Westminster, which is bounded by the City of London on the east, by Chelsea and Kensington on the west, by Paddington, St. Marylebone and Holborn on the north, and by the Thames and Chelsea on the south, was formed into a borough by the London Government Act of 1899, and was created a city by Royal Charter of Oct. 29, 1900, the Council consisting of a Mayor, 10 Aldermen and 60 Councillors. It is notable, however, that since 1540 when a Bishopric of Westminster was established (abolished 1550) the Royal Writ of Summons to Parliament has always referred to "Our City of Westminster." Extending from the eastern end of the Strand to Kensington Gardens, and from Oxford Street to the Thames, it includes within its boundaries a large number of the finest buildings in London. The Abbey and the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the Houses of Parliament and the Law Courts, Buckingham Palace and St. James's, and the principal Government offices, Clubs and Theatres are situated in Westminster, which also includes the fashionable districts of Mayfair and Belgravia.

Metropolitan Boroughs.—Under the London Government Act of 1899, the administrative functions of the various vestries in the Metropolitan districts surrounding the City of London were transferred to 28 Metropolitan Boroughs, of which one became afterwards the City of Westminster. The area covered by these boroughs extends northwards to include Stoke Newington, southwards to Wandsworth and Lewisham, eastwards to Woolwich, and westwards to Hammersmith.

London County Council.—For County purposes the affairs of London are administered by the London County Council (see pp. 645-48), which was created by the Local Government Act of 1888.

Miscellaneous Authorities.—For Police purposes the administration is invested in the Corporation of London as to the City Police and in the Home Office as to the Metropolitan Police. The water authority is the Metropolitan Water Board; while the River Thames is administered as to its tidal portion by the Port of London Authority and above, Teddington by the Thames Conservancy; the Port Health Committee of the Corporation is the Health Authority for the River, the lighthouse and pilotage authority being Trinity House. The bridges are maintained in the City of London by the Bridge House Estates Committee of the Corporation and in the remaining area by the London County Council. London Transport controls passenger transport in the metropolitan area (omnibuses and metropolitan above- and under-ground railways).

THE CORPORATION OF LONDON

THE CITY OF LONDON represents London within its ancient boundaries and is governed by the Corporation of London, which consists of the "Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens" and acts through the Common Council, which comprises the Lord Mayor, 25 other Aldermen and Common Councilmen. The Corporation, by an Act of Common Council passed on Nov. 27, 1952, decided to reduce the number of Common Councilmen from 206 to 159 as at St. Thomas's Day, 1959, casual vacancies occurring by death or resignation between January 1, 1953, and St. Thomas's Day, 1959, not being filled so long as the representation of any Ward does not fall below the number specified in the Act.

The City of London is the financial and business centre of London and includes the head offices of the principal banks, insurance companies and mercantile houses, in addition to buildings ranging from the historic interest of the Roman Wall and the 15th century Guildhall, to the massive splendour of St. Paul's Cathedral and the architectural beauty of Wren's spires.

The city of London at the time of the revolt of the Iceni (A.D. 61) was described by Tacitus (born A.D. 55; died A.D. 120) as "a busy emporium for trade and traders." In Saxon times it was, in reality, a small independent federated State of Wards (holding wardmotes) with a folk-mote, predecessor of the present Common Council, for general affairs. Its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them, and granted a charter, which is still preserved. The mayoralty was established on the recognition of the corporate unity of the citizens by Prince John in 1191, the first Mayor being Henry Fitzallwyn, who filled the office for 21 years and was succeeded by Fitz Alan (1212-15). A new charter was granted by King John in 1215, directing the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done, though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality four times, A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419); and many modern cases have occurred. The earliest instance of the phrase "Lord Mayor" in English is in 1214. It is used more generally in the latter part of the 15th century and becomes invariable from 1535 onwards. At Michaelmas the Livery men in Common Hall choose two Aldermen who have served the office of Sheriff for presentation to the Court of Aldermen, and one is chosen to be Lord Mayor for the ensuing mayoral year. The Lord Mayor is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice to make the final declaration of office—the pageant being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show.

Aldermen are mentioned in the 11th century and their office is of Saxon origin. They were elected annually between 1377 and 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council, elected annually on St. Thomas's Day (Dec. 21), was, at an early date, substituted for a popular assembly called the Folk-mote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having at present as many as 12 members, and none fewer than four. Sheriffs were Saxon officers; their predecessors were the wic-reeves and portreeves of London and Middlesex. At first they were officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but Henry I (in 1132) gave the citizens permission to choose their own Sheriffs, and the annual election of Sheriffs became fully operative under King John's charter of 1199. The citizens lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888; but the Liverymen continue, as heretofore, to choose two Sheriffs of the City of London, who are appointed on Midsummer Day, and take office at Michaelmas.

Officers.—The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The office of Chamberlain is an ancient one. There were at one time two Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circa 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk (or Common Clerk) is mentioned in 1275 and the Common Serjeant in 1291.

Activities.—The work is assigned to Ward Committees consisting of 4 Aldermen and 29 Common Councillors, and to Committees specially appointed. These Committees present reports to the Court of Common Council. The Ward Committees are:—City Lands, Bridge House Estates, Coal and Corn and Finance, Rates Finance, Improvements and Town Planning, Streets, Public Health, Central Markets, Cattle Markets, Billingsgate and Leadenhall Markets, Spitalfields Market, Police, Port of London Health, County Purposes, Library (Library, Records, Art Gallery and Museum), City of London Schools, Freeman's School, Music (Guildhall School of Music and Drama), General Purposes, Officers and Clerks, Law and City Courts, Civil Defence, and Airport. The Committees specially appointed are:—Gresham (City side), Epping Forest, West Ham Park, Special, Primary Education, Privileges, Food Control, Labour, and Licensing Planning.

The Honourable the Irish Society, which manages the Corporation's Estates in Ulster, consists of a Governor and 5 other Aldermen, the Recorder, and 19 Common Councillors, of whom one is elected Deputy Governor.

The City's Estate, in the possession of which the Corporation of London differs from all other municipalities in the Kingdom, is managed by the City Lands Committee, the Chairmanship of which carries with it the title of "Chief Commoner."

The Coal and Corn and Finance Committee manages the funds derived from the City's Estate and other sources and receives accounts of the Bridge House Estates (which are employed in the provision and maintenance of London, Blackfriars, Southwark and Tower Bridges). The cost of Civil Government and other public services, including the maintenance of open spaces outside the City, are met from the City's Cash, which also provides for the expenses of Epping Forest and West Ham Park, open spaces under the management of separate Committees, and the net expense of the City of London School, the City of London School for Girls, the City of London Freeman's School, and the Guildhall School of Music and Drama.

The Rates Finance Committee supervises the expenditure of all moneys derived from the Rates. Expenditure chargeable to the Poor Rate, unlike that from funds under the management of the Coal and Corn and Finance Committee, is subject to audit by the Ministry of Housing and Local Government. The bulk of the Poor Rate is paid to the London County Council and the General Rate is charged with the public health services, including housing, part of the cost of the Police, the net expense of Spitalfields Market, the cost of the Library, Museum and Art Gallery, and the Central Criminal Court.

THE CITY GUILDS (LIVERY COMPANIES)

The Livery Companies of the City of London derive their name from the assumption of a distinctive dress or livery by their members in the 14th century.

The order of precedence (according to 2nd Report of Municipal Corporations' Commissioners, 1837) and omitting extinct companies, is given in parentheses after the name of each Company. There are 81 Guilds in existence. The Comb-makers, Silk-throwers, Silkmen, Pinmakers, Soap-makers, Hatbandmakers, Tobacco Pipe Makers, Long-bow Stringmakers, Woodmongers, Starch-makers and Fishermen are extinct.

About 10,000 Livymen of the Guilds are entitled to vote at elections in Common Hall.

The liveries of the Stationers and Newspaper Makers (406), Shipwrights (500), Carmen (388), Feltmakers (350), and Merchant Taylors (361), are the most numerous, the Bowyers (42) and Wax-chandlers (34) the smallest.

FREEDOMS AND ADDRESSES (CITY OF LONDON)

The Freedom of the City of London may be acquired after strict compliance with regulations made from time to time pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council. The names of applicants by Redemption who have complied with the regulations are submitted to the Court of Common Council for approval, those applying through the medium of a Livery Company being submitted to the Court of Aldermen in a similar manner. Persons entitled to the Freedom of the City by Patrimony or Servitude (according to the Custom of London) may be admitted without application to either Court. The fees payable upon admission to the Freedom are applied towards the maintenance of the City of London Freeman's School at Ashted, Surrey, to which the Orphan sons and daughters of Freemen are eligible for election as resident Foundation Scholars, free of all cost. Freemen of the City of London are themselves eligible for admission to Almshouses at Brixton.

The Freedom of the City of London is conferred by Presentation as a mark of high distinction for exceptional services to the Country, the Commonwealth or to the world at large. As only those persons who owe allegiance to the Crown may be admitted to the Freedom, they alone can be recorded as Freemen. Foreign personages of eminence are, however, occasionally voted the Honorary Freedom, but their names cannot be entered on the Roll of Freemen in view of their nationality. Their names, together with those of the recipients of the Freedom by Presentation, are recorded in the Roll of Fame. Upon occasions when it is desired to honour a person who is already a Freeman of the City, his name is added to the Roll of Fame with a record of the resolution to present him with the Honorary Freedom.

Addresses of Welcome are occasionally offered to Foreign Sovereigns and Presidents pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council.

The Arms of the City of London are heraldically described as Argent, a cross gules (the Cross of St. George), in the first quarter a sword in pale point upwards (the sword of St. Paul), of the last. The erroneous statement on the plinth of the statue of Sir William Walworth in Fishmongers' Hall that "Walworth's dagger" appears in the City Arms, is disproved by copies of the Seal of the Corporation of London on documents prior to Walworth's mayoralty with the sword of St. Paul in the first quarter.

THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL

Offices, The County Hall, Westminster Bridge, S.E.1.

Hours 9.30 to 5 (Monday to Thursday; 5.30 Friday), 9.30 to 12.30 (Saturday).

Meets on alternate Tuesdays at 2.30 p.m.

The London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 117 square miles, with a population of 3,295,000; (the Council's planning policy envisages a reduction to 3,280,000).

The City of London is a county for non-administrative purposes, such as justices, &c., and the Metropolis outside the City is also a county for non-administrative purposes, by name the County of London. The offices of Clerk of the Council and Clerk of the Peace are not held jointly in the County.

The Council comprises 21 aldermen, and 126 councillors, together 147, or, if the chairman of the Council be also an elected member or alderman, 146. The term of office for aldermen is 6 years, and half their number retires every 3 years. The councillors are elected for 3 years, and they elect the aldermen. The position of aldermen and councillors is the same, except as to the method of election and the term of office.

The method by which the Council discharges the multitudinous duties entrusted to it is a generous delegation of powers to committees under well defined rules, subject to the reservation to the Council itself of decisions on questions of finance, matters of principle, and to periodical reports of action taken. In addition to members of the Council, co-opted members are included on the following committees: Children's, Education, Health, Housing and Welfare.

Meetings of the Council are held fortnightly in session time, and the standing committees meet fortnightly, except a few which meet monthly.

The Finance Committee has important statutory powers. No costs, debt or liability exceeding £100 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee. The Council has a net debt, according to the latest returns of £219,046,000 (£182,708,000 represents debt incurred for housing). Its annual expenditure on revenue account is about £89,000,000 and on capital account about £25,000,000. Advances amounting to £7,808,000 have been made on loan under the Housing and Small Dwellings Acquisition Acts to people who wish to buy a home.

The General Purposes Committee is responsible for advising the Council on the more important general questions, allocation of duties to Committees and heads of departments, consultation with other local authorities and government departments, matters relating to legislation, senior staff appointments, the development of the South Bank and the Crystal Palace site and the management of the Royal Festival Hall, and civil defence.

The Children's Committee is charged with the care of some 11,000 deprived and neglected children.

The Education Committee comprises thirty-eight members of the Council and twelve co-opted members. Women as well as men must be included. The Council has adopted the "London School Plan, 1947" as its Development Plan under Section 11 of the Education Act, 1944, and this was approved by the Minister of Education in 1950. Its cost was estimated in 1946 at over £187,000,000.

The Establishment Committee is responsible for the efficient and economical use of manpower and exercise a general control over numbers, grading, pay and conditions of staff (except teachers). The Council employs over 65,000 staff of all grades.

The Fire Brigade Committee is responsible for carrying out the duties laid on the Council by the Fire Services Act, 1947.

The Health Committee, set up under the National Health Service Act, 1946, is responsible for health services provided under that Act and for discharging the functions of the Council under the Lunacy, Mental Treatment and Mental Deficiency Acts. Under this committee are nine Divisional Health Committees, the majority of whose members are drawn from the Corporation of the City of London and the Metropolitan Borough Councils. These divisional committees are entrusted with considerable responsibilities for the day-to-day administration of the personal health services.

The Housing Committee performs the duties placed upon the Council by the various Housing Acts, including the clearance of insanitary areas and the relief of overcrowding. The total capital expenditure incurred up to March 31, 1956, in respect of all schemes was over £230,000,000. The income (rents &c.) for 1956-57 in respect of dwellings and housing estates of the Council is estimated at £15,275,000. The total of the Exchequer subsidy in respect of the Council's housing operations is estimated at £3,639,800.

The Supplies Committee is responsible for supplying stores, etc., arranging contracts for printing etc.

The Rivers and Drainage Committee administer the Metropolitan Main Drainage system which covers about 179 square miles, including certain districts outside the county, and comprises about 420 miles of main, storm-relief, intercepting and outfall sewers, twelve pumping stations, two sewage outfalls, and three sludge vessels. The total capital outlay on main drainage is over £20,000,000, and further expenditure is in progress. This committee is also responsible for Thames flood prevention, the upkeep of the Thames tunnels, most of the Thames bridges and Woolwich Ferry.

The Town Planning Committee deals with questions relating to town-planning, the carrying out of street improvements and construction of bridges, tunnels and ferries, the naming of streets and numbering of houses, the maintenance of historic buildings and monuments, and also regulates under statute such matters as the construction and safety of buildings, building lines, space about buildings, means of escape in case of fire, and dangerous structures.

The County of London Development Plan 1951, which governs the development of the County for a period of twenty years, has been confirmed with minor modifications by the Minister of Housing and Local Government. The Plan is a further step towards realising the long term objectives first published in the County of London Plan in 1943. It attempts to remedy the major defects of London by providing for adequate open space, improved traffic circulation and aims at some reduction of population and industry within over-developed areas. Implementation of the Plan will, it is estimated, cost the Council £540,000,000 in the next twenty years.

The Welfare Committee provides residential accommodation for the aged and infirm and for other people in need of care and attention, including homeless families awaiting rehousing. They are also charged with the welfare of blind and other handicapped persons.

The Parks Committee is responsible for the acquisition and maintenance of parks and open spaces, and the provision of facilities for sport, open-air entertainment and exhibitions in them; the Public Control Committee is responsible for the control of storage of explosive substances and petroleum; testing weights and measures; the granting of licences for music, dancing, boxing and wrestling; administration of the Shops Acts; licensing and inspection of employment agencies; registration of massage establishments; licensing of premises under the Cinematograph Act; registration of motor cars; collection of duties on motor cars, dog, game, gun and certain other local taxation licences.

The expenditure of the Council, including loans to other local authorities, is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by external borrowing, or by the use of the Sinking Fund of the Council's debt, the Superannuation Fund, etc., and current income raised in a county rate or by the revenue of undertakings. Substantial contributions are received from the Exchequer by way of housing subsidies and grants in respect of education, health, children's and fire services. All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure generally within a period of 60 years (in a few cases the limit is 80 years). The total stock outstanding at March 31, 1956, was £101,742,592 and in addition £145,993,500 had been borrowed from the Public Works Loan Board and other sources.

The Rating for the year 1956-57, as shown by the statement below (which relates to rate accounts only), amounted to 6s. 7d. in the pound over the whole county, including the City, and a further rate over the county outside the City of 1d. in the pound, together 6s. 8d. The total rate for 1955-56 was 11s. 0d. The Rateable Value of the County of London, on April 6, 1956 (excluding electricity railway etc., hereditaments de-rated under the Local Government Act, 1948), was estimated to be approximately £105,343,000—a 1d. rate over the whole county producing £418,000. These figures show an increase as a result of the revaluation on April 1, 1956, of approximately 79 per cent.

Bessemer, Sir H. Maxim, Sir J. Barnby, Sir A. Manns, and J. Whitaker, F.S.A. (Whitaker's Almanack). In the churchyard of the former Marylebone Chapel are buried Alan Ramsay (poet), Hoyle (whist), Ferguson (astronomer), Charles Wesley (hymn writer) and his son Samuel Wesley (musician). The chapel itself was demolished in 1949. CREMATORIA.—Ilford (City of London); Norwood; Hendon; Streatham Park; Finchley (St. Marylebone) and Golders Green (12 acres), near Hampstead Heath, with "Garden of Rest" and memorials to famous men and women.

CENOTAPH, Whitehall, S.W.1. — (Literally "empty tomb"). Monument erected "To the Glorious Dead," as a memorial to all ranks of the Sea, Land and Air Forces who gave their lives in the service of the Empire during the First World War. Erected as a temporary memorial in 1919 and replaced by a permanent structure in 1920. Unveiled by King George V. on Armistice Day, 1920. An additional inscription was added after the 1939-45 War, to commemorate those who gave their lives in that conflict.

CHARTERHOUSE, Charterhouse Square, E.C.1 (Master, Rev. Canon J. McL. Campbell, M.C., D.D.; Registrar and Clerk to the Governors, N. Long-Brown, M.A., LL.B.), a Carthusian monastery until 1535, purchased from the Earl of Suffolk in 1611 by Thomas Sutton as a home for aged "Brothers" and a School (at Godalming since 1872). The buildings are partly 14th (but mainly 16th) century. They suffered much damage during the 1939-45 War. Repairs will take until 1957, but 17 "Brothers" are in residence. The maximum will be about 40. No visitors at present. Roger Williams, the founder and governor of Rhode Island, U.S.A., was on June 25, 1621, elected a scholar of Sutton's Hospital. Other famous Carthusians are John Wesley; the poets Crashaw and Lovelace; Addison and Steele; Sir William Blackstone and Thackeray, who described "Greyfriars School" (Charterhouse) in "The New-comers."

CHELSEA PHYSIC GARDEN, Royal Hospital Road, S.W.3.—A garden of general botanical research, established in latter part of 17th century by the Society of Apothecaries, occupies site presented in 1722 by Sir Hans Sloane. Transferred in 1809 to the Trustees of the London Parochial Charities. Tickets of admission for approved students obtainable from the Clerk to the Trustees, 3 Temple Gardens, E.C.4.

Much damaged by bombs in the Second World War. The extensive grounds include the former Ranelagh Gardens. Open daily 10 to 12 and 2 to 4, and on Sunday afternoons. Governor, General Sir Cameron Nicholson, G.C.B., K.B.E., D.S.O., M.C. Lieut.-Governor and Secretary, Major-Gen. N. W. Duncan, C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O.

COLLEGE OF ARMS OR HERALDS' COLLEGE, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.4.—The Royal Officers of Arms (Kings, Heralds and Pursuivants of Arms) were incorporated by Richard III., and granted Derby House on the site of the present College building by Queen Mary I. The building now in use was built after the Fire of London. The Powers vested by the Crown in the Earl Marshal (The Duke of Norfolk) with regard to all State ceremonial, and the granting and use of Armorial Bearings, are exercised through this College. Enquiry may be made to the Officer on duty in the Public Office every day between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Saturdays, 10 to 1.

COUNTY HALL, Westminster Bridge, S.E.1.—The Headquarters of the London County Council (see pp. 645-8) built on the Pedlar's Acre, Lambeth, from the designs of Ralph Knott, with a river façade of 750 ft. Foundation stone laid by His late Majesty King George V., March 9, 1912, and the ceremonial opening of the first three sections of the building by His late Majesty, July 17, 1922. The fourth (or final) section opened January 27, 1933. In 1939 the two central sections of a new building were completed on a site to the east of the main building. Cost about £4,000,000. The main building contains, in addition to office accommodation, the council chamber, a conference hall, committee and conference rooms; education library for teachers; county record office; and a member's library with maps, prints, drawings, books and manuscripts on London, which is open to the public for reference purposes. Librarian, Miss I. Darlington, M.A., F.L.A. The Council, when in session, meets in public in the council chamber fortnightly on Tuesday afternoons at 2.30 p.m. The times for public inspection of the building arc, on Saturdays from 10.30 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1.30 p.m. to 3.30 p.m.; and on Easter Monday, Whit Monday and August Bank Holiday, from 10.30 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1.30 p.m. to 4.30 p.m. Admission free.

CUSTOM HOUSE, Lower Thames Street, E.C.3.—Built early in 19th century, with a wide quay on Thames. The Long Room is about 190 ft. long.

DICKENS HOUSE, 48 Doughty Street, W.C.1.—In this house Charles Dickens lived from 1837 to 1839, and here he completed Pickwick Papers. It is the headquarters of The Dickens Fellowship, and contains many relics of the novelist. It is open to the public daily, 10 to 12.30 and 2 to 5 (Sundays and Bank Holidays excepted); admission 1s.

DR. JOHNSON'S HOUSE, Gough Square, Fleet Street, E.C.4.—An imposing late 17th-century house, in the garret of which, with the aid of six amanuenses, Samuel Johnson compiled his Dictionary. Open daily (except Sundays and Bank Holidays) from 10.30 to 4.30 or 5 (according to season). Admission 1s.

ELY PLACE, Holborn Circus, E.C.1.—The site of the London house of former Bishops of Ely. The 14th-century chapel, now St. Etheldreda's (R.C.) Church, is open daily until dusk; a small charge is made for admission to the crypt.

FULHAM PALACE, Bishop's Avenue, Fulham, S.W.6.—The courtyard is 15th century, remainder 18th century. Residence of the Bishop of London. Grounds of 37 acres, surrounded by ancient moat. Previous application to visit should be made to the Bishop's Secretary.

GEFFRYE MUSEUM, Kingsland Road, E.2. Open on Tuesdays to Saturdays 10 to 5, Sundays 2 to 5. Closed on Christmas Day and on Mondays except Bank Holidays. Admission free.

The Museum is housed in a building erected originally as almshouses in 1715. It was eventually purchased by the London County Council and opened as a museum in 1914. The exhibits are shown in a series of period rooms dating from 1600 to the present day, each containing furniture and domestic equipment of a middle-class English home. Photographic enlargements illustrate the costume of each period. Architectural features, mainly 18th century, an 18th century wood-worker's shop, a downearth kitchen and a gallery of tools are also shown. In an annexe is an exhibition of contemporary furniture which is changed every six months. Temporary exhibitions and periodic series of evening lectures and recitals are held in the Lecture Hall. There is a reference library of books on furniture, social history and art. Special arrangements for children visiting the Museum in school parties and in their leisure time. Curator, Mrs. M. Harrison.

GEORGE INN, Southwark.—Near London Bridge Station. Given to National Trust in 1937. Last galleried inn in London, built in 1677. Open during licensed hours.

GUILDHALL, King Street, City, E.C.2 (dating from early 15th century).—Burnt out by incendiary bombs, 1940. The main hall has been restored. The Library, Museum and Art Gallery adjoining mainly escaped damage, and are in part open to the public. Admission free. The Library (with Commercial Reference Room adjoining) contains Plan of London, 1570; Deed of Sale with Shakespeare's signature; first, second and fourth folios of Shakespeare's plays, etc. Open free on week-days, 9.30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays (May-Sept.), 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Keeper of the Guildhall, F. R. Tomkins.

HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY'S HEAD-QUARTERS, City Road, E.C.1.—The H.A.C. (Sec., Brig. E. Foster Hall, M.C.) received its charter of incorporation from Henry VIII. in 1537, and has occupied its present ground since 1641. The Armoury House dates from 1735. Four of its members who emigrated in the 17th century, founded in 1638 the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts. The H.A.C. is the senior regiment of the Territorial Army.

HORNIMAN MUSEUM AND LIBRARY, London Road, Forest Hill, S.E.23. Open daily except Tuesdays and Christmas Day, 10.30 to 6, Sundays 2 to 6. Admission free. The Museum was presented in 1901 to the London County Council by the founder, Mr. F. J. Horniman, M.P. The Museum has two main departments, one devoted to ethnology and the other to zoology. In the former department the very large collections include exhibits illustrating man's progress in the arts and crafts from primitive times and an outstanding collection of musical instruments. The Zoological department includes an aquarium. The reference library contains twenty thousand volumes dealing with the subjects represented in the Museum. Curator, O. W. Samson.

HORSE GUARDS, Whitehall, S.W.1.—Archway and offices built about 1750. The mounting of the guard (Life Guards, or Royal Horse Guards) at 11 a.m. (10 a.m. on Sundays) and the dismounting at 4 p.m. are picturesque ceremonies. Only those on the Lord Chamberlain's list may drive through the gates and archway into Horse Guards' Parade (230,000 sq. ft.), where the Colour is "trooped" on the Queen's Official Birthday. (Trafalgar Square is 168,850 sq. ft.; Parliament Square, 136,900 sq. ft.; Leicester Square, 100,000 sq. ft.).

HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT, Westminster, S.W.1.—The "Palace of Westminster" was re-built in 1840-68 from the designs of Sir Charles Barry and Augustus Welby Pugin, at a cost of over £2,000,000.—Open to visitors on Saturdays, and on Easter and Whit Mondays and Tuesdays and August Bank Holiday if neither House be sitting. Admission at the Norman Porch, House of Lords, on the above-mentioned days, from 10 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. Admission to the Stranger's Gallery of the House of Commons, during session, by member's order, or order obtained on personal application at the Admission Order Office in St. Stephen's Hall. The present House of Commons was used for the first time on October 26, 1950, the original Chamber having been destroyed by bombs in 1941. The Victoria Tower (House of Lords) is about 330 ft. high, and when Parliament is sitting the Union Jack flies by day from its flagstaff. The Clock Tower of the House of Commons is about 320 ft. high and contains "Big Ben", the Hour Bell, named after Sir Benjamin Hall, First Commissioner of Works when the original bell was cast in 1856. This bell which weighed 16 tons 11 cwt., was found cracked in 1857. The present bell (13½ tons) is a recasting of the original and was first brought into use in July, 1859. A light is displayed from this tower at night when Parliament is sitting.

INNS OF COURT.—The Inner and Middle Temple, S. of Fleet Street, E.C.4, and N. of Victoria Embankment, to which the gardens extend, have occupied (since early 14th century) the site of the buildings of the Order of Knights Templars, the Temple Church (see p. 499), though badly bombed, surviving in part. Middle Temple Hall, damaged by bombing but since repaired and reopened, is Elizabethan, and in Middle Temple Gardens Shakespeare (Henry VI., Part I) places the incident which led to the "Wars of the Roses" (1455-85). Lincoln's Inn, from Chancery Lane to Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.2, occupies the site of the palace of a former Bishop of Chichester and of a Black Friars monastery. It was founded early in the 14th century. The new Hall is modern, the Library is 15th century, and the old Hall early 16th century, the Chapel (Inigo Jones) early 17th century. Lincoln's Inn Fields (7 acres); the Square contains many fine old houses with handsome interiors. Gray's Inn, Gray's Inn Road, W.C.1, was founded in the late 14th century. The 16th-century Hall, where the "Comedy of Errors" was performed in 1504, was reduced to a shell by bombs. The Gardens were laid out (according to tradition) by Lord Chancellor Bacon (died 1626). No other "Inns" are active, but what remains of Staple Inn is worth visiting as a relic of Elizabethan London; though heavy damage was done by a flying-bomb, it retains a picturesque gabled front on Holborn (opposite Gray's Inn Road). Clement's Inn (near St. Clement Dane's Church), Clifford's Inn, Fleet Street, and Thavies Inn, Holborn Circus, are all rebuilt. Serjeants' Inn, Fleet Street (damaged by bombing), and another (now demolished) of the same name in Chancery Lane, were composed of Serjeants-at-Law, the last of whom died in 1922.

JEWISH MUSEUM, Woburn House, Upper Woburn Place, W.C.1.—Opened in 1932, the Museum contains a comprehensive collection of Jewish antiquities, liturgical paraphernalia and "Anglo-Judaica." Open free (Mon.-Thurs.), 2.30-5; (Fri. and Sat.), 10 a.m.-1 p.m.

KEATS HOUSE AND MUSEUM, Keats Grove, Hampstead, N.W.3.—In one of two houses here, now made into one, John Keats lived at various times between 1818 and 1820. The house and the museum are open free, weekdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The special student's library in the adjoining building is open free on weekdays, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. (Monday and Thursday to 8 p.m.)

KENSINGTON PALACE, W.8.—Enlarged by Christopher Wren for King William III. (1691), and continued as a royal residence until 1760. The birthplace of Queen Victoria in 1819. A part of the London Museum Collection is now exhibited at Kensington Palace. Kensington Gardens (q.v.) adjoin.

LAMBETH PALACE, S.E.1.—The official residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury, on south bank of Thames; the oldest part is 13th century, the house itself is early 19th century. Some of the heavy bomb damage done to the Palace was made good in time for the Lambeth Conference of 1948. For leave to visit the historical portions, applications should be made by letter to the Archbishop's Secretary.

LIVERY COMPANIES' HALLS.—The Principal Companies (see pp. 642-3) have magnificent halls, but admission to view them has generally to be arranged beforehand. Among the finest or more interesting may be mentioned the following: Goldsmiths' Hall, Foster Lane. The present hall was completed in 1835, and contains some magnificent rooms. Exhibitions of plate have been shown here periodically in recent years. Fishmongers' Hall, London Bridge (built 1831-3), now admirably restored after severe bomb damage, also contains fine rooms. Apothecaries' Hall, Water Lane, was rebuilt in 1670, after the Great Fire, and has library, hall and kitchen which are good examples of this period, together with a pleasant courtyard. Vintners' Hall, Upper Thames Street, was also rebuilt after the Great Fire, and its hall has very fine late 17th century panelling. The Watermen and Lightermen's Company is not, strictly speaking, a Livery Company, but its hall, in St. Mary at Hill, is a good example of a smaller 18th century building, with pilastered façade. It was completed in 1780. Stationers' Hall, in Stationers' Hall Court, behind Ludgate Hill, another post-Fire Hall, standing in its own court, has a particularly finely carved screen. Barbers' Hall, Monkwell Street, with a Hall attributed to Inigo Jones, was completely destroyed by bombing.

LOYD'S, Leadenhall Street, E.C.3.—Housed in the Royal Exchange for 150 years; new building opened by King George V., March 24, 1928. The underwriting rooms have an area of 27,000 sq. ft. Captains' room on fifth floor.

LORD'S CRICKET GROUND, St. John's Wood Road, N.W.8.—The headquarters (since 1814) of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the premier cricket club in England and the governing body of cricket, the scene of some of the principal matches of the season and Middlesex County headquarters. Tennis Court in building behind members' pavilion, where important games are played.

MANSON HOUSE, City, E.C.4.—(Reconstructed 1930-31.) The official residence of the Lord Mayor; the Egyptian Hall and Ballroom are the chief attractions. Admission by order from the Lord Mayor's Secretary.

MARKETS.—The London markets (administered by the Corporation of the City of London) provide foodstuffs for 8,500,000 to 9,000,000 people. The dead meat market at Smithfield is the largest in the world, the supplies marketed amounting to nearly 500,000 tons annually. Central Meat, Fish, Fruit, Vegetable, and Poultry Markets, Smithfield; Leadenhall Market (Meat and Poultry); Billingsgate (Fish), Thames Street; Spitalfields, E.1 (Vegetables, Fruit, etc.), enlarged 1928, and opened by the late Queen Mary; London Fruit Exchange, Brushfield Street (built by Corporation of London 1928-9) faces Spitalfields Market; Metropolitan Cattle Market and Abattoirs, Caledonian Road, N.1 (at present closed). Other markets are—Covent Garden, W.C.2 (established under a charter of Charles II. in 1661) and Borough Market, S.E.1, for Vegetables, Fruit, Flowers, etc.

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, Pall Mall, S.W.1.—The London home of Queen Mary until her death in 1953. (Not open to the public.)—Built by Wren for the great Duke of Marlborough about 1720, and purchased by the Crown in 1817. Prince Leopold lived there until 1831, and Queen Adelaide from 1837 until her death in 1849. In 1863 it became the London house of the Prince of Wales. The Queen's Chapel, Marlborough Gate, begun in 1623 from the designs of Inigo Jones for the Infanta Maria of Spain, and completed for Queen Henrietta Maria, is open to the public for services during part of the year.

LONDON MONUMENT, (commonly called "The Monument"), Monument Street, E.C.3.—Built from designs of Wren, 1671-77, to commemorate the Great Fire of London, which broke out in Pudding Lane, Sept. 2, 1666. The fluted Doric column is 120 ft. high (the moulded cylinder above the balcony supporting a flaming vase of gilt bronz is 42 ft. in addition), and is based on a square plinth 40 ft. high, with fine carvings on W. face (making a total height of 202 ft.). Splendid views of London from gallery at top of column. Admission 6d., 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. (Oct.-March to 4 p.m.). Sundays—May to Sept., 2-6 p.m. Parties of 20 or more school children in charge of an adult 3d. each.

MONUMENTS.—VICTORIA MEMORIAL in front of Buckingham Palace; ALBERT MEMORIAL, South Kensington; AIR, Victoria Embankment; BEACONSFIELD, Parliament Square; BEATTY and JELICOFF, Trafalgar Square; BELGIAN, Victoria Embankment; BOADICEA (more correctly "Boudicca"), Queen of the Iceni, E. PERCIVAL DAVID FOUNDATION OF CHINESE ART, 53 Gordon Square, W.C.1.—Set up in 1950-51 as a foundation of the University of London, the galleries were opened to the public in June, 1952. The foundation is administered by the School of Oriental and African studies. Its objects are the promotion of the study and teaching of the art and culture of China and its surrounding regions, and the provision of all necessary facilities and material to that end. The Foundation contains the collections of Chinese ceramics formed by Sir Percival David and his important library of books on Chinese art. To these were added in 1952 a gift from the Hon. Mountstuart Elphinstone of part of his collection of Chinese ceramics. Hours of opening: Galleries, Mon. 2 to 5 p.m.; Tues. to Fri. 10.30 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sat. 10.30 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Library, Mon. 2.30 to 4.30 p.m.; Tues. to Fri. 10.30 a.m. to 12.30 p.m.; 2.30 to 4.30 p.m.; Sat. 10.30 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. Curator and Lecturer, Lady David.

PORT OF LONDON.—The Port of London comprises the tidal portion of the River Thames from Teddington to the sea, a distance of 69 miles and five dock systems covering an area of 4,140 acres, of which 673 acres are water. The governing body is the Port of London Authority, whose Head Offices in Trinity Square, E.C.3, were designed by Sir Edwin Cooper. Particulars of the docks are as follow:—London & St. Katharine Docks, E.1.—Area 125½ acres including 45 acres water. Chief commodities handled are Wool, Ivory, Spices, Shells, Tea, Rubber, Wine, Marble, Canned Goods, Hides, Perfumes, etc., and general cargo from Continental and coastwise ports. Surrey Commercial Docks, S.E.16.—Area 381 acres, including 134 acres water. The chief centre of the London and Provincial Soft-wood Trade. Also handles Hardwood, Grain, Canadian Dairy Produce, etc. West India & Millwall Docks, E.14.—Area 466 acres including 133½ acres water. Principal commodities handled are Rum, Sugar, Grain, Hardwood, Fruit, Plywood and Wood pulp. In Millwall Dock a special feature is the Granary. East India Dock, E.14.—Area 49 acres including 23 acres water. Royal Victoria & Albert & King George V. Docks, E.16.—Area 1,102½ acres including 235 acres water—have special facilities for handling Frozen and Chilled Meat, Grain, Tobacco and Bananas. Large quantities of Wool, Fruit, Dairy Produce and general cargo are also dealt with. The King George V. Dock, opened in 1921, provides accommodation for vessels up to 30,000 tons. Tilbury Docks, Essex.—Area 725 acres, including 104 acres water. These docks are 26 miles below London Bridge and are used principally by vessels plying on the Australian, Indian and other Eastern routes. The Cargo Jetty in the River at Tilbury is available for vessels to discharge or load part cargoes. Tilbury Passenger Landing Stage provides accommodation for liners at all states of the tide and adjoins Tilbury Riverside Station, giving direct rail connection with London, the Midlands and the North.

PRINCE HENRY'S ROOM, 17 Fleet Street, E.C.4.—Bought by the L.C.C. in 1900, and open free on weekdays from 1.45 p.m. to 5 p.m. (Saturdays 4.30). It is a timbered 17th-century house, and contains a Jacobean plaster ceiling and Jacobean and Georgian panelling. (Available for evening lettings.—Apply Architect, County Hall, S.E.1.)

ROMAN LONDON.—Though visible remains are very few, almost every excavation for the foundations of new buildings in the City reveals Roman remains. Sections of the City wall, often however merely a mediæval re-build on the Roman foundations, are the most striking remains still to be seen. Fragments may be seen near the White Tower in the Tower of London, Trinity Square, No. 1

Crutched Friars, All Hallows, London Wall—its semi-circular vestry being built on the remains of a round bastion—St. Alphage, London Wall, recently restored by the Corporation of London and showing a striking succession of building and repairs from Roman till later mediæval times. St. Giles, Cripplegate and, by permission only, the great bastion beneath the pavement of the yard of the G.P.O. in Giltspur Street. Recent excavations in the Cripplegate area have revealed that a fort was built in this area and later incorporated in the town wall in this north-west corner of the City. Evidence from these excavations proves that the fort was not built until about 100–120 A.D., and the date of the town wall must therefore be considerably later. Remains of a bath building are preserved beneath the Coal Exchange in Lower Thames Street and other foundations may be seen in the Crypt of All Hallows Barking by the Tower. The governmental headquarters of the town was a great basilica, more than 400 ft. long from east to west, the massive walls of which have been encountered, extending from Leadenhall Market across Gracechurch Street as far as St. Michael's, Cornhill. Excavations during the past few years have shown that buildings over the river front were erected on huge oaken piles and a framework of timber for a considerable distance both east and west of the present London Bridge. The "Roman Bath," in Strand Lane, which is not now held by most authorities to be of Roman origin, is maintained by the L.C.C. on behalf of the National Trust, and is open free to the public on weekdays from 10 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. Excavations since 1948 on a bombed site in Walbrook, on the banks of the old Wall Brook, have produced many interesting discoveries, including a Temple of Mithras, from which the splendid marble statues have been placed in Guildhall Museum, now in the Royal Exchange, where many other relics from the Roman City may be seen.

ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.3 (founded by Sir Thomas Gresham, 1566, opened as "The Bourse" and proclaimed "The Royal Exchange" by Queen Elizabeth I., 1571, rebuilt 1667–69 and 1842–44).—Admission free. Statues of Queen Elizabeth I., Charles II., Queen Victoria, Sir Thomas Gresham, and others; statue of Wellington (Chantry), riding without stirrups, in front of the Exchange and of Peabody in Exchange Avenue at the east end; mural paintings in the ambulatory by Leighton, Abbey, Brangwyn, Wyllie, and others. Part of the Guildhall Museum is now housed in the building. The carillon of the Royal Exchange (reinstated 1950) plays English, Scottish, Irish, Welsh, Canadian and Australian melodies at 9 a.m., 12 noon and 3 and 6 p.m. With the exception of the courtyard ambulatory and the shops the whole of the building is now occupied by the Royal Exchange Assurance, which has had its head office there since 1720.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY, Kensington Gore, S.W.7.—Map Room open to public, free.

ROYAL MINT, Tower Hill, E.C.3 (building erected 1811), where coins for the United Kingdom and abroad are struck. Admission by order only, application for which should be made to the Deputy Master of the Mint, about 6 weeks in advance of intended visit. Hours of admission, 9.30 a.m. to 3 p.m., Mon. to Fri., except Bank Holidays, etc., when the Mint is closed.

ROYAL UNITED SERVICE MUSEUM, WHITEHALL, S.W.1.—Open on weekdays, 10 to 5. Admission: adults 2s., children 1s. Special arrangements for school parties. Services in uniform free. This private Museum is housed in the Banqueting House of Old Whitehall Palace, which was designed by Inigo Jones and completed in 1622. The ceiling consists of magnificent and massive paintings by Rubens. From this building King Charles I walked to the scaffold erected near the present entrance. The exhibits are some of the greatest treasures of the Navy, Army and Air Force, and include models of Trafalgar and Waterloo, dioramas of other famous events from the landing of Julius Caesar to the invasion of Normandy, models of ships and aircraft, and many personal relics of national heroes. Other exhibits are uniforms, medals, swords, small arms, model guns and tanks. Curator, Lieut.-Col. P. S. M. Wilkinson.

ST. JAMES'S PALACE, in Pall Mall, S.W.1.—(Not open to the public.) Built by Henry VIII. (according to tradition, from designs by Holbein); the Gatehouse and Presence Chamber remain, and part of the Chapel Royal, which in 1955 was reopened to the public for services during part of the year. A royal residence from 1698 to 1837. Representatives of Foreign Powers are still accredited "to the Court of St. James's" and (by the permission of the Crown) the Conference of the Allies (1921) and later conferences have been held here.

ST. JOHN'S GATE, Clerkenwell, E.C.1.—Now the Chancery of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and formerly the gate of the Priory of that Order, of which the gate house (early 16th century) and crypt of Church (12th century) alone survive. The gatehouse may be inspected on application to the Secretary at the Chancery.

SIR JOHN SOANE'S MUSEUM, 13 Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.2. The house and galleries, built 1812-24, are the work of the founder, Sir John Soane (1753-1837) and contain his collections, arranged as he left them, in pursuance of an Act procured by him in 1833. Exhibits include the Sarcophagus of Seti I (1370 B.C.), classical vases and marbles, Hogarth's Rake's Progress and Election series, paintings by Canaletto, Reynolds, Turner, Lawrence, etc., and sculpture by Chantrey, Flaxman, etc. Soane's library of 8,000 vols. and a collection of 20,000 architectural drawings are available for study. Open Tues.-Sat. inclusive, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Bank Holidays and throughout August. Curator: J. Summerson, C.B.E., F.B.A. Inspectress: Miss D. Stroud, F.S.A.

SOMERSET HOUSE, Strand, W.C.2, and Victoria Embankment, W.C.2.—The beautiful river façade (600 ft. long) was built at the close of the 18th century from the designs of Sir W. Chambers; the remainder of the building is early 19th century. Somerset House was the property of Lord Protector Somerset, at whose attainder in 1552 the palace passed to the Crown, and it was a royal residence until about the close of the 17th century. The building is now occupied by the Board of Inland Revenue and by the Principal Probate Registry and the office of the Registrar-General of Births, Marriages and Deaths. In the Probate Registry (Central Hall) are the wills of (inter alios) Shakespeare, Milton, Newton, Van Dyck, Pitt, Dr. Johnson, Nelson, Wellington and Burke.

STOCK EXCHANGE, E.C.2.—The foundation stone of the present building was laid in 1801, but the building was almost entirely reconstructed in 1854 from the designs of Thomas Allason. The most notable alteration since that date occurred in 1885 when an east wing was added: this is surmounted by a dome, the apex of which is more than 100 feet above the floor. The area of the floor is about 25,000 square feet. The Stock Exchange provides a market for the purchase and sale of about 10,000 securities quoted in the Stock Exchange Daily Official List and valued at over £33,000,000,000 and also securities listed on other Exchanges. At present the members of the Stock Exchange, who consist of brokers (agents for clients) and jobbers (dealers in specific securities) number about 3,570. Visitors' Gallery (entrance, 8 Throgmorton Street) open between 10.30 a.m. and 3 p.m. from Monday to Friday. Admission free and without ticket.

THAMES EMBANKMENTS.—The Victoria Embankment, on the N. side (from Westminster to Blackfriars), was constructed by Sir J. W. Bazalgette for the Metropolitan Board of Works, 1864-70 (the seats, of which the supports of some are a kneeling camel, laden with spicery, and of others a winged sphinx, were presented by the Grocers' Company, and by Rt. Hon. W. H. Smith, M.P., in 1874); the Albert Embankment on the S. side (from Westminster Bridge to Vauxhall), 1866-69; the Chelsea Embankment, 1871-74. The total cost exceeded £2,000,000. Sir J. W. Bazalgette (1819-92) also inaugurated the London main drainage system, 1858-65. A medallion has been placed on a pier of the Victoria Embankment to commemorate the engineer of the Thames waterside improvements ("Flumini vincula posuit"). The County Hall of the L.C.C. includes an embankment on the Surrey side.

THAMES TUNNELS.—The Rotherhithe Tunnel (foot passengers and vehicles), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1908, connects Commercial Road East, with Lower Road, Rotherhithe; the total length is 1 mile 332 yards, of which 474 yards are under the river. The cost of the tunnel and its approaches was £1,506,924. The Blackwall Tunnel (foot passengers and vehicles), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1897, connects East India Dock Road, Poplar, with Blackwall Lane, East Greenwich. The total length of the tunnel is 1 mile 279 yards, of which 377 yards are under the river. The cost of the tunnel with its approaches was about £1,323,663. Greenwich Tunnel (foot passengers only), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1902, connects the Isle of Dogs, Poplar, with Greenwich. The length of the subway is 406 yards, and the cost was about £180,000. The Woolwich Tunnel (foot passengers only), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1912, connects North and South Woolwich below the passenger and vehicular ferry from North Woolwich Station, E.16, to High Street, Woolwich, S.E.18. The length of the subway is 552 yards, and its cost was about £86,000. The Thames Tunnel (1,300 feet) was opened in 1843 to connect Wapping (N.) with Rotherhithe (S.). In 1866 it was closed to the public, and purchased by the East London Railway Company. The Tower Subway for foot passengers was opened in 1870, and has long been closed.

TOWER HILL, E.C.1 and E.C.3, was formerly the place of execution for condemned prisoners from the Tower, the site of the scaffold being marked in the gardens of Trinity Square. A movement, sponsored by the Council for Tower Hill Improvement, aims at creating more open space around the Tower by the demolition of encroaching buildings and by opening Trinity Square Gardens to the public, thus restoring to Tower Hill its ancient title to be the City's pleasure, or "Board-room."

TOWER OF LONDON, E.C.3.—Admission on weekdays (and on Sundays during the Summer) to a general view of the Tower, the White Tower (Armouries), the Beauchamp and Bloody Towers and the Chapel Royal—1s. Saturdays, admission free; to Jewel House—1s. Half-price for children. The Tower of London is closed on Sundays during the Winter period and on the mornings of the Summer time period, Good Friday and Christmas Day. On Sundays throughout the year the public is admitted to Holy Communion, 8.30 a.m. and Morning Service, 11 a.m. Open on weekdays, May 1 to Sept. 30, 10 a.m. to 5.30 p.m.; Oct. 1 to Apr. 30, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Sundays, first Sunday in May to last in Sept., 2 to 5 p.m. CONSTABLE, Field-Marshal The Lord Wilson, G.C.B., G.B.E., D.S.O.; LIEUTENANT, Lieut.-Major Sir Oliver Leese, Bt., K.C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O.; MAJOR AND RESIDENT GOVERNOR, Brigadier L. F. E. Wieler, C.B., C.B.E.; KEEPER OF THE JEWEL HOUSE, Maj.-General H. D. W. Sitwell, C.B., M.C.; MASTER OF THE ARMOURIES, Sir James Mann, F.S.A.

The White Tower is the oldest and central building in Her Majesty's Royal Palace and Fortress of the Tower of London. It was built at the order of William I. and constructed by Gundulph, Bishop of Rochester, in the years 1078-98. The inner Wall, with thirteen towers, was constructed by Henry III. in the 12th century. The Moat was extended and completed by Richard I. and the Wharf first mentioned in 1228. The Outer Wall was completed in the reign of Edward I. and now incorporates 6 towers and 2 bastions. The last Monarch to reside in the Tower of London was James I. The Crown Jewels came to the Tower in the reign of Henry III. All coinage used in Great Britain was minted in the Outer Ward of the Tower of London until 1810 when the Royal Mint was formed. The Tower of London has had a military garrison since 1078.

WELLINGTON MUSEUM, Apsley House, Hyde Park Corner, W.1.—Admission on weekdays and Bank Holidays, 10 to 6; Sundays, 2.30 to 6. Closed Good Friday and Christmas Day. Adults 15., Children, 6d. Apsley House was designed by Robert Adam for Lord Bathurst and built 1771-8. It was bought in 1817 by the Duke of Wellington, who employed Benjamin Wyatt to enlarge it, face it with Bath stone and add the Corinthian portico. The Museum contains works of art and personal relics belonging to the 1st Duke of Wellington (1769-1852) and was given to the Nation by the present Duke, the gift being implemented by the Wellington Museum Act, 1947. It was first opened to the public in 1952, under the administration of the Victoria and Albert Museum.

WESTMINSTER HALL, S.W.1 (built by William Rufus, A.D. 1087-1100 and altered by Richard II, 1377-99), adjacent to and incorporated in the Houses of Parliament.—Westminster Hall is part of the old Palace of Westminster and survived the fire, which destroyed most of the remainder of the Palace (Oct. 16, 1834). The Hall is about 240 ft. long, 68 ft. wide, and 90 ft. high. The hammer beam roof of carved oak, dating from 1399, is one of the principal attractions. King Charles I. was tried in the Hall. Extensive repairs to the Hall have recently been carried out. Admission: During sessions—Mon. to Thurs., 10 a.m. until one hour before House of Commons meets. Sat., 10 a.m.—4 p.m. During Recess—Mon. to Sat., except Good Friday and Christmas Day, 10 a.m.—4 p.m.

ENVIRONS OF LONDON

BARNET AND HADLEY GREEN.—Scene of Battle, A.D. 1471. Hadley Woods.

BURNHAM BEECHES and FLEET WOOD, Bucks.—Magnificent wooded scenery (425 acres), purchased by the Corporation of London for the benefit of the public in 1879; Fleet Wood (65 acres) presented in 1921. During summer omnibus runs daily, Sundays included, from Slough Station (Western Region), passing within 250 yards of "Gray's Elegy" Church, see "Stoke Poges."

BUSHY PARK (1,100 acres).—Adjoining Hampton Court, contains many fine trees and avenue of horse-chestnuts enclosed in a fourfold avenue of limes, planted by King William III. "Chestnut Sunday" (when the trees are in full bloom with their "candles") is usually about 1st to 15th May.

CHEQUERS, a country residence for Prime Ministers, was presented to the Nation (with an endowment to maintain the estate, etc.) by Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham, as the official country residence for the Prime Minister of the day, and the gift was approved by Parliament in the Chequers Estate Act, 1917. In 1921 the Chequers Estate of 700 acres was added to the gift by Lord Lee. Chequers is a mansion in Tudor style in the Chilterns, about 3 miles from Princes Risborough, Bucks, and contains a collection of Cromwellian portraits and relics.

CHILTERN HUNDREDS (Stoke, Burnham and Desborough, in Buckinghamshire).—No duly elected member of the Commons can resign his seat; he must apply for some office of profit under the Crown, and so vacate his seat under the Act of Settlement, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 7), and the usual practice is to apply for the Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, or of the Manor of Poyninges, or Northstead, or the Escheatorship of Munster, whereupon the seat is declared vacant (under the Place Act of 1742, which expressly permitted acceptance of such offices to serve as an excuse for resignation) and a new writ is issued by the Speaker.

CUFFLEY, Herts.—Memorial to Capt. W. L. Robinson, VC, on spot above which the first German Zeppelin (L 21) was destroyed.

DARWIN AND DOWN HOUSE, Downe, Farnborough, Kent.—Where Charles Darwin thought and worked for 40 years and died in 1882. Maintained by the British Association. Open free daily (except Fridays and Christmas Day) 11 to 5.

DULWICH, S.E.21 (5 miles from London), contains Dulwich College (founded by Edward Alleyn in 1610), the Horniman Museum and Dulwich Park (72 acres). The Dulwich Picture Gallery, built by Sir John Soane to house the collection bequeathed by the artist, Sir Francis Bourgeois, was damaged by enemy action in the Second World War. The pictures, however, were saved, and the gallery has been rebuilt with the aid of a grant from the Pilgrim Trust. It was reopened by Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother on April 27, 1953. In Dulwich Village the rural characteristics of the pre-suburban period are preserved.

ELTHAM, Kent (20 miles from London by Southern Region). Remains of 13th-15th century Eltham Palace, the birthplace of John of Eltham (1316), son of Edward II. The hall, built by Edward IV., contains fine hammer-beam roof of chestnut. In the churchyard of St. John the Baptist is the tomb of Thomas Doggett, the comedian and founder of the Thames Watermen's championship (Doggett's Coat and Badge).

ENFIELD, Middlesex (10 miles from London by Eastern Region).—Parish Church contains well-preserved brasses and monuments.

EPHING FOREST (6,000 acres, originally purchased by the Corporation of London for £250,000 and thrown open to the public in 1882; the present forest is 12 miles long by 1 to 2 miles wide, about one-tenth of its original area). LOUGHTON, BUCKHURST HILL, CHINGFORD, HIGH BEECH (London Transport and Eastern Region). Beautiful forest scenery.

ETON COLLEGE.—22 miles from London. The most famous of English schools, founded by Henry VI. in 1440, the scholars numbering 1,160 in July, 1952. Buildings date from 1442.

GRAVESEND, a borough and river port, 22 miles from London (Southern Region). St. George's Church (1727) contains memorials to Princess Pocahontas, who was buried in the former church in 1617.

GREENWICH, S.E.10.—A south-eastern metropolitan borough with a frontage of 4½ miles on the Thames. Greenwich Hospital (since 1873, the Royal Naval College) was built by Charles II., from designs by Inigo Jones, and by Queen Anne and William III., from designs by Wren, on the site of an ancient royal palace, and of the more recent Placentia, an enlarged edition of the palace, constructed by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester (1392-1447), son of Henry IV. Henry VIII., Queen Mary I. and Queen Elizabeth I. were born in the Royal Palace (which reverted to the Crown in 1447) and King Edward VI. died there. In the principal quadrangle is a marble statue of George II., by Rysbrack. (For National Maritime Museum, see p. 409). Painted Hall and Chapel open daily except Thursdays from 2.30 p.m. to 5 p.m. in summer months. During winter months they are also closed on Sundays. Visitors are also admitted to Morning Service in the Chapel at 11 a.m., summer and winter, except during College vacations. Greenwich Park (185 acres) was enclosed by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and laid out by Charles II., from the designs of Le Nôtre. On a hill in Greenwich Park is the old Royal Observatory (founded 1675), which is now for the most part removed to Herstmonceux Castle, Sussex (see p. 412). Part of its buildings at Greenwich have been taken over by the Maritime Museum. The parish church of Greenwich (St. Alfege) was rebuilt by Hawksmoor (Wren's pupil) in 1718, and contains a pulpit and other carvings attributed to Grinling Gibbons. It was much damaged in the 1939-45 War. General Wolfe (Heights of Abraham) and Tallis ("the father of Church Music") are buried in the church. Henry VIII. was christened in the former church. The Ministerial Whitebait Dinner, at the "Ship" Hotel, was held in 1894.

HAM HOUSE, Petersham.—A notable example of 17th-century domestic architecture, long the home of the Tollemache family (Earls of Dysart). Now the property of the National Trust, which has let it on a long lease to the Ministry of Works. The contents, described as "probably the finest and most varied collection of Charles II.'s reign to survive," were purchased by the Nation, and the house is administered by the Victoria and Albert Museum. The house was opened to the public in May, 1950, and may be seen on weekdays (April-October) from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and on Sunday from 2.30 to 6 p.m.; (November-March) weekdays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays 2.30 to 4 p.m. Admission, 1s; Children, 6d.

HAMPTON COURT.—Sixteenth-century Palace built by Cardinal Wolsey, with additions by Sir Christopher Wren for William and Mary, 15 miles from London. Fine view of river. Beautiful gardens with maze and prolific grape vine (planted in 1768). Old Royal Apartments and collection of pictures. Tennis Court, built by King Henry VIII. in 1530. The Palace is closed on Christmas Day and Good Friday. The State Apartments and Great Hall are open (May-Sept.), weekdays, 9.30-6; Sundays, 12-6; (March, April and October), weekdays, 9.30-5; Sundays, 2-5; (Nov.-Feb.), weekdays, 9.30-4. Sundays, 2-4. Admission, 1s.; children half-price. Admission to the Tudor Kitchen, Wine Cellars and Great Hall cellars, 3d. (inclusive charge), no half-price. Orangery (Mantegna Pictures) open as State Apartments, 3d., no half-price. Tennis Court open daily from 2 p.m. till time of closing of State Apartments, April to Sept. Admission 3d. The Vine, admission 2d., and the Maze, admission 3d., are open daily from 10.30 a.m. until 20 mins. before dusk. Tickets obtainable at the King's Staircase. The Banqueting House is open on Mon., Tues., Thurs. and Fri. (April-Sept.) from 2 p.m. to the time of closing of the State Apartments. Admission 1s., children half-price. Refreshments can be obtained in the Tilt Yard gardens during the summer season. Bushy Park adjoins the Lion Gates of Hampton Court Palace.

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL.—10 miles by Metropolitan and other railways. Large public school (about 550 scholars), founded by John Lyon in 1571. The "Fourth Form Room" dates from 1608.

HUGHENDEN MANOR, High Wycombe, Bucks.—The home of Disraeli from 1847 till his death and contains much of his furniture, books, etc. Conveyed to the National Trust in 1947. Open daily including Sundays and Monday Bank Holidays (but not other Mondays and not the day after a Monday Bank Holiday), 2-6 or till dusk. Open also Saturdays and Sundays, 10-1. Closed all January. Admission (non-members), 1s. 6d.; educational parties of 10 or more, 9d.

JORDANS AND CHALFONT ST. GILES, near Beaconsfield, Bucks, contain the Old Quaker Meeting House (1688) at Jordans, in the burial ground of which lies William Penn (Pennsylvania); a barn built out of the timbers of the Mayflower by the 17th-century owner of Jordans (Gardener). At Chalfont St. Giles is the cottage where Milton lived during the Great Plague (1665-1666).

KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES, Surrey (about 12 miles from London), is the ancient place of coronation of the Kings of Saxon England. The Coronation Stone (hence the name "King's Stone") is preserved within railings adjoining the Guildhall.

OSTERLEY PARK, Isleworth.—House and park of 300 acres given to the National Trust by the Earl of Jersey in 1949. Part of the Elizabethan house, built in 1577 for Sir Thomas Gresham, remains, but it was largely remodelled by Robert Adam, and the staterooms are among the best examples of Adam decoration. (Hours of opening, Mon. to Sat., 10 to 6; Sun., 2.30 to 6. April 1 to September 30 only. Admission 1s., Children 6d.)

RICHMOND, Surrey, contains the red brick gateway of Richmond Palace (Henry VII., 1485-1509) and buildings of the Jacobean, Queen Anne, and early Georgian periods, including White Lodge in Richmond Park, the former home of Queen Mary's mother (the Duke of Windsor was born there, June 23, 1894). The Star and Garter Home for Disabled Soldiers, Sailors, and Airmen (the Women's Memorial of the Great War) was opened by Queen Mary in 1924. Richmond Park (2,358 acres) contains herds of fallow and red deer. From the Terrace Gardens, Richmond Hill, can be obtained a wonderful view of the Valley of the Thames.

RUNNIMED.—A meadow of about 100 acres, on S. bank of Thames (part of the Crown Lands), between Windsor and Staines. From June 15-23, 1215, the hostile Barons encamped on this meadow during negotiations with King John, who rode over each day from Windsor. The 48 "Articles of the Barons" were accepted by the King on June 15, and were subsequently embodied in a charter, since known as Magna Carta, of which several copies were sealed on June 19. About half a mile N.E. of the meadow is Magna Carta Island (claimed as the actual site of the sealing), presented to the National Trust in 1930 by Lady Fairhaven and her sons.

A memorial at Cooper's Hill, near Runnymede, to members of the Commonwealth air forces who lost their lives in the Second World War while serving from bases in the United Kingdom and north-western Europe and have no known grave, was unveiled by the Queen on October 17, 1953.

ST. ALBANS.—A city in Hertfordshire, on the river Ver, 22 miles N.W. of London. The abbey church, built partly of materials from the old Roman city of Verulamium by Paul of Caen, was consecrated in 1115. Parts still remain of the Norman structure. The city was the scene of the overthrow of Henry VI. in 1455, and of the Earl of Warwick in 1461. On a printing press set up in the abbey the first English translation of the Bible was printed. The site of the pre-Roman city of King Tasciovanus and the remains of the ancient City of Verulamium, with well preserved theatre and many other features, excavated in recent years. St. Michael's Church, with tomb of Lord Bacon.

STOKE POGES (½ miles from Slough station, Western Region) contains the 14th-century Church with the Churchyard of Gray's "Elegy" and "Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College." The poet was buried in the church in 1772.

SYON HOUSE, Brentford.—The town seat of the Duke of Northumberland. The house is part of the buildings of the Nunnery of Syon, erected by permission of Henry VI. in 1431. At the Dissolution of the Nunnery the Estate reverted to the Crown. In 1578 it was granted to the 9th Earl of Northumberland and in 1632 the house was repaired under superintendence of Inigo Jones. In 1766 the interior was transformed by Robert Adam, who also built the entrance gateway. The lion on the river-front was brought here in 1874 on the demolition of Northumberland House in the Strand. Open (July-Sept.) Weekdays except Monday; (June and October) Weds.-Sat. only, 1 p.m. to 4.30 p.m. Admission 2s. 6d.; Children, 1s.

WALTHAM ABBEY (or WALTHAM HOLY CROSS), 13 miles from London (Eastern Region).—The Abbey ruins, Harold's Bridge (11th century), the Nave of the former cruciform Abbey Church (the oldest Norman building in England (consecrated May 3, 1066) and the traditional burial place of King Harold II. (1066), and a Lady Chapel of Edward II., with crypt below. New evidence of the position and style of several buildings, which once stood on the site of the Augustinian monastery, were revealed by the prolonged drought in the summer of 1933. At Waltham Cross, 1 mile from the Abbey, is one of the crosses (partly restored) erected by Edward I. to mark a resting place of the corpse of Queen Eleanor on its way to Westminster Abbey. (Ten crosses were erected, but only those at Geddington, Northampton and Waltham remain; "Charing" Cross originally stood on the spot now occupied by the statue of Charles I. at Whitehall.)

WINDSOR CASTLE (begun by William the Conqueror, A.D. 1066-87).—22 miles from London, by Western and Southern Regions. The Castle Precincts are open daily, free of charge, from 10 a.m. to sunset. Official Guides are in attendance from 10 to 4, Oct. to March, and from 10 to 5, April to Sept. When the Court is not in residence, the State Apartments of Windsor Castle are open to the public, during Her Majesty's pleasure, on every weekday. When the State Apartments are open the charges for admission are for Adults, 1s., and for Children, 6d. By the Queen's command, the proceeds go to charities. An authorized guide book can be obtained at the office, price 1s. 3d. The hours of admission to the State Apartments are from April 1 to May 31, and Oct. 1 to 31 between 11 and 4; June 1 to Sept. 30, 11 to 5; and from Nov. 1 to March 31, between 11 and 3. The Queen's Doll's House and the Old Master Drawings can be seen on the same days and hours as the State Apartments, admission 6d. each person to each. The Albert Memorial Chapel is open on the same days and at the same hours as the State Apartments (except between 1 and 2 p.m.); the Round Tower or Keep is open from April 1 to Sept. 30 (except when the Royal Standard is flying), the same days and hours as the State Apartments. Admission free. St. George's Chapel may be viewed on Mon.-Thurs., between 11 a.m. and 3.45 p.m.; Fridays, 1 p.m. to 3.45 p.m.; Sundays, 2.30 to 4 p.m. Admission 1s. per person, except at service times. The Chapel is usually closed during January. The Daily Services in the Chapel are open to the public. The Cusfew Tower may be seen under the guidance of the Keeper, to whom application must be made at the entrance (Admission 6d.). The Royal Mausoleum, Frogmore Gardens, Home Park, is open only on Whit Monday, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission Free.

THE PRINCIPAL ENGLISH CITIES

BIRMINGHAM

BIRMINGHAM (Warwickshire) is the second City in England and the chief centre of the hardware trade. It is practically equidistant from the other important trade centres in the country, being 111 miles from London, 85 miles from Manchester and 91 miles from Bristol. The municipal area is 51,147 acres (about 80 square miles), with a population (1951 census) of 1,112,685; estimated, June, 1955, 1,111,700.

It is estimated that over 1,500 distinct trades are carried on in the city, the chief industries being the manufacture of buttons, bedsteads, plastic goods, chocolate, chemicals, cycles, electro-plate, guns, machine tools, railway rolling-stock, glass, motor-cars and motor-cycles, motor tyres, nuts and bolts, pens and nibs, tubes, paint and enamels, tools, toys, electrical apparatus, wire, jewellery and brass working, etc.

Water is supplied by the City Corporation, who also own the transport undertaking, markets and Municipal Bank. The first section of Birmingham's new Hospital Centre, erected at Edgbaston at a cost of approximately £1,000,000, is claimed to be the finest of its type in Europe. The city has plans for the construction of an inner ring road round the centre of the city, with many improvements in the shopping centre and a re-development of industrial areas. The first part of a new Central Technical and Commercial College was opened by H.M. the Queen in 1955. The first section of a new Civic Centre was completed early in the war of 1939-45, and a Municipal Restaurant service is now in operation. The water supply from Mid-Wales has been further improved by the damming of the Claerwen at a cost of approximately £1,700,000.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, built in 1832-1850; the Council House and Corporation Art Gallery and Museum (1878); Victoria Law Courts (1891); the University (1909); the Central Library; the 13th century Church of St. Martin (rebuilt 1873); the Cathedral (formerly St. Philip's Church), the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Chad (Pugin), and the Methodist Central Hall. Birmingham was incorporated as a borough in 1838, and was created a city in 1889; it is governed by a Lord Mayor and City Council of 38 Aldermen and 114 Councillors. The generally accepted derivation of "Birmingham" is the ham or dwelling-place of the mg or the family of Beorma presumed to have been a Saxon. Between the 11th and 16th centuries the de Berminghams were Lords of the Manor.

Lord Mayor and Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), E. W. Apps.

Stipendiary Magistrate, John Frederic Milward (1951).

Town Clerk, J. F. Gregg (1949).

Clerk of the Peace, G. M. Butts.

LIVERPOOL

LIVERPOOL (Lancashire), on the right bank of the river Mersey, 3 miles from the Irish Sea and 194 miles N.W. of London, is one of the greatest trading centres of the world and the principal port in the United Kingdom for the Atlantic trade. The municipal area is 30,701 acres (which includes 2,883 acres in the bed of the river Mersey) (about 43 square miles, excluding the bed of the river), with a population at the census of 1951 of 789,532; estimated, June 1955, 779,900. Quays on both sides of the river are about 38 miles long, and the Gladstone Dock can accommodate the largest vessels afloat. The dock authority is the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board. A system of harbour supervision radar was inaugurated on July 31, 1948. The chief import is grain, those next in importance being sugar, fruit, oil, timber, cotton and provisions.

The Corporation owns large industrial estates at Speke, Kirkby and Aintree, on which many modern factories have been built. Speke and Aintree are now almost fully developed, and at Kirkby new land is constantly being leased, bringing many new industries into the area. In 1943 a lease for 99 years was taken of the Elizabethan mansion at Speke Hall at a nominal rent.

The principal buildings are the Cathedral, erected from the designs of Sir Giles Gilbert Scott and consecrated in 1924; when completed this will be the largest ecclesiastical building in England; St. George's Hall, erected 1838-1854, and regarded as one of the finest modern examples of classical architecture; the Town Hall, erected 1754 from the designs of Wood; the Walker Art Gallery; the University; the Royal Infirmary; the Municipal Offices; and the Philharmonic Hall. A Roman Catholic Cathedral is in course of erection at Brownlow Hill.

The Mersey Tunnel (Queensway) connecting Liverpool and Birkenhead is one of the most important engineering achievements of recent years; begun in 1925, it was opened to traffic on July 18, 1934, the total cost being estimated at £7,077,800. In 1955-56, 10,110,105 vehicles passed through it.

Liverpool was incorporated as a borough early in the 13th century and was created a city in 1880. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor and a City Council of 40 Aldermen and 120 Councillors. The name is believed to be derived from Norse words meaning the "Pool of the Slopes."

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), J. Sheehan.
Recorder, Neville Laski, Q.C. (1956).
Stipendiary Magistrate, Arthur McFarland (1947).
Presiding Judge, Court of Passage, G. Glynn Blackledge, M.C., Q.C. (1950).

MANCHESTER

MANCHESTER (Lancashire) (the Mancunium of the Romans, who occupied it in A.D. 78) is the centre of the world's cotton trade, 189 miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 27,255 acres (about 43 square miles), the population at the census of 1951 being 703,175; estimated, June, 1955, 692,200.

Manchester is the distributing centre of the cotton spinning and weaving of Lancashire for the whole world, and of butter and foodstuffs for the most densely populated part of England. Within 25 miles of its centre a population of 4,500,000 lives and works. It also contains large engineering and machinery works and factories of hats, clothing, india-rubber goods, chemicals, etc. The city is connected with the sea by the Manchester Ship Canal (opened in 1894), which has a total length of 35½ miles, an excavated depth of 28 to 30 feet, and a general excavated bottom width of 120 feet. The municipal airport has direct passenger services to America, Canada and to six European countries, and freight services to the United States, Europe and Africa.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, erected in 1877 from the designs of Alfred Waterhouse, R.A., together with a large extension; the Royal Exchange, built in 1869 and enlarged in 1921; the Central Library (1934); the Art Gallery; the Whitworth Institute; the 17th century Chetham Library; the Rylands Library (1899), which includes the Althorp collection; the University (Owens College); the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the parish church) and the Free Trade Hall. Manchester is one of the principal centres of political, literary and scientific advancement, and the Hallé Concerts have placed the city in the forefront of musical development. The Manchester Guardian newspaper exercises a widespread influence throughout the English-speaking world.

The town received a charter of incorporation in 1838 and was created a city in 1853. The City Council consists of 38 Aldermen and 114 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), H. Sharp.
Recorder, Basil Nield, Q.C. (1956).
Stipendiary Magistrate, F. B. Turner (1951).
Town Clerk, Philip B. Dingle, C.B.E. (1944).

SHEFFIELD

SHEFFIELD (Yorkshire, West Riding), the centre of the special steel and cutlery trades, is situated in the extreme south of Yorkshire, 159 miles N.N.W. of London, at the junction of the Sheaf, Porter, Rivelin and Loxley with the river Don. The city has an area of 39,598 acres (nearly 62 square miles), including 3,294 acres of parks and woodland, and a population (1951 census) of 522,834; estimated, June, 1955, 501,100. The manufacture of cutlery has been carried on at least since the fifteenth century and probably much earlier; since the invention of the crucible steel process of Benjamin Huntsman about 1740 the special steel trade has rivalled cutlery in fame. Fine steel and fine cutlery are still the staple products; other industries of more recent growth which have evolved naturally from the older include the manufacture of armour plate, guns, rails, tyres, axles, engine castings, general machinery, etc., and precision tools and instruments. Old Sheffield plate (silver sealed to copper by process of fusion, invented by Thomas Boulsover in 1742, and made from that date until it was superseded by electroplating) is greatly prized by collectors, and there is still a considerable silver and plate trade. The city is a world centre for research in the manufacture and use of glass. Iron and brass founding, silver refining, brush-making, the making of confectionery, and canning are also important.

The parish church of St. Peter and St. Paul, founded in the twelfth century, became the Cathedral Church of the Diocese of Sheffield in 1914. It was rebuilt in the 15th century, and the tower and part of the chancel of that building remain, though the rest is modern. The principal modern buildings are the Town Hall (1807 and 1923), the Cutler's Hall (1832), City Museum (1937), the University (1905 and recent extensions), City Hall (1932), and Central Library and Graves Art Gallery (1934).

Sheffield was created a borough on Aug. 24, 1843, a county borough in 1888 and a city in 1893.

the Mayor becoming a Lord Mayor in 1897. It was made an Assize Town in 1955. The Corporation consists of 25 Aldermen and 75 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor, (1856-57), R. Neill.

Recorder, N. L. C. Macaskie, Q.C. (1947).

Master Cutler (1956-57) (Master of the Company of Cutlers in Hallamshire), Sir Peter G. Roberts, Bt., M.P.

Town Clerk, John Heys, C.B.E. (1942).

LEEDS

LEEDS (Yorkshire, West Riding) is favourably situated in the coal and iron districts of England, 185 miles N.N.W. of London, and is a centre of the woollen industry and the wholesale clothing trade. The city has also the largest share of the leather trade of the United Kingdom, in addition to large rope works, printing works, and factories of thread, glass and earthenware, with metal casting, machinery and machine tools, steam engines, railway wagons, and other engineering works. Leeds is connected with the Mersey in the west by the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, with the Humber in the east by the Aire and Calder Navigation, and is an important railway centre.

The municipal area is 38,297½ acres (nearly 60 square miles), the population at the census of 1951 being 504,954; estimated, June, 1955, 507,400.

The principal buildings are the Civic Hall (opened by King George V. in 1933), the Town Hall (1858), the Philosophical Hall, the Municipal Buildings and Art Gallery (1884), the University and the Leeds Institute (1865). The Parish Church (St. Peter's) was rebuilt in 1840; the 17th century St. John's Church has a fine interior with a famous Renaissance screen; the 17th century Mill Hill Chapel was rebuilt in 1849. Kirkstall Abbey (about 3 miles from the centre of the city), founded by Henry de Laci in 1152, is one of the most complete examples of Cistercian houses now remaining. Temple Newsam, birthplace of Lord Darnley, was acquired by the Corporation in 1922. The present mansion, a stately edifice in red brick, was built by Sir Arthur Ingram in 1620. Adel Church, about 3½ miles from the centre of the city, is a fine Norman structure.

Leeds was first incorporated by Charles I. in 1626, made a county borough in 1889, and was created a city in 1893. The Lord Mayor presides over a corporation of 28 Aldermen and 84 Councillors. The earliest forms of the name are Loids or Ledes, the origin of which is obscure.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), T. A. Jessop.

Recorder, G. R. Hinchcliffe, Q.C. (1950).

Stipendiary Magistrate, Ralph Cleworth, Q.C. (1950).

Town Clerk, R. Crute (1952).

BRISTOL

BRISTOL, situated on the borders of Gloucestershire and Somerset, is a City and County of itself, and is 119 miles W. of London. The present municipal area is 26,345 acres, with a population, at the census of 1951, of 442,281; estimated, June, 1955, 442,500.

Among the various industries are aircraft design and construction, paints, jams, pickles, preserves, milling, shipbuilding, rope making, chocolate, sugar and tobacco factories, motor and general engineering, clothing, printing, paper bag and cardboard making, glass and earthenware, soap, leather and chemical works, breweries and copper, lead and iron works. Bristol is noted for its maritime history and the docks within the Port are the City Docks, 6 miles from the entrance to the river Avon; the Royal Edward and Avonmouth Docks, at the mouth of the river; and the Portishead Docks, to the west of the river entrance. The principal imports are grain, cereal products, feeding stuffs, bananas and other fruit, provisions, frozen meat, sugar, metals, ores, oil-seeds, paper, petroleum and petroleum spirit, timber, tobacco, wood pulp and general merchandise, and the chief exports are machinery, chemicals, stromtia, unmanufactured clay, cars, tractors and prefabricated buildings.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 14th century Cathedral (with later additions), with Norman Chapter House and gateway, the 14th century Church of St. Mary, Redcliffe (described by Queen Elizabeth I. as "the fairest, goodliest, and most famous parish church in England"), and Wesley's Chapel, Broadmead, are the Merchant Venturers' Almshouses, the Council House, Guildhall, Exchange (erected from the designs of John Wood in 1743), Art Gallery, Central Library, Cabot Tower, the University and Clifton College, Red Lodge (Tudor), Georgian House, and Blaise Castle and Mansion with Folk Museum. The Clifton Suspension Bridge, with a span of 702 feet over the Avon, was projected by Brunel in 1836 but was not completed until 1864. The beautiful Clifton Down adjoins Durdham Down (making a total of 442 acres), with Leigh Woods and Nightingale Valley on the opposite side of the river.

Bristol was a Royal Borough before the Norman Conquest. In 1373 it received from Edward III. a charter granting it county status and in 1899 its Mayor became a Lord Mayor. The Corporation includes 28 Aldermen and 84 Councillors. The earliest forms of the name are Brigstowe and Bristow.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), G. Watson-Allan.

High Steward and Lord Lieutenant, His Grace the

Town Clerk, Alexander Pickard, C.B.E. (1945).

KINGSTON UPON HULL

HULL (officially "Kingston upon Hull") is situated in the East Riding of Yorkshire, at the junction of the Hull with the Humber, 22 miles from the North Sea and 181 miles N. of London. The municipal area is 14,493 acres, with a population of 299,105 at the census of 1951; estimated, June 1955, 299,600.

Hull is the third port in the United Kingdom and the chief port of North-Eastern England. Eight docks cover a water area of 200 acres and are equipped with every modern appliance for the rapid handling of cargoes. Hull has the reputation of being the cheapest port in the U.K. It is a large oil-extracting centre, has great saw-milling, engineering and chemical industries, is the premier fishing port of the U.K. and an important centre of the flour-milling industry.

The chief buildings, in addition to the Docks, are the Parish Church (Holy Trinity), 272 feet in length (the longest parish church in England), the Guildhall (1915), Chamber of Commerce, Market Hall, City Hall, Custom House, Dock Offices, Wilberforce House, Trinity House (1753), the Ferens Art Gallery, and the University.

The city suffered heavy damage through air raids during the war and reconstruction, particularly of the city centre, is now well advanced.

The name of Wyke-upon-Hull was changed to Kingston upon Hull by Edward I. in the 13th century. In 1440, by Charter of Henry VI, the town was incorporated and was created a county with power to elect a Sheriff. A county borough since 1888, Kingston upon Hull was created a city by Queen Victoria in 1897 when the office of Mayor was raised to that of Lord Mayor. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 21 Aldermen and 63 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), H. Kneeshaw.
Recorder, G. de P. Veale, Q.C. (1954).
Stipendiary Magistrate, D. N. O'Sullivan (1952).
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, E. H. Bullock (1945).

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE (Northumberland), a City and a County on the north bank of the Tyne estuary, 8 miles from the North Sea and 27½ miles N. of London, has an area of 11,401 acres (18 square miles) and a population of 291,723 at the census of 1951; estimated, June, 1955, 281,000.

The city is conveniently placed on the estuary, in the centre of the Northumberland and Durham coalfields. The exports of the Port of Newcastle upon Tyne (River Tyne) include coal and coke, sulphate of ammonia, oil fuel (as cargo and bunkers), machinery, iron and steel manufactures, tar and pitch, petroleum spirit and other oils, textiles, firebricks and fireclay goods, grain and animal feeding stuffs; the chief imports are iron ore, metals and minerals, iron and steel manufactures and scrap, oil fuels and other oils, petroleum spirit, timber, grain, fertilisers, cement, fish, fruit and vegetables, and provisions. The chief industries are coal mining, shipbuilding, ship repairing, iron and steel manufactures, engineering and boiler-making shops, locomotives, lead works, chemical manufactures, flour milling, etc.

The principal buildings include the (11th century) "New" Castle, of which the walls, keep and chapel are well preserved, the Cathedral (St. Nicholas), St. Andrew's Church (11th century), St. John's (12th century), St. George's, Jesmond, the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Hexham and Newcastle, Holy Trinity War Memorial, Guildhall (1658) Moot Hall (1810), Exchange (1860), Central Public Library and Laing Art Gallery and Museum, Wood Memorial Hall (1870), and the Custom House. The beauty of Jesmond Dene (gift of Lord Armstrong) is much appreciated by visitors, as well as the Town Moor, a tract of over 900 acres of open grassland. The city is connected with the south bank of the Tyne by six bridges.

The pre-Norman borough of Monkchester was re-named Newcastle in the 12th century when the castle was erected as a defence against the Scots. In 1400 it was made a county and in 1589 was incorporated. The City Corporation now comprises a Lord Mayor (1906), 19 Aldermen and 57 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), A. C. Curry.
Recorder, Sir Godfrey Russell Vick, Q.C. (1939).

NOTTINGHAM

NOTTINGHAM (Nottinghamshire) stands on the River Trent, 124 miles N.N.W. of London in one of the most valuable coalfields of the country with excellent railway, water (being connected by canal with the Atlantic and the North Sea), and road facilities. The municipal area is 18,364 acres and population, at the census of 1951, 306,008; estimated, June, 1955, 311,500.

The principal industries are hosiery, lace, bleaching, dyeing and spinning, tanning, engineering and cycle works, brewing, the manufacture of tobacco, chemicals, furniture, typewriters and mechanical products.

Most public services are owned by the municipality. The amenities of the city include numerous public baths, libraries and parks, an art gallery and two museums. Approximately twenty-five thousand houses have been built by the Nottingham Corporation. The famous Nottingham Goose Fair is held in October each year.

The chief buildings are the 11th century Nottingham Castle (restored in 1878, and now the City Museum and Gallery of Art), Wollaton Hall (1580-88) owned by the Corporation and now a Natural History Museum, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Nicholas's Churches, the Roman Catholic Cathedral (Pugin, 1842-4), the Council House (1929), the Guildhall and Court House (1888), Shire Hall, Albert Hall, the University and Newstead Abbey, home of Lord Byron.

Snotingham or Notingham, "the home of the sons of Snod" (the Wise), is the Anglo-Saxon name for the Celtic Tuigogobaur, "Cave Homes." The city possesses a Charter of Henry II., and was created a city in 1897. The Corporation consists of 17 Aldermen and 51 Councillors (including the Lord Mayor and Sheriff).

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), W. J. Cox.
Recorder, Christopher Nyholm Shawcross, Q.C. (1950).
Town Clerk, T. J. Owen.
Clerk of the Peace, G. A. Wharton, M.B.E.

BRADFORD

BRADFORD (Yorkshire, West Riding, 192 miles N.N.W. of London and 8 miles W. of Leeds, in the coal and iron district, is a centre of the woollen and worsted trade. The city is connected with the Mersey in the west and with the Humber in the east by canals, and is an important railway centre. The municipal area is 25,504 acres (about 40 square miles), with a population at the 1951 Census of 292,394; estimated June, 1955, 286,400.

The principal textile industries are worsteds, woollens, silks and cottons, and there are also important engineering and iron works and quarries of freestone.

The chief public buildings, in addition to the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the Parish Church) and Bowling Hall (14th century), are the Town Hall (1873), the tower of which contains a clock with dials, chimes and a carillon, Exchange (1867), Cartwright Memorial Hall (1904) commemorating the inventor of the power loom, the Windsor Baths and Public Hall (1905), Grammar School (Charter, 1662), St. George's Hall (Concert Hall, 1853), Technical College (1882), the Mechanics' Institute (1832), Kirkgate Market Hall, and Britannia House (1933).

The Saxon township was created a parliamentary borough in 1822, a borough in 1847, a county borough in 1888, and a city in 1907. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 20 Aldermen and 60 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

LEICESTER

LEICESTER is situated geographically in the centre of England, 100 miles north of London. The City dates back to pre-Roman times and was one of the five Danish Burhs. In 1589 Queen Elizabeth I. granted a Charter to the City and the ancient title was confirmed by Letters Patent in 1919. An Assize Court was established at Leicester Castle at the time of Edward I, and the Castle is still so used. The title of Lord Mayor was conferred upon the Chief Magistrate in 1928. Leicester has an area of 16,989 acres and a population (1951 census preliminary) of 285,061; estimated, June, 1955, 286,300.

The principal industries of the city are hosiery, boots and shoes, and light engineering. The growth of Leicester as a hosiery centre increased rapidly from the introduction there of the first stocking frame in 1670; in 1833 there were 14,000 knitting frames in the city, which to-day has some of the largest hosiery factories in the world. Hosiery produced includes stockings and every kind of woollen and cotton underwear, outerwear, fabrics and gloves, much of which is exported. Leicester is also a centre for the ancillary industries.

The manufacture of boots and shoes is the second largest industry centred in Leicester. This industry specializes in ladies' and children's shoes and sports footwear. It is the centre for wholesaling and distribution and, as in the case of hosiery, the boot and shoe industry has attracted to Leicester many of the ancillary trades. The production of boot and shoe manufacturing machinery and plant is carried out on a very large scale.

Engineering, developed partly for the supply of machinery to the hosiery and boot and shoe industries, is becoming one of the foremost industries in the city. Printing and the manufacture of motor tyres and cellulose goods are also carried on.

The principal buildings in the city are the Town Hall; Colleges of Art and Technology; De Montfort Hall, one of the finest concert halls in the provinces, with accommodation for over 3,000 persons, and the Museum and Art Gallery. The ancient Churches of St. Martin (now Leicester Cathedral), St. Nicholas, St. Margaret, All Saints, St. Mary de Castro, and buildings such as the Guildhall, the 14th century Newark Gate, the Castle and the Jewry Wall Roman site still exist. Leicester has a large number of parks and open spaces.

Principal City Officers

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), A. Halkyard.

Recorder, G. J. Paull, Q.C. (1944).

Town Clerk, G. C. Ogden.

OXFORD

OXFORD is a University City, an important industrial centre, and a county, assize, and market town.

It has been a City from time immemorial and a County Borough since 1889. It has an area of 8,416 acres, a population of 105,500 (Registrar-General's 1955 estimate) and a rateable value of £2,116,199. Oxford is a Parliamentary constituency returning one member and is governed by a Council of 68 members of whom 12 are, by special enactment, elected by the University.

The University (see also pp. 502-4) has 21 Colleges, 1 Public and 2 Private Halls, 2 New Foundations, 1 Society and 5 Societies of Women Students.

Industry, consisting of printing and bookbinding, and the making of agricultural implements and marmalade, played a minor part in Oxford until the motor industry was established in 1912. To-day this and the adjoining pressed steel works employ about 15,000.

The City has filled a notable place in the story of the nation, first entering real history in A.D. 912 when, according to the Old English Chronicle, possession of it was taken by King Edward the Elder.

It had a Mayor by 1122. It was a favourite residence of the Plantagenets, who gave the City its earliest charters and who built Beaumont Palace where Richard Cœur de Lion was born in 1157. The origins of the University are obscure, but it seems clear that it was already in existence in 1187, and by 1212 had a Chancellor. Colleges began to come into existence during the thirteenth century, the earliest being University, Balliol and Merton Colleges. The University became sufficiently powerful to secure the aid of the monarchy to establish an ascendancy over the Corporation, the outward forms of which were observed until 1825.

It is for its architecture that Oxford is of most interest to the visitor, its oldest specimens being the reputed Saxon tower of St. Michael's church, the remains of the Norman castle and city walls and the Norman church at Ilfley. It is chiefly famous however, for its Gothic buildings, such as the Divinity Schools, the Old Library at Merton College, William of Wykeham's New College, Magdalen College and Christ Church and many other college buildings. Later centuries are not represented by so many examples, but mention can be made of the exquisite Laudian quadrangle at St. John's College, the renaissance Sheldonian Theatre by Wren, Trinity College chapel, and All Saints Church; Hawksmoor's mock-Gothic at All Souls College, and the superb example of eighteenth-century architecture afforded by Queen's College. In addition to individual buildings, High Street and Radcliffe Square, just off it, both form architectural compositions of great beauty. Most of the Colleges have gardens, those of Magdalen, New College, St. John's (designed by "Capability" Brown) and Worcester being the largest.

The visitor will always find some of the college chapels, halls and gardens open for public inspection between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Mayor (1956-57), L. J. Allaway.

High Steward, The Duke of Marlborough.

CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE, a settlement far older than its ancient University, lies on the Cam or Granta, 51 miles north of London and 65 miles south-west of Norwich. Its population in 1951, when it was raised to the dignity of a City, was 81,463; estimated, June, 1955, 91,140. Its area is 10,060 acres.

The city is a parliamentary and quarter sessions borough, county town and regional headquarters. Its industries, which include radio and electronics, flour milling, cement making and the manufacture of scientific instruments, are extensive but nowhere obtrusive. Among its open spaces are Jesus Green, Sheep's Green, Coe Fen, Parker's Piece, Christ's Pieces, the University Botanic Garden, and the Backs, or lawns and gardens through which the Cam winds behind the principal line of college buildings. East of the Cam, King's Parade, upon which stand Great St. Mary's Church, Gibbs' Senate House and King's College Chapel with Wilkins' screen, joins Trumpington Street to form one of the most beautiful thoroughfares in Europe.

University and College buildings provide the outstanding features of Cambridge architecture but several churches (especially St. Benet's, the oldest building in the City, and St. Sepulchre's, the Round Church) also make notable contributions. The modern Guildhall (1939) stands on a site of which at least part has held municipal buildings since 1224.

The City Council consists of a Mayor, 14 Aldermen and 42 Councillors. Four of the Councillors are elected by the Colleges and Halls and two by Grace of the Senate of the University. Two of the Aldermen are elected by the Council from the University and College representatives.

Principal City Officers.

Mayor (1956-57), C. E. Ridgeon.
Recorder, A. M. S. Stevenson, Q.C.
High Steward, Professor G. M. Trevelyan, O.M.,
Town Clerk, A. H. I. Swift. [Lit.D.
Clerk of the Peace, C. H. Kemp.

CANTERBURY

CANTERBURY, the Metropolitan City of the Anglican Communion, has an unbroken history going back to prehistoric times. It was the Roman Durovernum and the Saxon Cant-wara-Byrig (stronghold of the men of Kent). Here in 597 St. Augustine began the conversion of the English race to Christianity, when Ethelbert, King of Kent, was baptized. In 1170 the rivalry of Church and State culminated in the murder in Canterbury Cathedral, by Henry II's knights, of Archbishop Thomas Becket, whose shrine became a great centre of pilgrimage as described by Chaucer in his Canterbury Tales. After the Reformation pilgrimages ceased, but the prosperity of the City was strengthened by an influx of Huguenot refugees, who introduced weaving. In the first Elizabethan era Christopher Marlowe, the poetic genius and precursor of Shakespeare, was born and reared in Canterbury, and there are literary associations also with Defoe, Dickens and Barham, author of the Ingoldsby Legends. In the last war the City received severe damage from air attacks, particularly in the great "Baedeker" raid of June 1, 1942. Fortunately the Cathedral (apart from the modern Library) was not severely harmed. Great progress has been made in re-building, before which the opportunity has been taken to excavate archaeologically the main areas of damage. As a result part of the street plan of Roman Canterbury has been recovered and many Roman buildings, including a large theatre, identified.

The Cathedral, with its glorious architecture ranging from the eleventh to the fifteenth centuries, is world-famous. Modern pilgrims are attracted particularly to the Martyrdom, the Black Prince's Tomb and other historic monuments, the Warriors' Chapel and the many examples of mediæval stained glass.

Of the Benedictine St. Augustine's Abbey, burial place of the Jutish Kings of Kent (whose capital Canterbury was) only extensive ruins remain. St. Martin's Church, on the eastern outskirts of the City, is stated by Bede to have been the place of worship of Queen Bertha, the Christian wife of King Ethelbert, before the advent of St. Augustine.

The mediæval City Walls are built on Roman foundations and the fourteenth century West Gate is one of the finest buildings of its kind in the country. The remains of the Roman house preserved in a basement in Butchery Lane include a fine tessellated pavement and hypocaust. The Norman Castle in Castle Street dates from the time of William Rufus.

The Buffs (The Royal East Kent Regiment) have their Regimental Depot in Canterbury and have been closely associated with the City for many years.

The city is a county borough and county of itself, with an estimated population (June, 1955) of 20,800. Before the institution of the Mayoralty in 1448 it was governed by bailiffs and earlier still by prefects or provosts. The earliest name recorded is that of Aldhun in the eighth century.

Principal City Officers.

Mayor (1956-57), W. S. Bean.
Recorder, Geoffrey Lawrence, Q.C.
Sheriff (1956-57), T. McCallum.
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, J. Boyle.

YORK

YORK is a county borough, an archiepiscopal seat, the county town of Yorkshire and a county in its own right, its correct designation being "The City and County of the City of York", and it stands at the junction of the three Ridings. York has an area of 6,456 acres, and a population at the 1951 Census of 105,336; estimated, June, 1955 at 106,500. The city returns one member to Parliament and is governed by a Lord Mayor, who has the title of "Right Honourable," 13 Aldermen and 39 Councillors. The City Sheriff, who is the Sovereign's representative, is elected annually with the Lord Mayor.

The recorded history of York dates from A.D. 71, when the Roman Ninth Legion established a base which later became the fortress of Eboracum. Here Constantine the Great was proclaimed Emperor in A.D. 306. Under Edwin, in the 7th century, York became the capital of the Kingdom of Northumbria. Under the Danes it became a trading centre but suffered severely at the Norman Conquest. It is mentioned in the Domesday Book. By the 14th century it had become prosperous and was used as the chief base against the Scots. It became a great mercantile centre, chiefly owing to its control of the wool trade, but under the Tudors its fortunes declined, though Henry VIII. made it the headquarters of the Council of the North, so preserving its status as the Northern capital. During the Civil War it suffered heavily in the Royalist cause, but in the 18th century it became a social centre for the northern nobility and gentry.

With its development as a railway centre in the 19th century the commercial life of York expanded and it is now a flourishing modern city. Chief industries are the manufacture of cocoa, chocolate and confectionery, railway carriage and wagon repair, scientific instrument making, printing and light engineering.

The city is rich in examples of architecture of all periods, but its finest features are the Minster with its stained glass, and the ancient walls and gateways. There are many examples of domestic architecture of the Tudor and Stuart periods, but perhaps more notable are the Georgian mansions of The Mount, Micklegate and Bootham. Its museums are world-famous, and its Art Gallery is now greatly enriched by the Lyceum Green collection of Old Masters recently given to the city.

York has long been known as a tourist centre, and it is now becoming a centre for students because of the vast resources of its archive collections, and the completeness of the picture it presents of the development of English architecture.

Principal Officers

Lord Mayor (1956-57), V. A. Bosworth.
Recorder, P. Stanley-Price (1956).
Sheriff, W. Patterson.
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, T. C. Benfield.

STRATFORD UPON AVON

STRATFORD UPON AVON (a municipal borough in Warwickshire, on the banks of the River Avon) had a population of 11,616 at the Census of 1931 (1951 census preliminary, 14,980); estimated, June, 1955, 14,870. As the birthplace of Shakespeare the borough is visited annually by travellers from all parts.

Shakespeare's Birthplace. Half timbered house preserved by Shakespeare Birthplace Trust. Contains period furniture and a collection of rare books, mss., and objects of Shakespearian interest.

Guild Chapel and Guildhall.—Founded 1269. In the guildhall young Shakespeare probably witnessed strolling companies performing. In the chapel are mural paintings.

King Edward VI School.—Founded by the mediæval Guild of the Holy Cross of Stratford, and re-endowed by King Edward VI. Here Shakespeare acquired his "small Latin and less Greek."

Hall's Croft.—Old-timbered residence of Susanna, poet's elder daughter, wife of Dr. John Hall, acquired in 1949 by the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust.

Harvard House.—Rebuilt 1596 by Alderman Thomas Rogers, whose descendant (John Harvard) founded Harvard University, U.S.A.

Anne Hathaway's Cottage.—At Shottery, one mile from the centre of the town, is the thatched farmstead, the early home of Shakespeare's wife, Anne Hathaway. A fine specimen of domestic architecture.

Shakespeare Memorial.—Mainly due to munificence of C. E. Flower (1830-92) and his wife. Group comprises Library, with 10,000 volumes of Shakespeare editions and dramatic literature. Gallery of pictures. Gardens. Shakespeare Memorial Theatre burnt down in 1926, rebuilt 1932, with 1,300 seats, chiefly by American generosity. The Shakespeare Festival takes place from spring to autumn each year at this theatre.

New Place.—Shakespeare bought this estate in 1597; retired to it about 1610; died there April 23, 1616. House was demolished by Rev. Francis Gastrell, 1759, but its foundations are preserved in a garden setting. Nash's house adjoining is administered by the Birthplace Trust.

Town Hall.—Erected 1767. Contains details of the unbroken sequence of Bailiffs, Mayors and Town Clerks since A.D. 1553 (including the poet's father, John Shakespeare); also High Stewards since 1610. The ballroom was badly damaged by fire in Dec. 1946, when Gainsborough's portrait of David Garrick and other pictures were destroyed.

Holy Trinity Church.—Dates from 13th century. The burial place of the poet and his family.

MUNICIPAL DIRECTORY OF ENGLAND

A list of all CITIES (in SMALL CAPITALS) and Boroughs (in ordinary type), and of Urban Districts with a population exceeding 20,000 (in italics); the County Boroughs named in the First Schedule of the Local Government Act, 1933, are distinguished by having § prefixed. The figures in parentheses show the County in which the City, Borough or U.D.C. is situated (see p. 634).

THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES AND MONMOUTHSHIRE

Position and Extent.—Wales and Monmouthshire occupy the extreme west of the central southern portion of the island of Great Britain, with a total area of 8,006 sq. miles; they are bounded on the N. by the Irish Sea, on the S. by the Bristol Channel, on the E. by the English counties of Cheshire, Salop, and Hereford, and on the W. by St. George's Channel. Across the Menai Straits is the Welsh island-county of Anglesey or Môn (276 sq. miles), communication with which is facilitated by the Menai Suspension Bridge (1,000 ft. long), built by Telford in 1826 (freed from toll as from Jan. 1, 1941) and by the tubular railway bridge (1,100 ft. long) of the form-service to Kingstown and Dublin (70 miles).

Population.—The population at the Census of 1931 was 2,593,014 (inclusive of Monmouthshire). The 1951 Census preliminary figures gave a total of 2,596,986.

Relief.—Wales is generally mountainous, the chief systems being those of North Wales (Snowdon 3,560 ft., Carnedd Llywelyn 3,484 ft., Carnedd Dafydd 3,426 ft.); Berwyn (Aran-mawddwy 2,970 ft.); Powys (Plinlimmon 2,468 ft., Drygan Fawr 2,115 ft., Radnor 2,163 ft.); and the Black Mountain, Brecknock Beacons and Black Forest ranges (Carmarthen Van 2,632 ft., Brecon Beacon 2,906 ft., Pen-y-gawr fawr 2,660 ft.).

Hydrography.—The principal river of those rising in Wales is the Severn (see England), which flows from the slopes of Plinlimmon to the English border, dividing Montgomeryshire on its way. The Wye (130 miles) also rises in the slopes of Plinlimmon, and flows between Radnor and Brecon on its course to England. The Usk (56 miles) flows into the Bristol Channel, through Monmouthshire. The Dee (70 miles) rises in Bala lake and flows through the Vale of Llangollen, where an aqueduct (built by Telford in 1805) carries the Pontcysyllte branch of the Shropshire Union Canal across the valley. The estuary of the Dee is the navigable portion, 14 miles in length and about 5 miles in breadth, and the tide rushes in with dangerous speed over the "Sands of Dee." The Towy (68 miles), Teifi (50 miles), Taff (40 miles), Dovey (30 miles), Taf (25 miles), and Conway (24 miles), the last named broad and navigable, are wholly Welsh rivers.

The largest natural lake in Wales is Bala (Llyn Tegid) in Merionethshire, 4 miles long and about 1 mile wide; Lake Vyrnwy is an artificial reservoir, about the size of Bala, and forms the water supply of Liverpool, while Birmingham is supplied from a chain of reservoirs in the Elan and Claerwen valleys.

EARLY HISTORY

Celts and Romans.—The earliest inhabitants of whom there is any record appear to have been subdued or exterminated by the Goidels (a people of Celtic race) in the Bronze Age, and a further invasion of Celtic Brythons and Belgae followed in the ensuing Iron Age. The Roman conquest of South Britain and Wales was for some time successfully opposed by Caratacus (Caractacus or Caradog), Chieftain of the Catuvellauni and son of Cunobelinus (Cymbeline) King of the Trinobantes. In A.D. 78 the conquest of Wales was completed under Julius Frontinus, and communications were opened up by the construction of military roads from Chester to Carleon-on-Usk and Caerwent, and from Chester to Conway (and thence to Carmarthen and Neath). Christianity was introduced (during the Roman occupation) in the 4th century.

The Anglo-Saxon Attacks.—The Anglo-Saxon invaders of South Britain drove the Celtic Goidels and Brythons into the mountain fastnesses of Wales, and into Strathclyde (Cumberland and S.W. Scotland) and Cornwall, giving them the name of Waelisc, or Welsh (= Foreign). The West Saxons' victory of Deorham (577) isolated Wales from Cornwall, while the battle of Chester (613) cut off communication with Strathclyde. In the 8th century the boundaries of the Welsh were further restricted by the annexations of Offa, King of Mercia, and counter-attacks were largely prevented by the construction of an artificial boundary from the Dee to the Wye (Offa's Dike). In the 9th century Rhodri Mawr united the country against further incursions of the Saxons by land and against the raids of Norse and Danish pirates by sea, but at his death his three provinces of Gwynedd (N.), Powys (Mid.) and Dehenbarth (S.) were divided among his three sons—Anarawd, Mervyn and Cadell—the son of the last named being Howel Dda, who codified the laws of the country, while Lewelyn ap Seissyllt (husband of the heiress of Gwynedd) again united the provinces and reigned as Prince from 1015–1022.

The Norman Conquest.—After the Norman conquest of England, William I. created Palatine counties along the Welsh frontier, and Robert FitzHamon, the Norman Earl of Gloucester, raided South Wales and erected fortresses from the Wye to Milford Haven. Henry I. introduced Flemish settlers into South Wales, but after his death the Welsh rose under the leadership of Griffith ap Rhys and routed the Norman-Flemish forces at the fords of the Teifi (Cardigan) in 1136. From the early years of the 13th century the house Gwynedd, in the north, gained an ascendancy over the whole of Wales, and Lewelyn ap Iorwerth was in constant strife with England for recognition as an independent sovereign; but Lewelyn ap Iorwerth was killed in 1282 during hostilities between the Welsh and English, and his brother David was captured and executed by the English in 1283. On Feb. 7, 1301, Edward of Caernarvon, son of Edward I., was created Prince of Wales.

The Welsh are a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of their own, and the national bardic festival (Eisteddfod), instituted by Prince Rhys ap Griffith in 1176, is annually maintained. These Eisteddfodau (sessions) form part of the Gorsedd (assembly), which is believed to date from the time of Prydian, a ruling prince in an age many centuries before the Christian era.

The Welsh Language.—Statistics published on July 6, 1955, show that just over 715,000 persons (of three years and over) in Wales and Monmouthshire were able to speak Welsh at the time of the 1951 Census, compared with 909,000 at the 1931 Census, a decline of 21 per cent. in 20 years. 48,000 persons could speak Welsh only, compared with 98,000 in 1931. The proportion of people speaking Welsh fell from 49.9 per cent. in 1901 to 28.9 per cent. in 1951; and of those speaking Welsh only from 15.1 to 1.7 per cent.

CARDIFF

CARDIFF (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the rivers Taff (Caer Taff), Rhymney and Ely, the capital of Wales and the port of the South Wales coalfields, has an area of 18,066 acres, and a population (Registrar General's estimate, 1955) of 248,400. Within the city there is a great variety of industry including iron and steel works, rolling mills and foundries, patent fuel works, engine wagon works, flour mills, breweries, jam, vinegar and ice factories, enamel-ware and hollow-ware, paint works, furniture and bedding, clothing and foot-wear, sweets and confectionery, tobacco, electrical goods and appliances, food products and building materials.

The principal buildings are Cardiff Castle, built in the 11th century, the National Museum of Wales, Public Library, the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, the Registry of the University of Wales, Technical College, City Hall, Law Courts, Glamorgan County Hall, Offices of the Welsh Board of Health, and "The Temple of Peace and Health." The city returns 3 members to Parliament.

The Lord Mayor (1956-57), D. T. Williams, O.B.E. Stipendiary Magistrate, Guy Sixsmith (1948). Recorder, H. Edmund Davies, Q.C. (1953). Town Clerk and Clerk of Peace, S. Tapper-Jones.

SWANSEA

SWANSEA (in Welsh, Abertawe), a seaport of Glamorgan, is a County Borough, at the mouth of the River Tawe. It is the chief centre of the copper, tinplate and spelter industry of Wales and of the United Kingdom. The trade of the port also includes coal, patent fuel, ores, and the import and export of oil. There is also a large ship-repairing industry. The municipal area is 24,249 acres, with a population at the census of 1951 of 160,832 (Registrar-General's estimate, 1954, 161,500).

The principal buildings are the Norman Castle (rebuilt in 1330), the Royal Institution of South Wales, founded in 1835 (containing Museum and Library), the University College at Singleton, the 17th-century Grammar School, founded by Hugh Gore, and the Guildhall, containing Brangwyn panels. Swansea was chartered by the Earl of Warwick, circa 1158-1184, and further charters were granted by King John, Henry III., Edward II., Edward III., and James II., 2 from Cromwell and 1 Lord Marcher. The borough returns 2 members to Parliament.

Mayor (1956-57), G. H. Libby. Recorder, F. Elwyn Jones, Q.C., M.P. (1953). Town Clerk, T. B. Bowen, C.B.E.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of Scotland occupies the northern portion of the main island of Great Britain and includes the Inner and Outer Hebrides, and the Orkney, Shetland, and many other islands. The Kingdom lies between $60^{\circ} 51' 30''$ and $54^{\circ} 38' N.$ latitude and between $1^{\circ} 45' 32''$ and $6^{\circ} 14' W.$ longitude, its southern neighbour being the Kingdom of England, with the Atlantic Ocean on the N. and W., and the North Sea on the E. The greatest length of the mainland (Cape Wrath to the Mull of Galloway) is 274 miles, and the greatest breadth (Buchan Ness to Applecross) is 154 miles. The total area of the Kingdom is 29,795 square miles (or 19,068,724 acres) exclusive of inland water, tidal water and foreshore. The population (at the census of 1951) was 5,096,415, an increase of 253,435 or 5.2 per cent. since the census of 1931. The average density of the population was 171 persons per square mile.

Land's End to John o' Groat's.—The customary measurement of the Island of Great Britain is from the site of John o' Groat's house, near Duncansby Head, Caithness (at the N.E. extremity of the island) to Land's End, Cornwall (at the S.W. extremity), a total distance of 603 miles in a straight line and (approximately) 900 by road. But the site of the house of John de Groot (with its 8 doors and octagonal table, to solve the question of precedence between John and his 7 brothers) is about 4 miles S.W. of Duncansby Head, while Dunnet Head (also in Caithness) extends farther N. than Duncansby. John de Groot is believed to have obtained permission to settle in Caithness (from the Netherlands) in the reign of James IV. (1488–1513).

Relief.—There are three natural orographic divisions of Scotland. The Southern Uplands have their highest points in Merrick (4,704 feet), Rinn of Kells (4,668 feet), and Cairnsmuir of Carsphairn (4,612 feet), in Kirkcudbright; Hartfell (4,652 feet) in Dumfriesshire; and Broad Law (2,754 feet) in Peebles. The Central Lowlands include the valleys of the Tay, Forth and Clyde, and the cities of Edinburgh, the capital of the Kingdom, and Glasgow, its principal seaport. The heather-clad Northern Highlands extend almost from the extreme north of the mainland to the central lowlands, and are divided into a northern and southern system by the Great Glen; they contain, in the central Grampian Hills, Ben Nevis (4,406 feet), the highest point in the British Isles, and Ben Mulch Dhui (4,296 feet). The Cheviot Hills form a natural boundary between Scotland and England, their highest point being The Cheviot (2,676 feet).

Hydrography.—The principal river of Scotland is the Clyde (106 miles), one of the most important rivers in the world, with the greatest commercial estuary in Scotland. The Clyde is formed by the junction of Daer and Portrail water, and flows through the city and port of Glasgow to the Firth of Clyde. During its course it passes over the picturesque Falls of Clyde, Bonnington Linn (30 feet), Corra Linn (84 feet), Dundaff Linn (10 feet), and Stonebyres Linn (80 feet), above and below Lanark. The Tweed (66 miles) has important woollen industries ("Tweeds") in its valley. The Tay, noted for its salmon, and the longest river in Scotland (117 miles), flows into the North Sea, with Dundee (the centre of the jute industry) on the estuary, which is spanned by the Tay Bridge (2 miles 73 yards), opened in 1887 to replace that destroyed by a gale (Dec. 28, 1879). The Dee (90 miles), a noted salmon river, flows through scenery of unequalled beauty to the North Sea at Aberdeen. The Spey (110 miles), the swiftest flowing river in the British Isles, and also noted for its salmon and its scenery, flows into the Moray Firth. The Forth (66 miles), navigable to Stirling, is spanned by the Forth (Railway) Bridge, constructed 1882–9 at a cost of £3,000,000, with a length of 5,330 ft. (with approaches 8,205 ft.).

The Falls of Glomach in Ross-shire, with a drop of 370 feet, are the highest in the British Isles; the Grey Mare's Tail (Dumfriesshire) is 200 feet.

The lochs are the principal hydrographic feature of the Kingdom, both on the mainland and in many of the islands. The largest in the Kingdom and in Great Britain is Loch Lomond (24 miles long), with Lochs Awe, Tay, Rannoch and Erchie in the Grampian valleys; Loch Ness (24 miles long and 800 feet deep), with Lochs Oich and Lochy, in the Great Glen; and Lochs Shin (20 miles) and Maree in the northern Highlands.

Climate.—The general climatic values for Scotland are given below, together with the corresponding values for England and Wales within brackets—mean air temperature reduced to sea level $47^{\circ} 1' F.$ (49.7); rainfall, 50.3 inches (35.2); number of days with rain 217 (188); mean hours per day of bright sunshine, 3.36 (3.96).

Commerce.—The principal exports are machinery, ships and vehicles, iron and steel manufactures, non-ferrous metals, woollen and worsted yarns and products, food and drink and textile materials. Whisky continues to be the leading export to dollar countries.

THE SCOTTISH ISLANDS

There were 147 inhabited islands in the Kingdom at the time of the 1951 Census, with a total population of 141,972, the number of inhabited islands having fallen by 18 since the census of 1931. The most populous of the islands were Lewis (with Harris) (26,465), the Mainland of Zetland (14,241), the Mainland of Orkney (14,198), Bute (12,547), Skye (8,267), Arran (4,638), Islay (4,267), South Uist (2,462) and Mull (2,420).

Orkney.—About 6 miles N. of the Caithness coast, separated from the mainland by the Pentland Firth, is the island county of Orkney, a group of 90 islands and islets ("holms" and "skerries"), of which one-third are inhabited. The total area of the group is $375\frac{1}{2}$ square miles, with a population (1951) of 25,896. Kirkwall, in Mainland, the largest island of the group, is the capital of the county. Many of the Orkney (and Shetland) islands contain brochs (Pictish towers) and other Pictish and Scandinavian remains. Scapa Flow, between Pomona and Hoy, was the war station of the Grand Fleet from 1914–19 and the scene of the scuttling of the surrendered German High Seas Fleet (June 21, 1919).

Zetland.—About 50 miles N. of Orkney (with the detached Fair Isle at 25 miles N.) is the island county of Zetland or Shetland, a group of about 100 islands and islets, of which 29 are inhabited. The total area of the group is 551 square miles, with a population (1951) of 27,911. Lerwick, in Mainland (the largest and principal island), is the capital of the county. Fair Isle, the southernmost of the group, is famous for hand-knitted hosiery, and Unst for the finest of the Shetland woollen work, for which the county is famous. Muckle Flugga, about 1 mile N. of Unst, is the most northerly of the group and of the British Isles ($60^{\circ} 51' 30'' N.$ lat.)

Western Islands.—Off the W. coast, at varying distances, and extending from Sutherland to Argyll, are over 500 islands and islets, of which 102 are inhabited. The total area of these Western Islands is 2,812 square miles, with a population of close on 80,000, but owing to the mountainous surface of the land only about 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Hebrides.—Until the closing years of the 13th century "The Hebrides" included other Scottish islands in the Firth of Clyde, the peninsula of Kintyre (Argyllshire), the Isle of Man, and the (Irish) Isle of Rathlin. The origin of the name is stated to be the Greek Eboudai, latinized as Hebudes by Pliny, and corrupted to its present form. The Norwegian name Sudreyjar (Southern Islands) was latinized as Sodorenses, a name that survives in the Anglican bishopric of "Sodor and Man." The Inner Hebrides include the island of Skye (643 square miles—capital, Portree, famous as the refuge of Prince Charlie after his defeat at Culloden, Inverness-shire, in 1746), which contains the Cuilhills (Sgurr Alasdair 3,309 feet), Red Hills (Ben Caillich, 2,403 feet), and many other picturesque mountains; Mull (367 square miles), containing Ben More (3,169 feet), Ben Bui (2,354 feet), and Ben Creach (2,280 feet); Jura (560 square miles), with a chain of hills culminating in the Paps of Jura (Beinn-an-Oir, 2,571 feet and Beinn Chaolais, 2,407 feet); Islay (235 square miles), and many smaller islands. The Outer Hebrides, separated from the mainland by the Minch, include Lewis with Harris (770 square miles), celebrated for its homespun "Tweeds," North Uist, South Uist, Barra and other islands. Thirteen miles W. of Stornoway (the largest town of Lewis and of the Hebrides) are the "Druidical" remains of Callanish, a well-preserved series of monolithic circles, cruciform in general arrangement, but usually regarded as a heathen monument of the remote Stone Age.

EARLY HISTORY

Prehistoric Man.—The Picts, believed to be of non-Aryan origin, and stated to have been named Picti by the Romans on account of the tribal habit of painting the body, seem to have inhabited the whole of North Britain and to have spread over the north of Ireland. Picts' Houses are most frequent in the northern counties of Caithness and Sutherland and in the Orkney Islands. Celtic Goidels, Brythons and Belgae arrived from Belgic Gaul during the latter part of the Bronze Age and in the early Iron Age, and except in the extreme north of the mainland and in the islands the civilization and speech of the people were definitely Celtic at the time of the Roman invasion of Britain.

The Roman Invasion.—In A.D. 80 Julius Agricola extended the Roman conquests in Britain by advancing into Caledonia as far as the "Grampian" Hills, but after a victory at Mons Graupius (since corrupted to "Grampius") he was recalled, and no further advance was made for about 60 years, when the Roman frontier was carried to the isthmus between the Forth and Clyde and marked by the Wall of Pius, towards which ran military roads from the Cheviots. The Roman occupation of Southern Caledonia was not so effective as that of South Britain, and before the close of the second century the northern limit of Roman Britain had receded to Hadrian's Wall, from the Tyne to Solway Firth.

The Scots.—During the later years of the Roman occupation the garrison was continually harassed by Pictish tribes north of the Wall, aided by Scots (the Gaelic tribe then dominant in Ireland), and when the garrison was withdrawn these Picts and Scots were the principal enemies of the Celtic Brythons, who are believed to have called in the Saxons to protect them from the invasions of their neighbours. A relic of the struggle between Pict and Brython is still to be seen in the Catrail, or Picts' Work Dyke, of Roxburgh (from Troowoodie, near Galashiels, to Peel Fell in the Cheviots). Christianity was introduced into Southern Caledonia about 380 by missionaries from Romanized Britain, who penetrated to the northern districts and islands. After the withdrawal (or absorption) of the Roman garrison of Britain there were many years of tribal warfare between the Picts and Scots, the Brythonic Waelisc (Welsh) of Strathclyde (South-west Scotland and Cumberland), and the Anglo-Saxons of the Lothians. The Waelisc were isolated from their kinsmen in Wales by the victory of the West Saxons at Chester (613), and towards the close of the 9th century the Scots under Kenneth Macalpine became the dominant power in Caledonia. In the reign of Malcolm I. (943-954) the Brythons or Waelisc (Welsh) of Strathclyde were brought into subjection, the lowland kingdom of the English (Lothian) being conquered by Malcolm II. (1005-1034). From the close of the 11th century until the middle of the 16th there were constant wars between Scotland and England, the outstanding figures in the struggle being William Wallace, who defeated the English at Stirling Bridge (1297), and Robert Bruce, who won the victory of Bannockburn (1314). James IV. and many of his nobles fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden (1513), and in 1603 James VI., the Smart King of Scotland and the heir to the Tudor line of England (his mother, Mary "Queen of Scots," was the great-granddaughter of Henry VII.), succeeded Queen Elizabeth I. on the throne, his successors reigning as Sovereigns of Great Britain. After the abdication (by flight) of James VII. and II., the crown devolved upon William III. (grandson of Charles I.) and Mary (daughter of James VII. and II.) and, their issue failing, upon Anne (second daughter of James VII. and II.). Anne's children died young, and the throne devolved upon George I. (great-grandson of James VI. and I.). In 1689 Graham of Claverhouse "roused the Highlands" on behalf of James VII. and II., but died after a military success at Killiecrankie. In 1715, armed risings led to the indecisive battle of Sherrifmuir, but the movement died down until 1745, when Prince Charles Edward defeated the Royalist troops under Sir John Cope at Prestonpans and advanced to Derby in England (1746). From Derby, the adherents of "James VIII. and III." (the title claimed for his father by Prince Charles Edward) fell back on the defensive, and the Jacobite movement was finally crushed by the Royalist troops under the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden (April 16, 1746).

The Hebrides did not become part of the Kingdom of Scotland until 1266, when they were ceded to Alexander III. by Magnus of Norway. Orkney and Shetland fell to the Scottish Crown as a pledge for the unpaid dowry of Margaret of Denmark, wife of James III., in 1468, the Danish suzerainty being formally relinquished in 1590.

Scotland is represented in the Imperial Parliament by 71 members, of whom 39 represent Counties, and 32 represent Burghs. On account of the scattered nature of the constituency, the election in Orkney and Shetland is exempted from the rule that all polls must be held on the same day.

PRINCIPAL SCOTTISH CITIES

EDINBURGH

EDINBURGH, the Capital of the Kingdom, has a municipal area of 34,781 acres, and a population at the Census of 1951 of 466,761; estimated, June, 1955, 466,943. The city is built on a group of hills and contains in Princes Street one of the most beautiful thoroughfares in the world. The principal buildings are St. Giles's Church (restored 1879-83), and St. Mary's (Scottish Episcopal) Cathedral (Sir Gilbert Scott), the Castle (which contains, in St. Margaret's Chapel, the oldest building in Edinburgh), the Scottish National War Memorial, Parliament House (the present seat of the judiciary), the National and Signet Libraries, the University, the General Register House (Robert Adam), Royal Scottish Academy, National Portrait Gallery, and the Palace of Holyroodhouse (containing parts of the royal palace of James IV. and V.). The city is governed by a town council of 71 Members, and sends 7 Members to Parliament.

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (1954-57), Sir John G. Banks, C.B.E.

Town Clerk, Sir John Storrar, C.B.E., M.C.
City Chamberlain, A. L. Imrie.

GLASGOW

GLASGOW, a Royal Burgh, City and County of a City, and the principal commercial centre in Scotland, has a municipal area of 39,725 acres and a population at the 1951 Census of 1,089,555 (estimated June, 1956, 1,085,100). The city occupies the north and south banks of the Clyde, one of the chief commercial estuaries of the world. The tonnage of shipping using the harbour in 1955-56 was 14,703,796. The principal industries are iron and steel works, ship-building, chemicals, leather, woollens, muslin-weaving, distilling, tobacco, cotton-mills, and furniture. The chief buildings are the Early English Cathedral, built early in the 13th century, and incorporating part of an earlier structure, the University (Sir Gilbert Scott), the City Chambers, the Royal Infirmary and the Western and Victoria Infirmaries, the Art Galleries and the Mitchell Library. The city is governed by a town council of 113 Members, and sends 15 Members to Parliament.

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost, A. Hood.

Town Clerk, Sir William Kerr, C.B.E.
City Chamberlain, G. B. Esslemont.

ABERDEEN

ABERDEEN, a City and a Royal, Municipal and Parliamentary Burgh, 130 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, received its charter as a Royal Burgh from William the Lion in 1179. The municipal area is 11,362 acres, with a population (at the census of 1951) of 182,729; estimated, Dec., 1955, 186,800. The chief industries are tourist traffic, quarrying and granite working, white fish, salmon and herring fisheries, engineering, chemicals, shipbuilding, paper-making, woollen and linen manufacture. From an architectural point of view, Aberdeen is truly famous for its many beautiful buildings, including Marischal College, reputed to be the most imposing white granite building in the world, King's College (1494), St. Machar Cathedral (1378), the Auld Brig o' St. Johnnie (1320) and the Municipal Buildings. There is a sea beach promenade, which stretches for fully two and a half miles along golden sands, and at Hazlehead an open public park of 800 acres of which 200 are wooded, with one of the finest public golf courses in Scotland. The climate is bracing and healthy. The city is governed by a Town Council of 37 Members, and sends 2 Members to Parliament.

The Lord Provost (May 1955-May 1958), G. Stephen.

Town Clerk, J. C. Rennie.

City Chamberlain, D. R. Bishop, O.B.E.

DUNDEE

DUNDEE, a City and Royal Burgh, on the left bank of the River Tay, 42 miles N. of Edinburgh, has a municipal area of 12,294 acres, and a population (Census 1951) of 177,340; estimated, June 1955, 177,944. Principal buildings are Queen's College (St. Andrews University), the Institute of Art and Technology, High School, Albert Institute and the Caird Hall Buildings. One of the finest Public Baths is in Dundee. The harbour affords dock accommodation of nearly 38 acres. There is a magnificent public park of 400 acres at Camperdown and other parks of 646 acres and an observatory at Balcay Park. The principal industries are jute manufacture in all its branches, and various forms of linen weaving, the making of preserves, shipbuilding, engineering, dyeing, fruit, etc., canning, linoleum manufacturing, watch and clock making, and brewing. The city is governed by a Town Council of 37 members and sends 2 Members to Parliament. Broughty Ferry, the eastern portion of Dundee, is a noted holiday resort.

The Lord Provost (1956-57), W. Hughes, C.B.E.

Town Clerk, R. Lyle.

City Chamberlain, J. C. Milne.

STANDING COUNCIL OF SCOTTISH CHIEFS

The objects of the Council, which is non-political, are to consider matters affecting Scottish Chiefs (both Lowland and Highland) and to represent their views and interests to H.M. Government, to Departments of State, to Local Authorities, to Press and Public and to Associations connected with Clan and Family in Britain and Overseas; also to take such steps as may seem expedient to protect the titles, armorial bearings or other insignia of Chiefs from exploitation or misuse in trade or otherwise.

Membership of the Council is open to any holder of the absolute undifferenced Arms of any Scottish family who has hereditary supporters, and, in exceptional cases, to a duly certificated Head of a considerable House.

Convener, The Rt. Hon. The Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.T., C.M.G., LL.D.
Secretary, Ian M. Campbell, T.D., W.S., 18 Duke Street, Edinburgh, 1.

THE ARMS OF SCOTLAND

ARMS.—Or, a lion rampant gules, armed and langued azure, within a double-tressure flory counter-flory of the second. CREST.—An Imperial crown proper, surmounted by a lion sejant-guardant gules crowned or, holding in his dexter paw a naked sword and in the sinister a sceptre both proper. SUPPORTERS.—Two unicorns argent, armed, tufted and unguled or, crowned with imperial and gorged with eastern crowns, chains reflexed over the backs or; the dexter supporting a banner charged with the arms of Scotland, the sinister supporting a similar banner azure, thereon a saltire argent. MOTTOES.—Over the arms, "In Defens"; under the arms "Nemo me impune lacessit."

CHIEFS OF CLANS AND NAMES IN SCOTLAND

The following list of Chiefs comprises the persons officially recognized as such by inheritance of the ancestral arms "without brisur or mark of cadency" under the Act 1672 cap. 47, and/or relative supporters, under decree of the Court of the Lord Lyon. It does not purport to include self-styled, or Society-selected "Chiefs" but the hereditary Heads of "Honourable Families" who conform to the evidence that "clan and family mean exactly the same thing"; and the definitions of Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh, Lord Advocate to Charles II., that the undifferenced arms denote the "Chief for so we call the Representative of the Family . . . and in the Erse (Gaelic) with us the Chief of the Family is called the Head of the Clan,"—and the unanimous opinions of the Law Lords in Seaforth v. Allangrange Nov. 17, 1921, to the same effect, viz. that the undifferenced shield of arms denotes the Chief of the Clan; which in this nobiliary, and hereditary familial sense of parental organization or kin, is accordingly denoted by the determination of armorial succession by decree of the Court of the Lord Lyon. These broadbased family organizations were termed "Names" in the Lowlands and Border, where all members bore the same basic surname, and "Clans" in the Northern and Highland areas where surnames were only a later development and evolved from complicated genealogical descriptions, the "clan name" being normally the name of the chief's house.

STUART (THE ROYAL HOUSE): H.M. The Queen.

 BARCLAY: Charles J. de Tolly Barclay.
 BORTHWICK: Maj. J. H. S. Borthwick of Borthwick.

 MACBRAYNE: John O. MacBrayne of Glenbranter.
 MALCOLM (MACCALLUM): George Malcolm of Potalloch.

Only chiefs of whole Names or Clans are included (except certain special instances (marked *), who though not chiefs of a "whole name", were, or are, for some reason, e.g. the Macdonald forfeiture, independent). Under decision (Campbell-Gray, 1950) that a bearer of a "double or triple-barrelled" surname, cannot be held chief of a part thereof, several others cannot be included in the list pending readjustment of such assumptions.

SCOTTISH CELTIC AND TERRITORIAL TITLES

Chiefs and landowners in Scotland are entitled to add to their surnames, patronymical or territorial, designations derived from their clan or estate. Form of signature is prescribed by 1672 cap. 47. When so used, these titles are legally regarded as part of the surname, and in address "Esq." is omitted, being inferred. Such titles are admissible in official documents and registers; are also borne by wife, heir and daughters, and when derived from actual land-ownership, or by descent, are assumable without further formality. Otherwise a Lyon Court certificate of recognition is required.

MACDONALD: Lord MacDonald (The MacDonald of MacDonald).
 MACDONALD OF CLANRANALD*: Ranald A. MacDonald of Clanranald.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, a separate Parliament and Executive Government were established for Northern Ireland. Under the Constitution certain legislative and fiscal powers are reserved to the Parliament of the United Kingdom.

The Northern Irish Parliament consists of a House of Commons of 52 elected members (who receive an allowance) and a Senate of 2 ex-officio Senators and 24 Senators elected by the members of the House of Commons on the proportional representation system. At the General Election of 1953 there were elected, Unionists 38, Independent Unionist 1, Anti-Partition 6, Anti-Partition Abstentionist 2, Nationalist 1, Eire Labour 1, Republican Labour 1, Independent Labour 1 and Independent 1. Northern Ireland continues under the Act of 1920 to return 12 members to the House of Commons at Westminster.

The Executive power is vested in the Governor on behalf of Her Majesty the Queen; he holds office for 6 years, and is advised by 9 Ministers responsible to Parliament.

There were also 154 Institutions of Further Education, with 2,281 full-time and 38,124 part-time students. The Queen's University at Belfast had 45 Professors, 21 Readers, 200 Lecturers and Assistant Lecturers, 7 Staff Tutors, and 2,630 students. Magee University College, Londonderry, had 4 Professors, 20 Lecturers, and 154 students.

FINANCE

The greater part of the taxation in Northern Ireland is imposed and collected by the United Kingdom Government. After deducting the cost of collection, certain services reserved to the United Kingdom Parliament, and the Imperial Contribution, the balance is paid over to Northern Ireland's Exchequer. The Contribution so made by Northern Ireland to the cost of Imperial services, i.e. Navy, Army and Air Force, National Debt, etc., for the period from 1921 to March 31, 1955, amounted to £364,174,344. The Imperial contribution has been provisionally fixed at £11,000,000 for 1955-56 and £12,500,000 for 1956-57.

PRODUCTION

Industries.—The total value of the industrial production of Northern Ireland in 1954 was approximately £317,000,000, and employment on industrial production was given to about 226,000 persons. The linen industry, employing 50,000 persons produced goods to the value of £36,000,000 some £17,000,000 worth being sold to customers outside the United Kingdom. Other important industries are the engineering, shipbuilding and aircraft industries which employ 52,000 persons. Launchings of mercantile shipping at Belfast amounted to 122,000 tons in 1955. Clothing to the value of over £21,000,000 was manufactured, almost half of which was accounted for by shirts and collars, which are manufactured principally in Londonderry. Other industries of importance to the economy of Northern Ireland are the manufacture of tobacco and cigarettes; the processing of agricultural products; furniture; rope; wool; and hosiery manufactures.

Minerals.—About 2,590 men were engaged in mining and quarrying operations in Northern Ireland in 1955, and the minerals raised were valued at some £2,015,000.

Fisheries.—The total value of sea and freshwater fish caught in 1955 was £584,000.

COMMUNICATIONS

Seaports.—The amount of shipping using the principal ports in 1955 was about 7,600,000 tons. Regular passenger and freight services are maintained from Belfast to Liverpool, Heysham, Ardrossan and Glasgow, from Larne to Stranraer and from Londonderry to Glasgow.

Vehicle ferry services operate between Belfast and Preston and between Larne and Preston.

Road and Rail Transport.—The Ulster Transport Authority carried 94,548,164 passengers by road and 8,680,128 by rail, 1,211,359 tons of merchandise by road and 445,499 tons by rail, and 1,126,340 head of livestock by road and 62,522 by rail in the year ending Sept. 30, 1955.

Airways.—Passenger and freight services are in operation between Northern Ireland and airports throughout the British Isles. 227,188 passengers were carried to or from Nutt's Corner Airport, Belfast in 1955.

THE ARMS OF NORTHERN IRELAND

ARMS.—Argent, a cross gules, over all on a 6-pointed star of the field ensigned by an imperial Crown proper, a dexter hand couped at the wrist of the second.

BELFAST

BELFAST, a City, the seat of Government of Northern Ireland, situated at the mouth of the River Lagan at its entrance to Belfast Lough, has a municipal area of 15,357 acres, exclusive of tidal water (1,223) and a population (1955) of 453,900. The city received its first charter of incorporation in 1613 and has since grown owing to its easy access by sea to Scottish coal and iron, to be a great centre of shipbuilding. The linen industry, in all its branches, fostered originally by Huguenot refugees is of great importance, and there are substantial manufacturers of ropes and tobacco and machinery.

The principal buildings are of a relatively recent date and include the Parliament Buildings at Stormont, the City Hall, the Law Courts, the Public Library and the Museum and Art Gallery. The Queen's University (previously Queen's College) was chartered in 1908.

Lord Mayor (1956-57), R. J. R. Harcourt.
High Sheriff, W. H. Cooper.
Town Clerk, John Dunlop, C.B.E.

IRISH REPRESENTATIVE PEERS

Twenty-eight Representative Peers were elected as Life Members of the House of Lords until the establishment of the Irish Free State in 1920. In reply to a question in Parliament the Prime Minister stated (May 4, 1927) that the Government were advised that no fresh elections could take place in present circumstances.

THE ISLE OF MAN (MONA)

an island in the Irish Sea, in lat. $54^{\circ} 3' - 54^{\circ} 25' N.$, and long. $4^{\circ} 18' - 4^{\circ} 47' W.$, nearly equidistant from England, Scotland, and Ireland. The total land area is 145,325 acres (227 sq. miles), with a population in April, 1951, of 54,499 (25,086 males, 29,413 females). In 1955 the births numbered 615 and the deaths 772. The cultivated area (1955) was 76,139 acres, and the live-stock included 1,060 horses, 25,665 cattle, 87,843 sheep and 7,482 pigs. The island's main industry is catering for holiday-makers (numbering about 600,000 in the year) from all parts of the British Isles.

The land is rich in minerals, lead, blende and slate, and exports some agricultural produce. There are forty-seven miles of railway and about 25 miles of electric tram road.

Government.—The Isle of Man is governed by a Legislature, called the Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Legislative Council and the House of Keys. The Council consists of the Lieutenant-Governor, the Bishop of Sodor and Man, the two Deemsters, the Attorney-General, 2 members appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor, and 4 members appointed by the House of Keys. The House of Keys (possibly from the Scandinavian keise=chosen) is one of the most ancient legislative assemblies in the world. It consists of 24 members, elected by the adult male and female population, 13 from the six sheadings, 7 from Douglas, 2 from Ramsey, and 1 each from Castletown and Peel. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. After receiving the Royal Assent, a Bill does not become law unless promulgated within the ensuing twelve months, and on the first "Tynwald Day" (July 5) following it is announced in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys. Her Majesty the Queen visited the island in 1955, and presided over Tynwald on August 9.

Finance.—An annual contribution of £10,000 is made to the Imperial Government. In 1921 Tynwald accepted liability for the redemption of £250,000 War Stock, and in 1927 liability for a further sum of £500,000 of War Stock was accepted in final settlement of all responsibility to the Imperial Government in respect of the cost of the War (1914-18). The Isle of Man has made, in all, free gifts of £1,250,000 to the British Government and has lent £1,000,000 free of interest, £500,000 of the latter being converted into a free gift on June 15, 1948. Tynwald has agreed to increase the Imperial Government contribution to 5 per cent. of the Net Common Purse Receipts. The chief source of revenue is found in the customs duties, the only direct taxation being surtax, income tax and entertainments tax. Income tax ranges from 2s. 3d. in the £ for taxable incomes over £250 to 4s. 6d. for taxable incomes of £750 and over. Surtax is payable on incomes of £2,000 per annum at the rate of 10d. in the £, rising to 7s. 6d. in the £ on incomes of £20,000 and over per annum. There are 31 primary, 4 secondary schools, a school of technology, arts and crafts and a domestic science college, in addition to King William's College and the Buchan School for Girls; the gross expenditure on public education in 1954-55 was £398,090.

CAPITAL. Ψ Douglas. Pop. (1951) 20,288. The port of Douglas, radar controlled since March 1, 1948, is the first port in the world to be so equipped. Ψ Castletown (1,749) is the ancient capital; the other towns are Ψ Peel (2,582), and Ψ Ramsey (4,607).

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

situated off the north-west coast of France (at distances of from ten to thirty miles), are the only portions of the Dukedom of Normandy now belonging to the Crown, to which they have been attached ever since the Conquest. They consist of Jersey (28,717 acres), Guernsey (25,654 acres), Alderney (1,962 acres), Brechou (74), Great Sark (1,035), Little Sark (239), Herm (320), Jethou (44), and Libou (38), a total of 48,083 acres, or 75 square miles. At the 1951 census the population of Jersey was 57,206, and of Guernsey, etc. 45,474; The estimated populations in 1955 were: Jersey, 55,288; Guernsey, etc. 43,860 (Guernsey, 42,073, Alderney, 1,350; Sark, 437).

The climate is mild, and the soil exceptionally productive. The land under cultivation in 1954 was 40,455 vergées (2½ vergées=1 acre) in Jersey, and about 18,000 vergées in Guernsey, the principal product of the soil of Jersey being potatoes and tomatoes, and of Guernsey tomatoes, flowers and grapes. The famous Jersey and Guernsey breeds of cows have earned a well-deserved celebrity. The Lieutenant-Governors and Commanders-in-Chief of Jersey and Guernsey are the Personal Representatives of the Sovereign and the channel of communication between H.M. Government and the Insular Governments. The Bailiffs of Jersey and Guernsey, appointed by the Crown, are Presidents both of the Assembly of the States (the Insular Legislature) and of the Royal Court in their respective Bailiwicks.

The official language is English and a Norman-French patois is also in use. The principal imports are coal and coke, building material and groceries and provisions, and the chief exports potatoes, tomatoes, grapes, flowers, fern and cattle. The chief town of Jersey is St. Helier, on the south coast; the principal town of Guernsey is St. Peter Port, on the east coast and of Alderney is St. Anne's. A telephone exchange was opened on Alderney in May, 1949 and there is one in Sark. Herm is also connected to Guernsey by telephone.

The islands were in German occupation from June 30, 1940, to May 9, 1945.

PATRON SAINTS

St. George, Patron Saint of England.—St. George is believed to have been born in Cappadocia, of Christian parents, in the latter part of the 3rd century and to have served with distinction as a soldier under the Emperor Diocletian, including a visit to England on a military mission. When the persecution of Christians was ordered, St. George sought a personal interview to remonstrate with the Emperor and after a profession of faith resigned his military commission. Arrest and torture followed and he was martyred at Nicomedia on April 23, 303, a day ordered to be kept in remembrance as a national festival by the Council of Oxford in 1222, although it was not until the reign of Edward III, that he was made patron saint of England. His connection with a dragon seems to date from the close of the 6th century and to be due to the transfer of his remains from Nicomedia to Lydda, close to the scene of the legendary exploit of Perseus in rescuing Andromeda and slaying the sea monster, credit for which became attached to the Christian martyr. April 23 is not included among the Red Letter Days, the list of which was drawn up before the canonization of St. George.

St. David, Patron Saint of Wales.—St. David is believed to have been born near the beginning and to have died towards the end of the 6th century, his father being Prince Sandde and his mother Non (afterwards a Christian saint). St. David was an eloquent preacher and became Primate of South Wales while Bishop of Caerleon on Usk, but he afterwards moved the seat of the Primacy from Caerleon to Menevia, now St. David's. At the request of Henry I. he was canonized in the early part of the 12th century and became the tutelary saint of Wales, his annual festival being observed on March 1. This date is not included among the Red Letter Days, which were settled before the canonization of St. David.

St. Andrew, Patron Saint of Scotland.—St. Andrew, one of the Christian Apostles and brother of Simon Peter was born at Bethsaida on the Lake of Galilee and lived at Capernaum. He preached the Gospel in Asia Minor and in Scythia along the shores of the Black Sea and became the patron saint of Russia. It is believed that he suffered crucifixion at Patras in Achaia, on a crux decussata (now known as St. Andrew's Cross) and that his relics were removed from Patras to Constantinople and thence to St. Andrews, probably in the 8th century, since which time he has been the patron saint of Scotland. The festival of St. Andrew is held on November 30, a church festival indicated in the calendar by red letters.

St. Patrick, Patron Saint of Ireland.—St. Patrick was born in England about 389 and was carried off to Ireland as a slave about sixteen years later, escaping to Gaul at the age of 22. He was ordained deacon at Auxerre and having been consecrated Bishop in 432 was despatched to Wicklow to reorganize the Christian communities in Ireland. He founded the see of Armagh and introduced Latin into Ireland as the language of the Church. He died in 461 and his festival is celebrated on March 17, which is not reckoned among Red Letter Days, the list of which was drawn up before the canonization of St. Patrick.

The British Commonwealth of Nations

INTRODUCTION

AREA AND POPULATION.—The total area of the British Commonwealth is estimated to be about 14½ million square miles. Details of the areas and populations of the member states and dependencies appear in the following pages and are also tabulated on pp. 196-201. The total population of the British Commonwealth is officially estimated (June 9, 1953) as 639,807,000.

GOVERNMENT.—The Commonwealth is a free association of eight sovereign independent states, the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Pakistan and Ceylon, together with their dependencies.

The Commonwealth has no written constitution but its members are bound together by a community of ideals and interest which springs from a common historical background and a common political heritage which in spite of diversities of race and tradition has given rise to a broadly common pattern of institutions, legislative, executive and judicial. All members of the Commonwealth have certain constitutional features in common. They are parliamentary democracies, their laws being made with the consent of a freely elected parliament after discussion in that parliament, the executive government holding office by virtue of the support of a majority in parliament. Ministers, who must be members of parliament, are collectively responsible for the actions of the executive. With the exception of New Zealand and Pakistan, the Parliaments of the Commonwealth have two chambers, but in the case of the upper house the method of choosing members varies. Although legislation can be initiated in them, the upper houses are principally revising bodies and the lower houses, elected by secret ballot on a basis of adult suffrage, are dominant. The office of Speaker of the lower house is a feature of all Commonwealth parliaments.

At the head of each of the Parliaments of the Commonwealth (except those of the Republics of India and Pakistan) is the Queen, in whose name the administration is carried on. In all member countries of the Commonwealth except the Republics of India and Pakistan, Her Majesty is represented by the Governor-General, who in all essential respects holds the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs as is held by the Sovereign in Great Britain. The Governor-General is appointed by the Queen on the recommendation of the Government of the country concerned and is wholly independent of the Government of the United Kingdom. He is in many cases a national of the country in which he holds office. Her Majesty is Queen of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Ceylon, all of whom owe common allegiance to her, and is the symbol of their free association in the Commonwealth. India and Pakistan being Republics with Presidents as head of the state, do not owe allegiance to the Queen, but accept her as the symbol of the free association of member nations of the Commonwealth and as such as Head of the Commonwealth.

The status of member nations was defined by the Imperial Conference of 1926 and given legal substance by the Statute of Westminster, 1931, in which the Commonwealth nations were described as "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, but united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations." Other parts of the Commonwealth, such as Colonies, while they may be described as "Commonwealth countries," are not members of the Commonwealth.

FEDERATION OF RHODESIA AND NYASALAND.—Following a conference on Central African Federation held in London in January, 1953, and a referendum held in Southern Rhodesia on April 9, the Rhodesia and Nyasaland Federation Act was passed by the United Kingdom Parliament on July 14, 1953, and the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, consisting of the self-governing Colony of Southern Rhodesia and the Protectorates of Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, established by Order in Council. Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland are each proportionately represented in a Federal Assembly consisting of a Speaker and 35 members, which has control of defence, overseas trade, currency, transport, postal services and other matters of Federal concern. The Prime Minister and other Ministers are appointed by the Governor-General. For a period of ten years from the inception of the constitution there will be no change in the division of powers between the Federation and the territories except with the consent of all three territorial legislatures. (See main article under DOMINIONS, COLONIES AND PROTECTORATES.)

CONSULTATION.—Before the Second World War it was customary for an Imperial Conference, a formal gathering of delegates from the Commonwealth nations headed by their Prime Ministers, to meet every few years for discussion of a wide range of common problems. Its functions were purely advisory or consultative, and, as it had neither legislative nor executive authority, its resolutions were not binding on the participating Governments, though normally these Governments conformed to resolutions adopted unanimously. The last Imperial Conference was held in 1937. During the War informal meetings of Ministers were substituted. Imperial Conferences have now been replaced by Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Meetings. There have also been Commonwealth ministerial meetings and conferences on Defence, Finance, etc.

CITIZENSHIP AND NATIONALITY.—Each member of the Commonwealth of Nations defines the citizenship and nationality of its own people and determines the status of other Commonwealth nationals within its own boundaries. The United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Pakistan have not only created a local citizenship but have also conferred on their citizens the common status of Commonwealth citizen or British subject.* The Union of South Africa, and Ceylon, have created only a single, local citizenship without the common status. The Republic of Ireland, which in 1949 ceased to be a member of the Commonwealth, is not regarded by the other Commonwealth nations as a foreign country or her citizens as foreigners. Although Ambassadors instead of High Commissioners are now exchanged between the Republic of Ireland and Commonwealth countries, her relations with the United Kingdom are conducted through the Commonwealth Relations Office and not through the Foreign Office.

*In addition under the law of Southern Rhodesia citizens of Southern Rhodesia have the common status of British subject.

THE JUDICATURE.—The Supreme Judicial Authority of the Colonial Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice-Admiralty, and also from the Courts of certain members of the Commonwealth. The Committee consists of such members of the Privy Council as have held or are holding high judicial office, provision being made for the inclusion of representatives of other Commonwealth countries. The members of the Commonwealth have each a broadly similar judicial system, judges (except in India and Pakistan, where they are appointed by the President) being appointed by the Governor-General on the advice of the Government concerned. The Supreme Judicial Authority for Great Britain and Northern Ireland is the House of Lords.

DEFENCE.—Each of the independent members of the Commonwealth and also the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland is completely responsible for its own defence. Although there is no central organization to co-ordinate the defence strategy and resources of the Commonwealth, there is close liaison between the responsible governments and considerable day to day practical co-operation by the Services. There are ministerial conferences, meetings between High Commissioners and the Governments to which they are accredited, constant exchange of information and correspondence and personal contacts between Service advisers and officials. During the Second World War collaboration between Commonwealth countries was comprehensive and continuous—each of the then members (except the Republic of Ireland) entered the war in 1939.

The territories for whose defence the United Kingdom is responsible play their part and make their contribution to Commonwealth defence as far as their means allow. While the United Kingdom safeguards sea and air communications, using bases in the territories and providing some garrisons, the dependencies are responsible for the forces necessary for their own security (although in some cases the United Kingdom meets the cost).

Membership of the Commonwealth imposes no formal collective security commitment, but individual members may of course assume special international obligations for the maintenance of peace and security. All are members of the United Nations. The United Kingdom and Canada belong to N.A.T.O.; the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Pakistan are members of S.E.A.T.O.; Australia and New Zealand are signatories of the Pacific Security Treaty.

COLONIES AND PROTECTORATES.—The United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa have dependencies for which they are independently responsible. The United Kingdom is responsible, through the Colonial Office, for 33 administrative units which include the following colonies, protectorates, protected states, and trust territories.

Aden—colony and protectorates. The Governor of Aden is responsible for Kamaran Island.

Bahamas—colony.

Barbados—colony.

Bermuda—colony.

British Guiana—colony.

British Honduras—colony.

Cyprus—colony.

Falkland Islands—colony with dependencies, of which the principal are South Georgia, South Orkney, South Sandwich, South Shetland and Graham Land.

Fiji—colony. The Governor of Fiji is also Governor of the Pitcairn Islands Group and responsible for relations with the protected state of Tonga.

Gambia—colony and protectorate.

Gibraltar—colony.

Gold Coast—comprising the colony, Ashanti, the Northern Territories (protectorate) and Togoland under United Kingdom trusteeship.

Hong Kong—colony and leased territories.

Jamaica—colony with dependencies (Cayman Islands and the Turks and Caicos Islands).

Kenya—colony and protectorate.

Leeward Islands—a group of four separate colonies—Antigua, Montserrat, St. Christopher-Nevis and Anguilla, and the British Virgin Islands, with their dependencies, which are grouped for administrative purposes under one governor.

Malaya, Federation of—federation of nine protected states and two settlements.

Malta—colony.

Mauritius—colony.

Nigeria, Federation of (comprising the Northern, Western and Eastern Regions, the Southern Cameroons, and the Federal territory of Lagos)—colony, protectorate and the Cameroons under United Kingdom Trusteeship.

North Borneo—colony.

St. Helena—colony with dependencies (Ascension Island and Tristan da Cunha are the principal).

Sarawak—colony. The governor is ex officio High Commissioner for Brunei, a protected state.

Seychelles—colony.

Sierra Leone—colony and protectorate.

Singapore—colony.

Somaland Protectorate—protectorate.

Tanganyika—Trust Territory, under United Kingdom Trusteeship.

Trinidad and Tobago—colony.

Uganda—protectorate.

Western Pacific High Commission—the British Solomon Islands Protectorate, the Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony*, the Southern Line Islands, and the New Hebrides Condominium, which share British Commonwealth status.

Windsward Islands—a group of four separate colonies—Dominica, Grenada, St. Lucia, and St. Vincent) and their dependencies which are grouped for administrative purposes under one governor.

Zanzibar—protectorate.

*Canton and Enderbury Islands, which are part of the Colony, are administered as an Anglo-American condominium under a 50-year agreement having effect from 1939.

Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland—included in the Federation are Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, which are Protectorates; the Secretary of State for the Colonies retaining certain responsibilities towards them under the Federal Constitution.

Colony (or Settlement): a territory belonging by settlement, conquest or annexation to the British Crown.

Protectorate: a territory not formally annexed, but in respect of which, by treaty, grant, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means, Her Majesty has power and jurisdiction.

Protected State: a territory under a ruler which enjoys Her Majesty's protection, over whose foreign affairs she exercises control but in respect of whose internal affairs she does not exercise jurisdiction.

Trust Territory: a territory administered by the United Kingdom government under the trusteeship system of the United Nations.

Condominium: a territory over which responsibility is shared by two administering powers.

Leased Territories: this term applies only to that part of the mainland of China which was in 1898 leased to Great Britain for 99 years and is administered by the Government of Hong Kong.

Other Commonwealth Dependencies.—Australia is responsible for Papua, the trust territory of New Guinea and (jointly with U.K. and New Zealand) Nauru Island. New Zealand is responsible for the trust territory of western Samoa and South Africa for South-West Africa. In addition they administer a number of island territories and extensive Antarctic areas.

DEVELOPMENT AND FINANCE.—Complete financial autonomy is enjoyed by all members of the Commonwealth. Customs tariffs are generally lower for merchandise of British origin than for importations from foreign countries. There is no Imperial Debt, but certain obligations of Crown Colonies and Protectorates are met in the early stages of their development by the United Kingdom Government, and grants in aid of revenue are also made at need.

Under the Colonial Development and Welfare Act, 1940, annual sums of £5,000,000 for Development and £500,000 for Research were made available from United Kingdom Funds for 10 years from 1941. An Act passed in 1945 extended the grant period from 1951 to 1956, making £120,000,000 available in that period subject to a maximum of £17,500,000 in any one year, of which not more than £1,000,000 may be spent on research; the Act also abolished the obligation to surrender the unexpended portion of the annual grant to the Treasury. A further Act in 1949 increased the annual amount to £20,000,000, of which not more than £2,500,000 can be drawn in any one year for research. The Colonial Development and Welfare Act, 1955, extends the life of the previous Acts to March 31, 1960, and provides an additional sum of £80,000,000, which, added to unspent balances remaining, will make available for expenditure nearly £120,000,000 during 1955–60.

EDUCATION

The Inter-University Council for Higher Education Overseas.

29 Woburn Square, W.C.1.

[Museum: 8916]

The Council was established in 1946 as recommended in the report of the Asquith Commission for the purpose of strengthening co-operation between the universities in the United Kingdom and the existing universities in Colonial territories, and fostering the development of higher colleges in the Colonies and their advance to university status. The Council is composed of one representative member from each University in the United Kingdom, representative members from the Universities of Malaya, Malta and Hong Kong and co-opted members.

Chairman, Sir Alexander M. Carr-Saunders.
Vice-Chairman, Sir Raymond Priestley, M.C.
Secretary, S. J. Worsley, D.S.O., M.C., T.D.
Assistant Secretary, I. C. M. Maxwell.

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first permanent settlement at Port Royal (now Annapolis), Nova Scotia, was founded in 1605, and Quebec was founded in 1608. In 1759 Quebec was captured by the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of THE DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other territories of British North America. Provinces admitted since 1867 are: Manitoba (1870), British Columbia (1871), Prince Edward Island (1873), Alberta, Saskatchewan (1905) and Newfoundland (1949).

Canada occupies the whole of the northern part of the North American Continent (with the exception of Alaska), from 49° North latitude to the North Pole, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. In Eastern Canada, the southernmost point is Middle Island in Lake Erie, at 41° 41'.

Relief.—The relief of Canada is dominated by the mountain ranges running north and south on the west side of the Continent, by the Pre-Cambrian shield on the east, with, in between, the northern extension of the North American Plain. From the physiographic point of view Canada has six main divisions. These are: (1) Appalachian-Acadian Region, (2) the Canadian Shield, (3) the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes Lowland, (4) the Interior Plains, (5) the Cordilleran Region and (6) the Arctic Archipelago. The first region occupies all that part of Canada lying southeast of the St. Lawrence. In general, the relief is an alternation of highlands and lowlands, and is hilly rather than mountainous. The lowlands area seldom rises over 600 feet above sea level. The great Canadian Shield comprises more than half of the area. The interior as a whole, is an undulating, low plateau (general level 1,000 to 1,500 feet), with the more rugged relief lying along the southern border in Northern Quebec and Labrador. Throughout the whole area water or muskeg-filled depressions separate irregular hills and ridges, 150 to 200 feet in elevation. Newfoundland as an outlying portion of the shield consists of glaciated, low rolling terrain broken here and there by mountains. The flat relief of the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes lowland varies from 500 feet in the east to 1,700 feet south of Georgian Bay. The whole area in the western part slopes gently to the Great Lakes. The most striking relief is provided by the eastward facing scarp of the Niagara escarpment (elevation 250 to 300 feet). The interior plains, comprising the Prairie Provinces, slope eastward and northward a few feet per mile. The descent from west to east is made from 5,000 feet to less than 1,000 feet, in three distinct levels, with each new level being marked by an eastward facing coteau or scarp. Horizontal strata and peneplanation make for slight relief of the level to rolling type. Five fairly well-developed topographic divisions mark out the Cordilleran region of western Canada. These are: (1) coastal ranges, largely above 5,000 feet with deep fiords and glaciated valleys, (2) the interior plateau, around 3,500 feet and comparatively level, (3) the Selkirk ranges, largely above 5,000 feet, (4) the Rocky Mountains with their chain of 10,000 to 12,000-foot peaks, and (5) the Peace River or Tramontane region with its rolling diversified country. The Arctic Archipelago, with its plateau-like character has an elevation between 500 and 1,000 feet, though in Baffin Land and Ellesmere Island the mountain ranges rise to nearly 7,000 feet. Two tremendous waterway systems, the St. Lawrence and the Mackenzie, providing thousands of miles of shallow highway, occupy a broad area of lowland with their dominant axis following the edge of the shield.

Climate.—The climate in the eastern and central portions presents greater extremes than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The soil is generally fertile and all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated.

GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of Canada has its source in the British North America Act of 1867 which created the Federation of Upper and Lower Canada, to which Federation the other Provinces have subsequently adhered. Under this Act Canada came into being on July 1, 1867 (Dominion Day), and under the Statute of Westminster, which received the royal assent on Dec. 12, 1931, Canada and the Provinces were exempted (in common with other self-governing Dominions of the Commonwealth of Nations) from the operation of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, the Statute of Westminster having removed all limitations with regard to the legislative autonomy of the Dominions.

The Executive power is vested in a Governor-General appointed by the Sovereign on the advice of the Canadian Ministry, and aided by a Privy Council.

THE LEGISLATURE

Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Commons. The Senate consists of 101 members, nominated for life by the Governor-General, distributed between the various provinces thus: 24 for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, 10 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 6 for Newfoundland, 6 for British Columbia, 6 for Manitoba, 6 for Alberta, and 6 for Saskatchewan; each Senator must be thirty years old, a resident in the province for which he is appointed, a natural-born or naturalized subject of the Queen, and the owner of a property qualification amounting to $4,000. The Speaker of the Senate is chosen by the Government of the day. The House of Commons is elected every five years at longest.

In 1952, through an amendment to the British North American Act, it was provided that the number of Members of the House should be 265 and that the representation of the provinces should forthwith and thereafter on the completion of each decennial census, be readjusted by such authority, in such manner and from such time as the Parliament of Canada from time to time provided, subject to certain rules. A redistribution of the Parliamentary constituencies was made when an Act to readjust the representation in the House of Commons received Royal Assent on July 4, 1952. Under the terms of this Act, the number of representatives elected for each province is now as follows: 85 for Ontario, 75 for Quebec, 12 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 14 for Manitoba, 22 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 17 for Saskatchewan, 17 for Alberta, 7 for Newfoundland, 1 for the Yukon Territory and 1 for MacKenzie district of the Northwest Territories. (Present total 265).

Members of the House of Commons must be Canadian citizens or other British subjects, qualified voters under the Elections Act and of the full age of twenty-one years; no property qualification is necessary, its members are elected upon a very wide suffrage, and at the General Election in Dec. 1921 women exercised the franchise on the same terms as men for the first time in a Federal Election. For electoral purposes each province is divided into districts, returning a member on a plurality of votes taken by ballot. The members of the House themselves elect their Speaker, and twenty, including the Speaker, form a quorum. Members of the Upper and Lower Houses receive $8,000 per annum, with travelling expenses and expense allowances, and deductions for non-attendance.

The Houses of Parliament were destroyed by fire on Feb. 3, 1916, the new buildings being started the same year; the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught (Gov.-Gen.), Sept. 1, 1916, and the corner stone of the main tower by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales (King Edward VIII.), Sept. 1, 1919. The Speaker's Chair in the new House of Commons (a replica of that at Westminster) was presented in 1921 by Viscount Ullswater (ex-Speaker of the House of Commons of the United Kingdom) on behalf of the Empire Parliamentary Association of the Houses of Lords and Commons.

THE JUDICATURE

The Judicature.—Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first-named are appointed by the Governor-General, for life, from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and eight puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by separate judges, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada. The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of Queen's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

Following the Second World War, Canada's three Armed Forces were brought within the scope of one Department and all matters relating to defence were made the responsibility of the Minister of National Defence. Under his direction the Chiefs of Staff for the Navy, the Army and the Air Force are responsible for the control and administration of their respective Services. In 1947 the Defence Research Board was established under a Chairman, who is responsible to the Minister for defence research and development and related matters.

Navy.—The Royal Canadian Navy, established in 1910, is administered by Naval Headquarters in Ottawa through principal commands at Halifax, N.S., and Esquimalt, B.C., for the Regular Force, and a third principal command at Hamilton, Ont., for the R.C.N. (Reserve) naval divisions, which are located in 22 cities across Canada.

On June 15, 1956, the Navy had 57 ships, excluding auxiliaries, in commission and 42 in reserve, excluding nine on loan to other Canadian government agencies and three on loan to the Royal Norwegian Navy. There were also 123 aircraft in naval service. Among the ships in commission were one light fleet carrier, one light cruiser, 12 destroyer escorts, 20 modernized frigates, eight coastal escorts, eight coastal minesweepers, one Arctic patrol ship, one survey vessel, one apprentice training ship and six patrol craft. The R.C.N. is made up of members of the Regular Forces of the R.C.N. and members of the Active List of the R.C.N. (Reserve). On May 31, 1956, there were 18,930 officers and men in the Regular Force and 5,936 in the Reserve Force.

Army.—The Canadian Army is administered by Army Headquarters at Ottawa through five command headquarters. At December 31, 1955, the Canadian Army (Regular) had 390 active units in Canada and abroad. The Regular Army comprises the NATO forces, which consist of 20d Canadian Infantry Brigade Group in Europe and Headquarters 1st Canadian Infantry Division, 1st and 3rd Canadian Infantry Brigades in Canada; the fourth Canadian Infantry Brigade; the Mobile Striking Force, supporting units and a number of static units and installations for the command and administration of the Army as a whole.

At the same date there were 660 units of the Canadian Army Militia and 29 units in the Supplementary Reserve. These twenty units, along with the Regular Reserve, the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, the Cadet Services of Canada and the Reserve Militia consist of personnel enrolled for other than continuing full-time service.

The Army is responsible for the maintenance of the North-West Highway System and for the operation of the North-West Territories and Yukon Radio System. It also fulfils certain functions for Canada's three Armed Forces, including postal services, dental services, and medical supplies. In fulfilment of Canada's NATO commitments, the Canadian Army maintains one Infantry Brigade Group in Europe under the command of the Supreme Allied Commander, Europe (SACEUR).

On May 31, 1956, the strength of the Canadian Army (Regular) was 47,630 and the Canadian Army (Militia) was 43,800.

Air Force.—The Royal Canadian Air Force was officially brought into being April 1, 1924. It is administered by Air Force Headquarters at Ottawa through nine major formations. At the beginning of 1956 the R.C.A.F. had 41 squadrons in service, 29 being regular force squadrons and 12 auxiliary force squadrons. Twelve of the squadrons were stationed in Europe under NATO and the balance operated in Canada where there were nine CF-100 all-weather interceptor squadrons for air defence, three maritime reconnaissance squadrons; four transport squadrons; one photographic reconnaissance squadron; two light bomber auxiliary squadrons and 10 auxiliary fighter squadrons supporting the air defence rôle. The R.C.A.F.'s part in Canada's direct NATO contributions consists of the provision of 12 squadrons of Sabre jet day fighters serving in France and Germany under the command of SACEUR, and the operation in Canada of the NATO Aircrew Training Plan. Under this plan a total of 4,017 pilots and navigators from 10 other NATO nations had graduated by March 31, 1956, and a further 917 were in training. The strength of the R.C.A.F. (Regular) was 49,793 on May 31, 1956, and at the same date the R.C.A.F. (Auxiliary) was 5,409.

EDUCATION

Education is under the control of the Provincial Governments, the cost of the publicly controlled schools being met by local taxation, aided by provincial grants. There were (1954) 30,242 publicly controlled schools with 2,796,809 pupils. In addition there were 130,836 pupils in private elementary, secondary and commercial schools. There are special schools for Indians with 28,174 pupils (1954). At December 1, 1955 there were 32 universities and 246 other institutions of higher education with an estimated full-time university grade enrolment of 71,600. The University of Toronto, founded in 1827, had an enrolment of 10,739; British Columbia (1907) of 6,523; Montreal (1920) of 8,564; McGill (1829) of 6,184; Manitoba (1877) of 4,231; Saskatchewan (1907) of 2,930; Laval (1852) of 6,201; Alberta (1906) of 3,648; Queen's (1841) of 2,429; Ottawa (1848) of 1,754; Dalhousie (1818) of 1,262 and Western Ontario (1878) of 2,692. Figures include enrolment at affiliated colleges.

LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

Languages.—Canada has two official languages, English and French. At the last census about 67 per cent. of the total population gave English and about 20 per cent. gave French as their native tongue. Some 1,727,000 (or 12 per cent.) are bilingual. Owing to the spread of education the percentages of illiterates is very low: 152,775 were unable to speak English or French.

Literature.—In addition to the rich heritages of English and French literature there is a definite Canadian literature in both tongues. In both languages history and biography were at first predominant but all fields have since been covered. In 1954 there were 97 daily newspapers published in Canada, 84 in English and 13 in French, with an aggregate circulation of nearly 3,800,000. In addition, there were about 738 weekly newspapers published in English and 133 in French.

FINANCE

The official Rate of Exchange of the Canadian Dollar in 1945 was $4.45=£1 sterling. On Sept. 19, 1949, Canada devalued the Canadian dollar by 10 per cent in relation to the U.S. dollar, and the rate for sterling became $3.08=£1. On Sept. 30, 1950, the Canadian Government cancelled the official rates of exchange of the Canadian dollar and did not prescribe any new fixed official rate. During 1955 the average market rate for the U.S. dollar was 98.63 cents in terms of Canadian funds.

CANADIAN LOAN TO U.K.

The United Kingdom Financial Agreement Act of 1946 authorized a loan to U.K. of $1,250,000,000 to enable the U.K. to buy Canada's export products during the period of world reconstruction. On Feb. 20, 1951, the U.K. Government announced that no further drawings would be made under the agreement, the total loan advanced amounting to $1,185,000,000. During the fiscal year 1955-56 the United Kingdom Government repaid $30,000,000, reducing the balance to $83,000,000.

The length of telegraph lines operated in 1954 was 46,294 miles; number of telegrams transmitted totalled 19,066,354. On March 31, 1952, there were 2,334,828 radio stations operating in Canada, of which 2,313,944 were private receiving stations for the reception of broadcasting programmes.

On Dec. 31, 1954, there were 3,860,269 telephones and 13,357,289 miles of telephone wire in use.

TERRITORIES

The Yukon Act, 1952, as amended, provides for the administration of the Territory by a Commissioner acting under instructions from time to time given by the Governor in Council or the Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources. Legislative powers, analogous to those of a provincial government, are exercised by the Commissioner in Council. The Council comprises five members elected from electoral districts in the Territory. The area of the Territory is 207,076 square miles with a population (Census 1951) of 9,096, including 1,563 Indians and Eskimos. Mining is the chief industry. Values of production in 1955 were: silver $4,963,005; gold, $2,567,895; lead, $3,704,403; zinc, $2,563,495; coal, $87,444; cadmium, $49,918.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, Whitehorse. Pop. (1951), 2,594.

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES.

Area 1,304,903 square miles; population (Census of 1951), 16,004, including 10,660 Indians and Eskimos.

The Northwest Territories are subdivided into the districts of Mackenzie, Keewatin and Franklin.

The Northwest Territories Act, 1952, as amended, provides for the government of the Territories by a Commissioner (who is responsible to the Government through the Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources), and a council of nine (comprising 4 members elected in the District of Mackenzie and 5 appointed members). Legislative powers, analogous to those of a provincial government, are exercised by the Commissioner in Council.

The chief industry of the Northwest Territories is mining. The value of gold production in 1955 was $10,990,405; crude petroleum $342,000; silver $101,595 and natural gas $6,000; pitchblende $12,000,000, tantalum $9,760. Fur produced in 1954-55 was valued at $1,166,919.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, Ottawa. The Commissioner in Council holds two sessions each year, one of which is held in Ottawa and the other in the Territories.

Commissioner, R. Gordon Robertson.

Finance.—The estimated revenue for the year ending March 31, 1956 is $53,705,814, and the ordinary expenditure $53,667,591.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total land area is 17,582,720 acres, of which 659,500 were under field crops in 1953. The live stock in 1953 included 29,000 horses, 193,400 cattle, 64,300 sheep, 56,000 hogs and 1,090,000 poultry. Settlement is encouraged and improved farms are obtainable at reasonable rates. The chief commercial fish are lobsters, sardines, herring, cod and salmon. The value of production of the fisheries in 1953 was $17,522,500. The cheese factories in operation produced 786,908 lb. of cheese and the creameries 7,987,695 lb. of butter in 1953.

Manufactures.—The principal manufacturing centre is Saint John. Natural gas has been found in immense quantities in Albert County, and the south-eastern section of the Province is remarkably rich in oil shales. Coal is found (output, 1954, 784,388 tons, value $6,953,449), also silver, lead, antimony, copper, iron, manganese, and other valuable minerals in considerable quantities.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL Ψ FREDERICTON: population (1951), 16,018. Ψ Saint John (pop. 63,500) is one of the principal winter ports of Canada and is connected by C.P.R. and Canadian National Railways with Montreal: Moncton (27,334).

NEWFOUNDLAND

Area and Population.—THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND is situated between 46° 37'–51° 37' N. latitude and 52° 44'–59° 30' W. longitude, on the north-east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from the North American Continent by the Straits of Belle Isle on the N.W. and by Cabot Strait on the S.W. The island is about 317 miles long and 316 miles broad and is triangular in shape, with Cape Bauld (N.), Cape Race (S.E.) and Cape Ray (S.W.) at the angles. It comprises an area of 42,734 sq. miles (exclusive of Labrador) with a population at the Census of 1945 of 316,294 (exclusive of Labrador).

Government.—On April 1, 1949, the island, with its dependency in Labrador, became the 10th Province of the Dominion of Canada. The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly of 28 members.

The Legislature.

A General Election was held on Nov. 26, 1951.

The present state of parties is: Liberal, 20; Progressive Conservative, 4; Ind. Liberal, 1; vacant 3.

Speaker of the Legislative Council, Capt. Hon. Reginald Sparkes.

Clerk of the House of Assembly, Henry Cummings.

Finance.—The revenue, on current account, in 1955–56 was $39,340,000 and the expenditure $39,338,000. The estimated revenue for 1956–57 is $42,755,000 and expenditure $42,574,000.

Production and Industry.—With the exception of Gander, Bishop's Falls, Grand Falls, Badger, Millertown, Buchans, Howley, Deer Lake, Stephenville and that portion of the West Coast between St. George's and Port aux Basques the inhabitants are chiefly located on the coast-line of the shore and bays. Six mines are in operation: two iron ore, one limestone, one lead, zinc and copper and two fluorspar. Two pulp and paper mills are in operation with a total production of 533,285 tons of newsprint and 53,940 tons of sulphite pulp.

The value, in 1955, of products of the forests was estimated at $85,000,000; fishery products were valued at $25,000,000 and the estimated value of agricultural products (including live stock) was $20,000,000. The value in 1955 of mineral products was $70,317,000. Lead, zinc and copper production in 1955 was 39,382 long tons, valued at $15,214,000; iron ore production was 7,920,000 long tons valued at $47,900,000 and fluorspar 131,049 tons valued at $3,031,000.

Railways.—From April 1, 1949, the rail system, formerly owned and operated by the Newfoundland Government, was taken over by the Dominion of Canada and entrusted to the Canadian National Railway for operation. The main line of the railway extends from St. John's on the east coast to Port aux Basques on the west coast—a distance of 547 miles—with branches connecting with the ports of Argentia, Carbonear, Bonavista and Lewisporte, a total mileage of 705. There are also 56 miles of private line. Communication between various points on the coast and between Port aux Basques and North Sydney, Nova Scotia, is maintained by a fleet of 8 motor vessels and 7 steam vessels, operated by the Railway.

Posts and Telegraphs.—There were 640 post offices open in 1955. The number of telegraph and telephone offices was 675.

Civil Aviation.—Trans-Canada, British Overseas and 10 other lines (2 of them for local traffic only) operate from Gander Airport.

Shipping.—On Dec. 31, 1955, ships registered in Newfoundland consisted of 199 sailing vessels of 10,322 gross tons, 18 steam vessels of 15,535 gross tons and 878 motor vessels of 58,175 gross tons.

EXTERNAL TRADE

Imports..... 1955 $40,381,000

Exports..... $148,000,000

Principal Cities.—The Capital, Ψ ST. JOHN'S (population 1951, 67,749) contains two cathedrals, several banks and numerous public buildings. Other towns are Bell Island (10,291), Corner Brook West (6,831), Grand Falls (5,064), Carbonear (3,351), Windsor (3,718), Gander (3,956), Bonavista (3,718), Curling (3,559), Botwood (3,421), Corner Brook East (3,445) and Bishop Falls (3,139).

LABRADOR

Labrador, the most northerly district in the Province of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of the North American continent, and extends from Blanc Sablon, at the north-east entrance to the Straits of Belle Isle, on the south, to Cape Chidley, at the eastern entrance to Hudson's Straits on the north. The territory under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland has an area estimated at 110,000 square miles, with a population (1951) of 7,890. Labrador is noted for its cod fisheries. It also possesses valuable salmon, herring, trout and seal fisheries.

At the headwaters of the Hamilton River an investigation is being carried out in an area geologically of the same age as part of the Lake Superior iron ore. In this area some 400,000,000 long tons of iron ore have been outlined—by drilling. A railway from Seven Islands, in Quebec Province, a port on the northern shore of the St. Lawrence River, to the site of the iron ore deposits, near the headwaters of the Hamilton River, is now completed at an estimated cost of $200,000,000. Construction of a shipping port at Seven Islands has also been completed.

Between Hamilton River and the southern boundary of Labrador there exists the largest stand of virgin timber on the North American continent. Estimates made, as a result of aerial and ground surveys, show some 40,000,000 cords of merchantable timber, with an approximate value of $125,000,000 on the stump. The Hamilton River, flowing into Hamilton Inlet, is probably the largest undeveloped power river left in North America. It has a length of 560 miles and drains an area of 30,000 square miles. The two most important power sites on it are at Grand Falls and at Muskrat Falls. Theoretical continuous horse-power is 4,350,000.

CAPITAL, Ψ Battle Harbour (pop. 108); other towns: Goose Bay (2,416); North West River (511); L'Anse-au-Loup (268); Cartwright (244).

NOVA SCOTIA

Area and Population.—NOVA SCOTIA is a peninsula between 43° 25'–47° N. lat and 59° 40'–66° 25' W. long., and is connected with New Brunswick by a low fertile isthmus about thirteen miles wide. It comprises an area (with Cape Breton Island) of 21,068 square miles (325 miles of which consists of lakes, rivers and inlets of the sea) with a total population (Census 1951) of 642,584.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly of 37 members. Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. Alistair Fraser, Q.C. (1952) $9,000

Finance.—The revenue in 1953–54 was $50,768,763 and the expenditure, including the Sinking Fund, $48,609,945; the funded debt (March 31, 1954) was $203,496,000 the net direct debt being $120,598,095.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—According to the 1951 census Nova Scotia has a total land area of 13,275,520 acres, of which 3,173,691 acres are held as farm land. At the same census, the total number of occupied farms was listed at 23,515. Of the total area in farm land, 477,459 acres are in improved crops and 2,511,716 in unimproved land.

The Annapolis Valley section of Nova Scotia is famous for its fruit production, with an average crop of nearly 4,000,000 bushels annually, although on occasion it has produced over 6,000,000 bushels of apples.

The number of live stock is estimated (1954) as follows: horses, 21,700; cattle and calves, 204,000; sheep and lambs, 99,000; hogs, 39,000; poultry, 1,707,000.

Manufactures.—In 1952 there were 1,533 establishments employing 33,371 people. The gross value of production was $326,839,747, foods and beverages, wood and paper, iron and steel, petroleum and coal products accounting for the larger proportion of this amount. The principal industrial centres are Halifax, Sydney, Pictou, Truro, Amherst, New Glasgow, Trenton and Yarmouth.

Fisheries.—The total landed value of the fisheries in 1954 was $22,193,000. Landings totalled 383,646,000 lbs. About 20,000 people are employed in fishing and fish processing.

Minerals.—5,839,761 tons of coal were produced in 1954. Gypsum production totalled 3,380,669 tons; barytes 232,030 tons; salt 147,459 tons. In 1954 a new mineral operation in Cape Breton Island produced a total of $4,000,000 worth of copper, lead and zinc and $350,000 worth of gold and silver. Total value of mine products (1954) $68,000,000.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, Ψ HALIFAX, population of Metropolitan area (1951) 133,931, one of the terminals of the Canadian National Railway, with a magnificent harbour, is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and the entrepôt of a large trade with the West Indies, South America and Europe. One of the largest bridges in the British Commonwealth spans the harbour and connects the town of Dartmouth and surrounding area with the city proper. A shipyard for the building of large ocean-going steamers, with a dry dock, is one of the leading industries; other cities and towns are Sydney, Glace Bay and New Waterford (see below). Dartmouth (15,037), Truro (10,756), New Glasgow (9,933), Amherst (9,870), Sydney Mines (8,410) and Yarmouth (8,106).

CAPE BRETON ISLAND.

Cape Breton Island, formerly a distinct Colony, was incorporated with Nova Scotia in 1819. It contains an area of 3,975 sq. miles, population (1951) 157,696. The chief city, Sydney (pop. 31,317), on the eastern coast, has valuable collieries in the neighbourhood and is the site of the third largest steel works in Canada. Glace Bay and New Waterford, also coal mining centres, have populations of 25,586 and 10,423 respectively. The Canadian National Railway provides service to the island. Construction of a large rail-highway causeway from mainland to island was completed in 1955.

ONTARIO

Area and Population.—The Province of Ontario contains a total area of 412,582 square miles, with a population (estimated 1956) of 5,307,000.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 98 members elected for five years. The General Election of June, 1955, returned 83 Progressive Conservatives, 10 Liberals, 3 Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, 1 Liberal-Labour and 1 Independent Progressive Conservative.

Finance.—The estimated Net Ordinary Revenue of the Provincial Government for 1954-55 was $388,900,000 and the estimated Net Ordinary Expenditure was $388,200,000. The estimated Gross Debt was $1,053,100,000 on March 31, 1955, and the Net Capital Debt was estimated at $677,100,000.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total land area of Ontario is about 220,200,000 acres. There are about 15,300,000 acres of cleared land, of which 8,400,000 acres were under field crops in 1954. These included wheat, 741,000 acres; oats, 1,685,000 acres; barley, 144,000 acres; soy beans, 254,000 acres; mixed grains, 1,130,000 acres; hay and clover, 3,440,000 acres.

In 1954 the numbers of live stock were—horses, 168,000; cattle, 3,094,000; sheep and lambs, 279,000; hogs, 660,000, and poultry, 16,672,000.

Forestry.—Productive forested lands comprise 102,400,000 acres or about 46.3 per cent. of the land area of the Province. The gross value of wood logged in the Province in 1954 before further processing was estimated at $170,000,000. Pulp and paper is one of the most important manufacturing industries in the Province. In 1954 it turned out products having an estimated gross value of $350,000,000. Wood pulp production amounted to an estimated 2,400,000 tons valued at $185,000,000. About 2,100,000 tons of paper were produced, valued at $270,000,000, of which newsprint production accounted for some 1,350,000 tons valued at about $150,000,000.

Manufactures.—Ontario is the chief manufacturing province of Canada. The gross value of its manufactures in 1953, was $8,900,000,000. In that year there were over 634,000 employees.

Minerals.—Ontario leads the other Provinces in mineral production, the output in 1954 being a record figure of $485,000,000. The principal metals produced and their value were: gold, $78,300,000; nickel, $176,500,000; copper, $80,900,000; platinum, $12,500,000; iron ore, $16,800,000; and palladium, ruthenium, etc., $7,500,000.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, ♀TORONTO, population (1954) 682,415 (Metropolitan Toronto, 1,250,773), with extensive shipping interests on the Great Lakes, and the chief centre of industrial, commercial and financial activity; ♀Hamilton, the "Birmingham of Canada" (220,705); Ottawa, the Federal capital (208,915); London (98,666); Brantford (49,856); ♀Kingston (43,145); Peterborough (40,489); Windsor, connected by tunnel and bridge with Detroit, Mich., U.S.A. Finance.—The estimated revenue for the year ended March 31, 1955, was $78,415,520, and the expenditure $78,119,820. The net public debt (Dec. 31, 1954) was $83,045,000.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Saskatchewan is the largest wheat-producing province of the Dominion, and one of the most productive grain areas in the world. The province maintains approximately 40 per cent. of the total cultivated land in Canada. The average annual wheat yield is about 257,500,000 bushels. In 1953 the total value of all field crops was $664,652,000. Live stock on farms included 229,000 horses, 1,387,000 cattle, 156,000 sheep, 539,000 swine and 8,704,000 poultry.

Industries.—In 1952 there were 1,022 industrial establishments, employing 11,307 persons. The gross value of manufactured products in 1953 was $265,000,000, the cost of wages paid in 1952 being $29,490,000. The principal industrial centres are Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw and Prince Albert.

In 1954 the value of mineral production was $57,000,000, compared with $35,983,923 in 1950, $31,292,693 in 1947 and $22,668,201 in 1945. Metals accounted for $38,200,000 in 1954, fuels $12,600,000, and industrial minerals $6,200,000.

CAPITAL, REGINA. Population (1954 estimate) 77,000. Other large centres are Saskatoon (60,000), Moose Jaw (27,000), Prince Albert (20,000), Weyburn (7,800), Swift Current (9,000), North Battleford (9,000) and Yorkton (8,000).

PHYSICAL FEATURES

Australia was separated from the other great land surfaces at a remote period, and exhibits therefore some very archaic types of fauna and flora. It may be regarded as the largest island or the smallest continent, being surrounded by the following waters:—North, the Timor and Arafura Seas and Torres Strait; East, Pacific Ocean; South, Bass Strait (which separates Tasmania from the Continent) and Southern Ocean; and West, Indian Ocean. The total area of the Continent is 2,948,366 English square miles, the island of Tasmania having an area of 26,215 square miles, and making a total area for the States and Territories of 2,974,581 square miles. The coast-line of Australia is approximately 12,210 miles, and the geographical position of the Continent is between 10° 41'–39° 8' South latitude and 113° 9'–153° 39' East longitude; the greatest length East to West is 2,400 miles, and from North to South 1,971 miles. Its nearest distance from England is about 11,000 miles.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area, the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, part of which is below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. The Great Barrier Reef extends parallel with the East coast of Queensland for 1,200 miles, at a distance of about 60 miles from the mainland. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex, and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in eastern and south-eastern Australia, stretching far inland from the coastal range, is a fertile area devoted partly to agriculture, partly to dairying, while the inland districts particularly are admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The most extensive mountain system takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. The highest peak, Mount Kosciusko, in New South Wales, reaches an elevation of 7,328 feet. The principal rivers are the Murray, which debouches on the south coast, after receiving the waters of its tributaries the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the continent; on the east coast, the Hawkesbury, Hunter, Clarence, Richmond, Brisbane, Mary, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; on the north, the Drysdale, Ord, Victoria, and Daly; and the Roper, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt; the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, however, mitigated by successful borings and by the construction of large dams. The work of conserving the vast quantities of water which run to waste in the wet season is being vigorously prosecuted by a system of locks and weirs on some of the rivers. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, zinc, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, tin, gypsum, magnesite, osmiridium, uranium, opal, sapphires, &c., and there are abundant supplies of building stones, clays, &c. The potentialities of the country in regard to its supplies of metals and minerals have not yet been fully tested. Oil was discovered at Exmouth Gulf, 680 miles north of Perth, in December 1953.

Climate.—The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), Sept. 22 (Spring), and Dec. 22 (Summer). The climate is extremely dry, but, except in the tropical coast-land of the north, the continent is everywhere highly beneficial to Europeans, the range of temperature being smaller than that of the countries similarly situated.

GOVERNMENT

The Commonwealth of Australia was constituted by an Act of the Imperial Parliament dated July 9, 1900, and was inaugurated Jan. 1, 1901. The Government is that of a Federal Commonwealth within the British Commonwealth of Nations, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by a Federal Ministry of twenty-two Ministers of State. Under the Constitution the Federal Government has acquired and may acquire certain defined powers as surrendered by the States, residuary legislative power remaining with the States. Trade and customs passed under Federal control immediately on the establishment of the Commonwealth; posts, telegraphs and telephones, naval and military defence, lighthouses and quarantine on proclaimed dates. The Federal Government also controls such matters as social services, patents and copyrights, naturalization, navigation, &c. The right of a State to legislate is not abrogated except in connexion with matters exclusively under Federal controls, but where a State law is inconsistent with a law of the Commonwealth the latter prevails to the extent of the inconsistency.

THE LEGISLATURE

The Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. An Act, assented to on May 18, 1948, provided for an increase in the number of members of the Senate from thirty-six to sixty, and for the number of members of the House of Representatives to be increased from seventy-four to as nearly as practicable twice the number of Senators. There are now 124 members in the House of Representatives, including the two members, with restricted voting powers, representing the two internal territories. Members of the Senate are normally elected for six years by universal suffrage, each of the six States returning an equal number. The House of Representatives, similarly elected for a maximum of three years, contains members proportionate to the population, with a minimum of five members for each State. The present state of parties in the House of Representatives (excluding the two Labour members for the internal territories) is Liberal and Liberal-Country Party 57, Country Party 18, Labour 47. Members of both Houses receive £A2,350 per annum, with allowances and free air and rail travel on parliamentary business.

DEFENCE

At the outbreak of the 1939-45 War the Department of Defence embraced the three fighting services. In November, 1939, separate Departments, each with its own Minister, were created for the control and administration of the Navy, Army and Air Force. The Defence Department as then reconstituted retained responsibility for overall defence policy and for the conduct during the war of the business of the War Cabinet and the Advisory War Council. The four separate Departments were retained at the end of the war.

Subject to the authority of Cabinet and the Council of Defence, the Minister and Department of Defence are responsible for the formulation and general application of a unified defence policy relating to the Defence Forces and their requirements; the defence aspects of armistice and peace terms, control commissions, forces of occupation; matters of policy or principle with joint service or inter-departmental defence aspect; the higher defence machinery; the control of the joint service machinery; the co-ordination of national planning for an emergency, etc.

Navy

The Royal Australian Navy consists of the aircraft carriers Sydney and Melbourne, 4 destroyers, 5 frigates, 4 ocean minesweepers, 4 boom working vessels and 39 miscellaneous craft. In addition, 3 submarines are on loan from the Royal Navy for anti-submarine training. In reserve there are the light cruiser Hobart, 3 destroyers (1 of which is being converted to a frigate) 12 frigates, 24 ocean minesweepers, 1 depot ship, 1 boom working vessel and 16 miscellaneous craft.

Vessels being built in Australian dockyards include three Daring class destroyers. One was launched at Sydney in March 1952, and another was launched at Melbourne in May 1954. The third is under construction at Sydney. Four anti-submarine frigates are to be built. One "Q" class destroyer is being converted to a fast anti-submarine frigate.

Army

The Military Forces of the Commonwealth are administered by a Military Board, with the Minister for the Army as President and 6 members.

For the financial year 1955-56, the establishment for the Australian Regular Army was 23,000 soldiers and 4,600 civilians. This includes a Field Force, cadres for duty with the Citizen Military Forces, administration and instructional staff for National Service, staff for training installations and headquarters, base, and administrative units, in addition to the Pacific Islands Regiment comprising European officers and non-commissioned officers and native troops. The Australian Army includes a Citizen Military Force of 84,978 (as at June 30, 1955), comprising a volunteer component, and National Servicemen on full-time duty. A Women's Royal Australian Army Corps forms part of the Australian Regular Army, the women being employed in direct substitution of male soldiers. Companies of the Women's Royal Australian Army Corps and the Women's Australian Army Nursing Corps have been raised within the framework of the Citizen Military Force.

The strength of the Australian Regular Army on April 30, 1956, was 23,061 all ranks, of whom 736 were serving in Korea or Japan, 1,416 in Malaya, and 104 in other overseas appointments.

The Australian Cadet Corps, composed of students at educational establishments, had a strength of 32,575 school cadets on March 31, 1956.

Air

The total strength of the R.A.A.F. on May 1, 1956, was 15,648. The total number of squadrons was 17, and of training units 24. One squadron, one transport flight and one airfield construction squadron were located overseas. The squadron was operating in Malaya in support of the British ground forces, the airfield construction squadron was also in Malaya, and the transport flight was operating in Japan with the British Commonwealth Forces.

Commonwealth Expenditure on Defence and War and Repatriation Services in the year ended June 30, 1956, was £A315,184,000, as compared with £A305,828,000 for the previous year.

(a) Excludes certain government subsidies aggregating approximately £7,200,000.

The Trans-Australian (Government) Railway, 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge, connects Kalgoorlie, W. A., with Port Pirie, S. A. (1,108 miles) and so forms a link (including Kalgoorlie-Fremantle 387 miles) between Fremantle and Brisbane, Q., a total length of 3,372 miles.

The gross earnings of all Government lines in 1954-55 were £173,960,267, working expenses £174,477,464, and net revenue £1,492,803. In 1954-55 passenger journeys numbered 516,857,560 and 47,697,508 tons of goods and live stock were carried. Sydney and Melbourne suburban systems are electrified.

Tramways.—There are 442 miles of tramways in Australia, all of which are of electric traction. The several Governments control 299 miles and municipal authorities 143 miles.

Shipping.—The entrances and clearances (one entrance and one clearance per voyage, irrespective of the number of ports visited) of vessels engaged in overseas trade at the various Australian ports in 1954-55 were: entered 2,245 (9,938,510 tons); cleared 2,260 (10,063,594 tons). Of the vessels entered 1,397 of 6,217,899 tons were under the British flag and 848 of 3,720,611 tons under foreign flags.

The total including local shipping entering the ports of the capital cities during 1954-55 was: Sydney 4,399 vessels of 9,702,000 tons, Melbourne 2,527 (8,029,000), Brisbane 1,707 (3,168,000), Adelaide 2,621 (5,215,000), Fremantle 995 (5,207,000) and Hobart 360 (856,000). At December 31, 1955, there were 1,717 vessels of a total net tonnage of 354,705 on the shipping registers of the several States.

Posts and Telegraphs.—In the year ended June 30, 1955, there were 8,235 post offices dealing with 1,327,144,000 letters, 292,240,000 packets and newspapers, 17,628,000 registered articles and 16,765,000 parcels. 22,713,000 telegrams were despatched and 2,798,000 cablegrams received and despatched. At June 30, 1955, there were 7,233 telephone exchanges with 1,127,000 lines and 1,587,000 instruments.

Wireless.—On June 30, 1955, the National Broadcasting Service operated 61 stations, including 9 short-wave stations. Privately owned commercial broadcasting stations totalled 106. On June 30, 1955, there were in force in Australia 2,034,676 listeners' licences.

Motor Vehicles.—At June 30, 1955, there were 2,129,720 motor vehicles registered in the several States. These comprised 1,347,082 cars, 133,029 motor cycles, and 649,609 commercial vehicles; revenue derived from motor registration fees and motor tax, &c., in 1954-55 was £28,524,917. Motor omnibus services are extensively operating in urban areas.

Civil Aviation.—At June 30, 1955, there were 487 recognized landing grounds, including 304 licensed public aerodromes, in the various States and Territories. Aircraft on the Australian Register at June 30, 1955, numbered 887. Mileage flown on regular internal air services in 1954-55 was 43,512,800 and in overseas services owned or partly-owned by Australia, 11,128,400.

CAPITAL

CANBERRA, the Capital of the Australian Commonwealth, is 203 miles by rail from Sydney, N.S.W. and was acquired in 1911 from the State of N.S.W. for the Australian Capital. The original area was 911 sq. miles, increased in 1917 by the acquisition of 28 sq. miles at Jervis Bay. Canberra contains the Australian (1914-18 and 1939-45) War Memorial, Parliament House, Commonwealth Offices, University College, and the Australian National University, and is connected with the N.S.W. railway system by a line (5 miles) to Queanbeyan and by good roads to Melbourne and Sydney. Frequent air services also link it with the State capitals. The estimated population of Canberra city area at Dec. 31, 1955 was 31,432. The population of the rural area of the Australian Capital Territory (including Jervis Bay) was estimated (Dec. 31, 1955) at 2,038. Total population (est. Dec. 31, 1955) 33,470.

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY

The Northern Territory has a total area of 523,620 square miles, and lies between 129°-138° East longitude as far as 26° South latitude. The administration was taken over by the Commonwealth on January 1, 1911, from the government of the State of South Australia. The headquarters of the Administrator are at Darwin. The legislative authority in the Territory is a Legislative Council consisting of a President, who is the Administrator, seven appointed members, who are senior officers of Commonwealth Departments, and six members elected from districts into which the territory is sub-divided, approximately on a population basis. All ordinances passed by the Council must be presented finally to the Governor-General, who may disallow an ordinance to which the Administrator has assented or refuse his assent (when sought) to them.

At the Census of June 30, 1954, the population of the Northern Territory (excluding full-blooded aboriginals) was estimated to be:—males 10,288, females 6,181, total 16,469; Darwin, 8,071; Alice Springs, 2,785; rural, 5,613. The number of full-blooded aboriginals was estimated (June 30, 1955) at 13,885.

The staple industry is pastoral, cattle raising being its major component. On Dec. 31, 1954, there were 968,755 cattle, 33,035 horses and 28,644 sheep in the Territory. Imports of livestock for the year ending June 30, 1955, were: bulls 572, other cattle 9,340, horses 612, sheep 2,586. 77,452 cattle were exported during the same period. The Territory is capable under proper conditions of carrying successfully and profitably a great expansion of the beef cattle industry. Hides and skins exported from the Northern Territory during the year ended June 30, 1955, were as follows:—buffalo 5,132, cattle 6,113, sheep 748 and crocodile 1,572. The number of buffalo hides exported has continued to drop owing to the low price for them, and there are now very few shooters engaged in the industry.

Agriculture in the Northern territory hitherto has been confined to small farm settlement in the Katherine, Daly River, Batchelor and Darwin areas. Principal crops grown are peanuts, grain sorghum, vegetables and fruit (pineapples, paw-paws, bananas and citrus). However, extensive experiments are being carried out particularly in the area between Darwin and Katherine to determine what crops can be successfully grown in the Northern Territory on a commercial scale. In recent years a great deal of interest has been shown in the possibility of large scale rice production on the sub-coastal plains areas of the Territory. Experiments are continuing with very encouraging results and it is expected that extensive areas will be planted to rice within the next few years.

Out of a total of 335,116,800 acres, the Northern Territory has 105,952,548 acres unoccupied or unreserved. Aboriginal and other reserves total 47,543,605 acres; there are 181,165,325 acres leased or held under licence, and 455,322 acres are alienated in fee simple.

There are considerable mineral resources, and new discoveries have recently been made. The search for uranium still holds the interest of many prospectors and companies, but the principal minerals produced are still gold, wolfram, mica and copper. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1955, the total value of gold and mining production (excluding uranium), was £2,510,470.

The chief rivers of the Territory are Victoria, Adelaide, Daly, Roper, South Alligator, McArthur, Liverpool, and Goyder. The first six are navigable, from 40 to 100 miles from their entrance, for boats drawing 4 feet. Mother-of-pearl fishing is carried on round the coast, the shell being of good quality.

The railway extends from Darwin to Birdum (315 miles) and Alice Springs is connected by rail with Adelaide. A good bitumen road links Darwin with Alice Springs (954 miles). This road, which was constructed primarily for military purposes during the 1939-45 war, can carry a high volume of heavy traffic.

ψ Darwin occupies an elevated site 97 feet above sea level, overlooking Port Darwin. Alice Springs is situated in the MacDonnell Ranges. Climate of the Northern Territory ranges from dry in the south to wet-monsoonal in the north.

TERRITORY OF PAPUA AND NEW GUINEA

The Papua and New Guinea Act, 1949, which came into force on July 1, 1949, approved the placing of the Territory of New Guinea under the International Trusteeship system and provides for the Government of the Territory of Papua and the Territory of New Guinea in an Administrative Union.

Provision is made for an Executive Council of not less than nine members, and a Legislative Council consisting of twenty-nine members, namely:—

(a) the Administrator; (b) sixteen officers of the Territory (who shall be known as official members); (c) three non-official members possessing such qualifications as are provided by Ordinance and elected, as provided by Ordinance, by electors of the Territory; (d) three non-official members representing the interests of the Christian missions in the Territory; (e) three non-official native members; and (f) three other non-official members.

PAPUA

The Territory of Papua, which was placed under the authority of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1906, comprises the south eastern portion of the island of New Guinea, together with the Trobriand, Woodlark, D'Entrecasteaux and Louisiade groups of islands and is separated from Australia by Torres Straits. The Territory lies wholly within the Tropics, between the 141st and the 156th meridians of east longitude and the 5th and 12th parallels of south latitude. The total area is 90,540 sq. miles, of which 87,786 are on the mainland. The non-indigenous population (June 30, 1955) was 6,794. The official estimate of the native population is 439,369. Owing to heavy rainfall Papua is well watered in most parts and possesses a large number of streams. The best-known rivers are the Fly (650 miles long and navigable by steam launch for over 500 miles), the Strickland and the Purari. Lake Kutubu, 12 miles long and 2 miles wide, was explored in 1937. The climate is favourable to the cultivation of tropical products. Copra exports for the year ended June 30, 1955, totalled 16,846 tons and rubber exports 8,047,000 lbs.

(b) Includes £A2,729,478 Australian Commonwealth grant.

NEW GUINEA

The German possessions on the mainland of New Guinea and certain adjacent islands were occupied by Australian forces on Sept. 12, 1914, and on Dec. 17, 1920, a mandate of the Supreme Council of the Allies entrusted the administration to the Australian Government which established its administration on May 9, 1921.

The Trust Territory includes (1) North-Eastern New Guinea, the northern section of east New Guinea between 2° 35'–8° S. lat., and 141°–148° E. long., with a total area of 69,700 sq. miles. This includes adjacent islands (Manam, Karkar, Long, Bagabag, Schouten and D'Urville or Kairiru Island). The chief centres are Lae, Bulolo, Finschhafen, Wau, Madang, and Wewak. (2) Bismarck Archipelago (19,200 sq. miles), including New Britain, New Ireland, and islands adjacent to both, and (3) Admiralty Islands (chief town, Lorengau, in Manus Island); and (4) the two northernmost Solomon Islands (4,100 sq. miles) (Bougainville and Buka with adjacent islands). The total estimated area is thus 93,000 square miles. The non-indigenous population, as at June 30, 1955, was 12,545. The native population was enumerated (June 30, 1954) at 1,086,518 plus an estimated total of 143,552, giving a grand total of 1,241,615.

The principal river in N.E. New Guinea is the Sepik, which is navigable for 300 miles.

A road to the coast over rugged country now serves the goldmining areas of the Lower Watut, Sunshine, Bulolo, Wau and Edie Creek, and a small farming district at Wau.

Qantas Empire Airways, Ltd., operates a regular air service from Australia to Lae and Rabaul, and to Port Moresby, Papua, in addition to a monthly service from Lae to Hollandia, Netherlands New Guinea. There is also a flying boat service from Port Moresby to Rabaul and Bougainville. Commercial aircraft operators located on the New Guinea mainland maintain passenger and freight carrying services to many parts of the Territory.

Overseas vessels call at various ports and a regular service is maintained with Australia.

The climate is hot and moist along the coast, with a steady drop as the higher altitudes are reached. It is suitable to the growth of all tropical products. The copra export for the year ending June 30, 1955, was 62,736 tons. Cacao plantings suffered wartime losses to the extent of about 60 per cent. 1,080 tons of cocoa beans were exported in the year ending June 30, 1955. There are indications of mineral wealth, but difficulties of transport have prevented developments. Gold mining is carried on extensively in the Morobe District and to a lesser degree in other parts of the Territory.

Trusteeship.—The Commonwealth Government has placed the Territory of New Guinea under the Trusteeship system established under the United Nations Charter and the agreement under which Australia became the sole administering authority was approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations on Dec. 13, 1946.

SEAT OF ADMINISTRATION.—Administrative Headquarters of the combined territories of Papua and New Guinea is Port Moresby. At Port Moresby, Lae and Bita Paka (32 miles from Rabaul) the Imperial War Graves Commission has established a cemetery for victims of the War. Port Moresby is the chief town in New Guinea and is the administrative centre for the Bougainville district, included in which are the islands of Bougainville and Buka. Lorengau is the chief town of the Admiralty Islands.

Administrator of the Government of Papua and New Guinea, Brigadier D. M. Cleland, C.B.E.

Port Moresby is distant from Sydney, N.S.W., 1,800 miles; transit by sea from Sydney 5 to 6 days; by air 10 hours.

NORFOLK ISLAND

This island is about 930 miles from Sydney and 400 miles from New Zealand. It is about five miles in length by three in breadth, and was discovered by Capt. Cook in 1774. Its area is 8,528 acres and circumference 20 miles. The climate is mild, with a mean temperature of 68° and an annual rainfall of 53 inches. The descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty were brought here from Pitcairn Island in 1856. The population on June 30, 1954, was 942. Seat of Government and Administration Offices, Kingston.

The construction of an airfield was completed in 1943, and regular air services are now in operation from Australia and New Zealand.

President, Advisory Council, R. H. H. Nobbs.

NAURU ISLAND

This island, situated in 166° 55' East longitude and 32 miles south of the Equator, was discovered by Capt. Fearn, R.N., in 1798, and was annexed by Germany in 1888. It surrendered to H.M.A.S. Melbourne in November, 1914, and is now administered by Britain, Australia and New Zealand. Under an international trusteeship agreement approved by the General Assembly of U.N. on Nov. 1, 1947, this agreement supersedes the League of Nations' Mandate, but Australia continues to be responsible for the administration of the island on behalf of the grantor Governments. The island has an area of approximately 8 square miles, with a population (June 30, 1955) of 3,676, of whom 1,935 were Nauruans, 911 other Pacific Islanders, 568 Chinese, and 292 Europeans. Administrative and legislative powers of government are vested in the Administrator, who also, at present, constitutes the final Court of Appeal in the judiciary. However, provision is being made for the Court of Appeal to be constituted by judges appointed from Supreme Courts in Australia. Expenses of the Administration so far as they exceed revenue are met by the British Phosphate Commissioners under an agreement made between the three administering Governments. There are valuable deposits of phosphates on the island, which were purchased from the Pacific Phosphate Company in 1919 by the Governments of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand for £3,500,000, and vested in the British Phosphate Commissioners.

Nauru was occupied by the Japanese from Aug. 25, 1942, to Sept. 13, 1945. Since re-occupation the buildings and plant of the Administration and the British Phosphate Commissioners have been restored. Services provided by the Administration for the Nauruan people include medical services, hospitalization, maternity and infant welfare, and education services up to fourth year secondary school standard. Exports of phosphates for the 12 months ended June 30, 1955, totalled 1,237,236 tons.

Administrator, R. S. Leydin, O.B.E.

COCOS-KEELING ISLANDS

The Cocos-Keeling Islands were declared a British possession in 1857, and in 1878 were placed under the control of the Governor of Ceylon. On February 1, 1886, they were placed under the Governor of the Straits Settlements, and in 1903 they were annexed to the Straits Settlements and incorporated with the Settlement (now the Colony) of Singapore. On Nov. 3, 1955, their administration was transferred to the Commonwealth of Australia. The 27 small coral islands lie almost 700 miles S.W. of Java Head. The largest is 5 miles by 4 mile. Only two, Home and Direction Islands, have important settlements, and on the latter Cable and Wireless maintain a station. On West Island there is an air-strip which played an important part in communications during the war with Japan (the Cocos-Keeling Islands, unlike the rest of the Colony, were never occupied by the Japanese). It is now controlled by the Australian Department of Civil Aviation for the civil air-line link between Australia and South Africa. The only export is copra. The population numbers (1953) 605.

THE ANTARCTIC CONTINENT

The area of the Antarctic Continent is estimated at approximately 5 million square miles. The greater part of the coastline has been charted with varying degrees of accuracy, but considerable portions of the interior have not been visited, or at best have been seen only from the air.

The question of territorial rights is complicated and there is no general international agreement thereon. Argentina has 3 Antarctic bases in the zone claimed as "Argentine Territory," one being on Deception Island in the South Shetlands, which is part of the British Falkland Islands; another in Scotia Bay, and a third on Gamma Island, in the Melchior Archipelago.

The Australian Antarctic Territory was established by an Order in Council, dated February 7, 1933, and the Australian Antarctic Territory Acceptance Act of June 13, 1933, which placed under the government of the Commonwealth of Australia that part of the territory in the Antarctic Seas which comprises all the islands and territories, other than Adélie Land, situated south of the 60th parallel of south latitude and lying between the 160th and 45th meridians of east longitude.

The exception of Adélie Land from the Order in Council is due to French claims based on rights of discovery and occupation.

The area administered by the Commonwealth of Australia is estimated at 2,472,000 square miles. It adjoins that belonging to New Zealand. In December, 1947, and March, 1948, respectively, Australia set up research stations on Heard Island and Macquarie Island, two islands in the sub-Antarctic. Macquarie Island, about 1,000 miles south-east of Hobart, has been a dependency of Tasmania since the nineteenth century. Heard Island, about 2,500 miles south-west of Fremantle, was transferred from United Kingdom to Australian control on December 26, 1947.

In February, 1954, a base known as Mawson, was established on the coast of the Antarctic continent at lat. 67° 36' S. and long. 62° 53' E. Meteorological and other research is being conducted at this station.

Other British dependencies in the Antarctic are:—

(1) The Ross Dependency, placed under the jurisdiction of New Zealand by Order in Council dated July 30, 1923, and defined as all the islands and territories between the 160th meridian of east longitude and the 150th meridian of west longitude which are situated south of the 60th parallel of south latitude. The Ross Dependency includes Edward VII Land and portions of Victoria Land. There are no permanent inhabitants of the territory, but whaling is carried on extensively.

(2) The Falkland Islands Dependencies:—

(a) South Georgia, with South Orkney and South Sandwich Islands.

(b) South Shetland Island and Graham Land.

(c) Coats Land and territory adjacent to the South Pole.

South Georgia is permanently inhabited and is an important seat of the whaling industry.

So far as is known the total areas of these Dependencies have not been officially estimated.

States of the Commonwealth of Australia

NEW SOUTH WALES

The State of New South Wales is situated almost entirely between the 29th and 36th parallels of S. lat. and 141st and 154th meridians of E. long., and comprises an area of 309,433 square miles (exclusive of 939 square miles of Australian Commonwealth Territory which lies within its borders).

POPULATION.—The population at December 31, 1955, was: Males, 1,770,966; Females, 1,754,957. Total, 3,525,923.

Births, Deaths and Marriages.

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1940	49,382	26,143	30,364
1953	74,890	31,707	27,573
1954	73,125	32,444	27,593
1955	74,407	32,553	27,645

Vital Statistics.—Annual rate per 1,000 mean of population in 1955:—Births, 21.31; Deaths, 9.32; Marriages, 7.92. Deaths under 1 year per 1,000 live births, 24.90

Religions.

The members of the Church of England in New South Wales, according to the Census of 1954, number 1,466,571, Roman Catholic 844,453, Presbyterian 302,984, Methodist 275,188, Congregational 21,280, Baptist 40,283, Greek Orthodox 29,733, Lutheran 17,033, Salvation Army 12,825, and Hebrew 19,583. The religion of 301,203 persons was not stated in the census schedules.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Natural features divide the State into four strips of territory extending from north to south, viz., the Coastal Divisions; the Tablelands, which form the Great Dividing Range between the coastal districts and the plains; the Western Slopes of the Dividing Range; and the Western Plains. The highest points are Mount Kosciusko, 7,328 feet, and Townsend, 7,266 feet. The coastal district is well watered by numerous rivers flowing from the ranges into fertile flats which form their lower basins. The western portion of the country is watered by the rivers of the Murray-Darling system and immense reservoirs have been constructed for irrigation purposes, and there are many artesian bores. The Darling, 1,702 miles, and the Murrumbidgee, 981 miles, are both tributaries of the Murray, part of which forms the boundary between the States of New South Wales and Victoria.

Other inland rivers are: Lachlan, Bogan, Macquarie, Castlereagh, Namoi and Gwydir.

Climate.—New South Wales is situated entirely in the Temperate Zone. The climate is equable and very healthy. At the capital (Sydney) the average mean shade temperature is 63.3°. The mean temperature in the shade for the north coast is 66° to 69°, south coast 60° to 63°, northern tableland 56° to 60°, southern tableland 44° to 58°; north-western slopes, the mean annual temperature ranges from 62° to 68°; in the central-western slopes 57° to 64°, south-western slopes 60° to 62°, and in the Western Plains and Riverina Division from 61° to 66°.

GOVERNMENT.

New South Wales was first colonized as a British possession in 1788, and after progressive settlement a partly elective legislature was established in 1843. In 1855 Responsible Government was granted, the present Constitution being founded on the Constitution Act of 1902. New South Wales federated with the other States of Australia in 1901. The executive authority of the State is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown), assisted by a Council of Ministers.

GOVERNOR.

Governor of New South Wales, Lieutenant-General Sir John Northcott, K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., C.B. assumed office August 1, 1946, term extended for five years from August, 1951 and for a further year from August, 1956 £6,000

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council consists of 60 members, elected jointly by both houses of Parliament. Membership is for 12 years, 15 members retiring in rotation triennially. Members receive an annual allowance of £500 and travel free on the State transport services. The Legislative Assembly consists of 94 members. Each member of the Legislative Assembly receives £1,875 per annum, and free travel on the State transport services. The Women's Legal Status Act, 1918, removed disqualification regarding the election of women to be members of the Legislative Assembly. A provident fund for members of the Legislative Assembly was established in 1946; a pension is payable to those who on ceasing to be members have served for at least fifteen years or in three parliaments. Natural-born or naturalized persons 21 years of age, who have resided 6 months in the Commonwealth, 3 months in the State and 1 month in the electoral district, are entitled to the franchise. Voting is compulsory. At the State General Elections in Feb. 1953, there were 954,966 men and 997,987 women electors, making a total of 1,952,953 enrolled; in contested electorates 94 per cent. of the eligible electors voted.

EDUCATION.

Education.—Education is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 15 years. It is non-sectarian and free at all state schools. The average weekly enrolment in 1954 in 2,557 State schools was 467,441 and the average daily attendance during the year was 475,860. In addition to the State schools there were, in 1954, 768 private colleges and schools, with an average weekly enrolment of 151,882 scholars, 636 being Roman Catholic schools with 128,559 scholars. The three universities had an enrolment of 11,381 students in 1954; 6,983 at Sydney (incorporated 1850), 4,159 at the University of Technology (1948) and 239 at New England (1954). The State expenditure on Education was £37,960,000 in the year 1954-55. Students at post-school State Technical classes numbered 57,740 in 1954. Students attending the State Agricultural Colleges and Farm schools numbered 1,108 in 1954.

* Excluding the self-balancing Road Transport and Traffic Fund.

The Public Debt of New South Wales at June 30, 1955, was £655,598,429, of which an amount of £122,140,984 was repayable in London (interest £3,870,872), £10,479,606 was repayable in New York (interest £352,922) and £522,977,839 was held in Australia, with an annual interest bill of £18,425,594.

Banking, &c.—There were (Dec. 1955) 12 trading banks with deposits of £608,960,000. Savings bank deposits amounted to £364,119,000.

representing £104 per head of the population. The amount assured in New South Wales in Life Assurance Societies in 1954 was £603,259,000 Ordinary and £110,868,000 Industrial. The membership of Friendly Societies was 170,257, and the funds at June 30, 1954, were £7,651,000. Members of Trade Unions at Dec. 31, 1953, numbered 639,255, the funds of 222 Unions being £1,497,970.

Shipping.—Excluding coastal trade, 2,847 vessels entered ports of N.S.W. during the year ended June 30, 1955, the net tonnage being 10,478,000. The shipping entries at Sydney, including coastal, were 4,399 vessels of 9,702,000 net tonnage.

Motor Vehicles.—At March 31, 1956, there were 817,637 registered motor vehicles (cars, 471,444).

Railways.—The railways and tramways of New South Wales are controlled by the State, which also operates omnibus services. At June 30, 1955, the mileage of the State railways open for traffic was 6,102, earnings in the year 1954-55 being £73,361,000.

Aviation.—The principal overseas routes from Sydney are to the United Kingdom, New Zealand and U.S.A. Regular air transport services with terminal in N.S.W. carried 1,205,333 paying passengers in 1954-55.

Roads and Bridges.—There are 126,600 miles of roads and streets in New South Wales, including 53,000 miles of natural surface and cleared only. The total expenditure by the Government and the local councils on roads, bridges, &c., in 1953-54 was £26,829,000. The construction of an arch bridge over Sydney Harbour was completed and the bridge opened for traffic in March, 1932. This bridge carries a roadway 57 ft. wide, two footways each 10 ft. wide, and four lines of railway, of which two are being used as tramways. At mean high water there is a headway of 17½ ft.

Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones.—The postal, telegraphic, telephonic and radio services are administered by the Commonwealth Government. At June 30, 1955, there were 2,565 post offices in New South Wales. The postal matter carried during 1954-55 included 482,394,000 letters and registered articles and 110,399,000 newspapers and parcels posted for delivery in Australia. The overseas mails consisted of 15,327,000 letters and 9,995,000 newspapers and parcels despatched, 37,491,000 letters and 20,176,000 newspapers and parcels received. During the year 8,755,000 telegrams were despatched to places within Australia and 662,000 cablegrams were despatched, and 697,000 received. The telephone line connections numbered 421,175. In June, 1955, there were 15 National Broadcasting Stations in New South Wales and 37 commercial stations operating under licence. The number of broadcast listeners' licences was 746,050. Seaborne mail reaches United Kingdom from Sydney in from 4 to 6 weeks, airborne mail in 4 to 6 days.

OVERSEAS TRADE.

1939	52,898,424	45,903,080
1953	210,147,871	270,081,754
1954	280,537,125	263,175,025
1955	346,096,210	220,657,096

The chief exports in 1954-55 were foodstuffs, wool, hides and skins, metals and machinery. Chief imports were tea, tobacco, piece goods, petrol, motor vehicles, machinery, timber, paper and drugs and chemicals.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY

Agriculture is one of the principal industries of New South Wales; 5,394,012 acres were under cultivation during the year ended March 31, 1955.

The total area under wheat was 3,177,844 acres, of which 2,918,670 acres were harvested for grain, and 184,698 acres for hay. The production of wheat was 37,718,000 bushels of grain and 165,608 tons of hay. Other important crops in 1954-55 were 1,767,258 bushels of maize, 7,667,169 bushels of oats, 5,080,107 bushels of rice besides other kinds of grain, 47,700 tons of potatoes, and 5,516 cwt. of dried leaf tobacco. Sugar-cane to the extent of 222,213 tons was crushed; while 2,521,741 bushels of bananas were obtained; almost every kind of fruit and vegetable is grown. There were 18,205 acres of vineyards, of which 16,485 acres were bearing.

Land Alienation.—The total extent of land alienated and in process of alienation from the Crown on June 30, 1955, was 65,766,291 acres, while the area of land under lease, &c., from the Crown was 116,588,426 acres, and the balance 15,682,403 acres, consisted of reserve and other lands neither alienated nor leased; the total area of the State, exclusive of the Australian Capital Territory, is 198,037,120 acres.

Livestock.—The country is admirably adapted for sheep-farming, the principal breed of sheep being the celebrated merino, which was introduced in 1797. On Mar. 31, 1955, there were 258,153 horses, 3,460,692 cattle, 59,200,000 sheep and lambs, 375,019 pigs. In 1954-55, 540,977,000 lb. (stated as in the grease) of wool were produced. 89,885,893 lb. butter, 5,618,461 lb. cheese, and 26,363,073 lb. of bacon and ham.

Values of Industries.—In 1954-55 the net value of production of the primary and manufacturing industries was £949,211,000—primary £366,083,000 and manufacturing £583,128,000. The values of the principal primary industries were: pastoral £175,446,000, agricultural £50,650,000 and farmyard £58,279,000.

Forests.—The estimated forest area is 22,554,000 acres, of which State forests cover 6,203,000 acres and 1,364,000 have been set aside as timber reserves.

Mining Industry.—The goldfields were opened in 1851. The principal minerals are coal, copper, silver, lead, zinc, tin, zircon and rutile. The total value of minerals won in 1955 was £78,233,176; the value of output of the coal mining industry was £42,762,415, and of the silver-lead-zinc industry, £26,671,799. The mining industry gave employment to 29,833 miners during 1954. In 1955, 14,736,000 tons of coal were produced.

Factories.—In 1954-55 there were 20,837 factories. The average number of persons employed during the year was 419,810. The value of output of the factories was £1,446,670,000; materials and fuel used £863,542,000; the production, i.e. value added to raw materials, was £583,128,000. Large iron and steel works with subsidiary factories are in operation at Newcastle and Port Kembla in proximity to the coalfields. The products include iron and steel of various grades, pipes, boilers, steel wire and wire netting, copper wire, copper and brass cables, and spun cast-iron pipes. The production (1954-55) of pig-iron was 1,659,000 tons, and of ingot steel 2,162,000 tons.

TOWNS.

SYDNEY, the chief city and capital, stands on the shores of Port Jackson, with a water frontage of 152 miles; the depth of water at the Heads is not less than 80 feet, and at the wharves up to 40 ft.

There are extensive facilities for handling cargo, and for storing and loading grain in bulk or bags; also for replenishing coal and oil bunkers. For 20 miles Sydney Harbour extends inland, the finest harbour in the world, and is surrounded by scenery of surpassing beauty. The principal wharves are situated in close proximity to the business centre of the city. The total area of water in the harbour is 23,600 acres, or about 21 square miles, of which approximately one-half has a depth of not less than 30 ft.; the rise and fall of the tide is from 3 to 6 ft. The city and suburbs contain approximately 671 square miles, with a population of 1,897,710 (estimated, June 30, 1955).

The parks in or adjacent to the metropolitan area include the National Park which measures 34,392 acres, Kuring-gai Chase 38,263 acres, Kurnell 248 acres, Centennial Park 474 acres, and Parramatta Park 252 acres.

Other cities and towns over 12,000 are ψNewcastle 181,740; Wollongong (Greater) 95,830; Broken Hill 32,000; Blue Mountains 23,330; Maitland 21,630; Goulburn 19,740; Wagga Wagga 19,640; Penrith 18,790; Lismore 17,620; Lithgow 15,270; Albury 17,100; Orange 18,570; Cessnock 14,630; Tamworth 13,940; Grafton and South Grafton 14,410; Bathurst 16,390; and Dubbo 12,370.

DEPENDENCY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LORD HOWE ISLAND (436 miles north-east of Sydney). Lat. 31° 33' 4" S., Long. 150° 4' 26" E. Area 3,220 acres. Pop. June 30, 1955, 270. The island is of volcanic origin and Mount Gower reaches an altitude of 2,840 ft. The affairs of the island and the supervision of the Kentia palm seed industry are controlled by an elected Island Committee and a Board at Sydney. Office, Chief Secretary's Department, Sydney.

QUEENSLAND

This State, situated in lat. 10° 40'–29° S. and long. 138°–153° 30' E., comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent.

Queensland possesses an area of 670,500 square miles (i.e., equal to more than 5½ times the area of the British Isles).

POPULATION.—At June 30, 1955, the population numbered 1,344,572 persons (690,172 males and 654,400 females).

The total number of aborigines (at the census of June 30, 1947) was 9,100 full blood and 7,211 half-caste, exclusive of Torres Strait Islanders.

Increase of the People.

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1953	30,782	11,006	9,859
1954	31,176	11,344	10,027
1955	32,352	11,307	10,098

Infantile mortality rate (1955) 20.3 per 1,000 live births.

Religion.

At the Census of 1954 there were 454,095 Church of England, 316,962 Roman Catholics, 151,586 Presbyterians, 146,436 Methodists, 28,612 Lutherans, 20,113 Baptists, 9,086 Congregationalists, 56,775 other Christians, and 1,340 Hebrews.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Great Dividing Range on the eastern coast of the continent produces a similar formation to that of New South Wales, the eastern side having a narrow slope to the coast and the western a long and gradual slope to the central plains, where the Kirby's Range divides the land into a northern and southern watershed. The Brisbane, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin rise in the eastern ranges and flow into the Pacific, the Flinders, Mitchell, and Leichhardt into the Gulf of Carpentaria, and the Barcoo and Warrego rise in the central ranges and flow southwards.

Climate.—At Brisbane the mean temperature for 1954 was 68.7°, the maximum and minimum shade temperatures being 91.8° and 42.4°; mean barometer, 30.06 inches. The coastal regions are warm and moist, but the rainfall decreases away from the coast and is scanty in the far west. The rainfall in Brisbane during 1954 was 61.4 inches, compared with average rainfall of 40.1 inches.

GOVERNMENT.

Queensland was constituted a separate colony with Responsible Government in 1859, having previously formed part of New South Wales. The executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown), aided by an Executive Council of 11 members.

GOVERNOR.

Governor of Queensland, Lieutenant-General Sir John Dudley Lavarack, K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., K.B.E., C.B., D.S.O., appointed Oct. 1, 1946, term extended for 5 years, Oct. 1, 1951 and for further year, Oct. 1, 1956. £5,325

EDUCATION

Primary Education compulsory, secular and free. At the end of 1954 there were 1,553 State schools, including 32 Provisional and 30 High schools in operation, with 6,407 teachers and a net enrolment of 191,648 children and 276 private and 8 grammar schools, with a net enrolment of 54,792. A State-aided University, established during 1910, had 4,112 students in 1954. State expenditure on education in 1954-55 was £10,567,306.

FINANCE.

Receipts and Expenditure of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and Debt of Queensland for four years ended June 30:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Debt (Gross)
	£A	£A	£A
1952...	55,753,114	55,707,719	187,309,758

1955...	73,819,723	72,602,000	236,474,488

Banking.—Advances made by Trading Banks (including the Commonwealth Trading Bank of Australia) at June 30, 1955, totalled £140,647,000. The deposits at the same date amounted to £197,859,000. Depositors' balances in Queensland Branch of the Commonwealth Savings Bank at June 30, 1955, £124,814,000, averaged £92 16s. 7d. for each inhabitant. There were 868,838 operating accounts.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The gross value of primary production in 1953-54 was £238,523,000 (agriculture £73,491,000, dairying £34,084,000, pastoral £99,314,000, poultry and bee-keeping £2,554,000, mining £18,401,000, forestry £9,117,000, fisheries £1,221,000, hunting and trapping £341,000), and net value of manufacturing £110,255,000.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area of 429,120,000 acres the Government has parted with the fee simple of 24,864,158 acres, and 2,890,471 acres more are in process of alienation.

The total area under crop in 1954-55 was 2,590,774 acres. The most important crop was sugar-cane, under which there were 486,741 acres, producing 1,301,245 tons of raw sugar, 687,402 acres were under wheat (yielding 16,477,770 bushels), and 114,673 under maize (3,079,692 bushels). English and sweet potatoes are cultivated, as also are sorghum, tomatoes, pea-nuts, cotton, tobacco, arrowroot, various citrus fruits, pine-apples, bananas, grapes, mangoes, papaws, apples, peaches, plums, and other English fruits. The live stock on March 31, 1955, included 7,238,062 cattle, 1,377,214 being dairy cattle, 20,221,826 sheep, 266,878 horses, and 406,879 pigs.

Forestry.—There are about 17,440,000 acres of commercial timberland in Queensland, of which there have been reserved for forestry purposes 7,950,000 acres. An area of 788,000 acres has been reserved for National Parks.

Minerals.—There are rich deposits of gold, copper, tin, lead, silver, zinc, limestone, ironstone, and wolfram. Coal is mined in the Ipswich (near Brisbane) and some northern districts, and there is extensive production by open-cut method in Central Queensland. The output in 1954 included gold, £1,539,000; coal, £6,418,000; copper, £8,772,000; tin, £538,000; silver, £1,294,000; lead, £4,920,000; zinc, £1,912,000.

Communications.—The State is served by 6,560 miles of railways, practically all 3 ft. 6 in. in gauge. During 1954-55, 35,946,000 passengers and 8,577,000 tons of goods and live stock were carried. At June 30, 1954, there were 62,305 miles of formed roads and 70,144 miles of unconstructed roads in the State, and 284,207 motor vehicles were on the register.

The chief overseas exports are wool, sugar, butter, meat and minerals.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, Ψ BRISBANE, population 515,000 (June 30, 1955), is situated on the Brisbane River, which is navigable by large vessels to the city, over 10 miles from Moreton Bay. The City Hall is a notable building, and there are fine Government and private buildings. There are two Cathedrals, a University, a Museum, Botanic Gardens, &c. The Greater Brisbane area (385 square miles) is controlled by a City Council presided over by a Lord Mayor.

Ψ The main ports in their order along the coast are Brisbane, Maryborough (18,210), Bundaberg (20,400), Gladstone (7,060), Rockhampton (41,300), Mackay (14,880), Bowen (3,590), Townsville (41,200), Cairns (21,400), Port Douglas, Cooktown, and Thursday Island.

Other towns are Ipswich (40,100), Redcliffe (14,530), Gympie (10,100), Southport (12,637), and Coolangatta (4,890) in the south-east; Toowoomba (44,000), Warwick (9,370) and Dalby (6,420) on the Darling Downs; Roma (4,280) and Charleville (4,650) in the south-west; Mt. Morgan (4,380), near Rockhampton; and Charters Towers (6,870), and Mount Isa (7,432) inland from Townsville.

Thursday Island, the smallest of the Prince of Wales group, in long. 142° E. and lat. 11° S., has an area of 900 acres. It lies in Torres Strait, about 30 miles N.W. of Cape York and some 1,400 miles by sea from Brisbane. The island has a population of 2,140 (June 30, 1955) and is the headquarters of the pearlshell and trochus-shell fisheries.

Transmission of mails from London to Brisbane, by air, 5 days; by sea (approximate), 32 days.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

The State of South Australia is situated between 26° and 37° S. lat. and 129° and 141° E. long., the total area being 380,070 sq. miles.

POPULATION.—In 1955 the population numbered 834,635 (423,414 males and 411,221 females).

The number of full-blooded aboriginals is estimated at less than 3,000.

Increase of the People.

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1952	17,884	7,050	6,241
1953	18,156	6,962	6,149
1954	18,227	7,179	6,190

Religion.

Religion is free and receives no State aid. At the Census, 1954, the persons belonging to the principal religious denominations were as follows: Church of England, 223,329; Methodists, 193,234; Congregationalists, 15,651; Baptists, 18,797; Lutherans, 42,056; Roman Catholics, 125,770; Presbyterians, 30,778; and Churches of Christ, 19,162.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The eastern portion of the State is divided longitudinally by the Flinders Range, which extends from the eastern side of the Gulf of St. Vincent to the Lakes Torrens and Eyre. The north-western portion is partly desert, while the northern portion of the State, between Lake Eyre and 26° South latitude, is unpromising in comparison with the fertile land that surrounds the hill country of the east. Except for the Murray, which flows for some 250 miles through the south-eastern corner into the Southern Ocean, there are no rivers of importance in South Australia.

The construction of a pipe line, 235 miles long, from Morgan, on the Murray, to Whyalla, on Spencer's Gulf, was completed in 1944. This provides water for large industries at Whyalla, and augments the supplies for farming and industrial districts en route. The cost was £2,500,000, and total capacity 1,200,000,000 gallons annually for Whyalla, and 900,000,000 for intervening northern districts. The pipe line has now been extended to Woomera. In addition, the Mannum-Adelaide pipeline has a pumping capacity of 14,600,000,000 gallons per year. River Murray water was first pumped into metropolitan reservoirs on Nov. 30, 1954. The pipe line was officially opened on March 31, 1955.

Climate.—The mean annual temperature at Adelaide is 63°, the winter temperature (July-August) averaging 53°, and the summer (November-March) 71°. During the summer months the maximum temperature at times exceeds 100°, but owing to the purity and dryness of the atmosphere the inconvenience is comparatively slight. The average annual rainfall at Adelaide, derived from over 100 years' record is 21 inches. This total is rather higher than the approximate average annual rainfall over the whole of the agricultural areas. In the Mount Lofty Ranges the mean yearly rainfall in places exceeds 40 inches, while on the Adelaide plains the precipitation has fallen as low as 16 inches.

GOVERNMENT.

South Australia was proclaimed a British Province in 1836, and in 1851 a partially elective legislature was established. The present Constitution rests upon a Law of Oct. 24, 1856, the executive authority being vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown, aided by a Council of 8 Ministers, and the Lieutenant-Governor.

EDUCATION.

Public Education (Primary, Secondary and Technical) is provided by the State, and controlled by a responsible Minister; it is secular, compulsory, and free. In 1954 there were 716 State schools, with 136,062 scholars; State expenditure in 1954-55 was £7,450,172, including grants to University, Libraries, &c. The Government grants Exhibitions and Scholarships, carrying the holders to higher schools and the University. Private schools number 166 with 30,853 scholars. There is an endowed University at Adelaide, founded in 1874, with (1954) 2,233 undergraduates, and 1,882 other students; all classes are open to women. A State School of Mines and Industries has also been established, and there are technical schools at 17 country centres and also special trade schools for apprentices and domestic art centres. The public library, museum, art gallery and local institutes are supported or assisted by the State.

Banking.—There are 10 banking institutions in Adelaide, including the Commonwealth Government Bank and the State Bank of South Australia, with about 400 branches and agencies, having total average deposits of £121,385,000 in December quarter, 1955. The savings banks on December 31, 1955, had deposits amounting to £132,760,000.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The gross value of production in 1954-55 was: crops £52,798,000, pastoral £50,530,000, mines and quarries £9,174,000, dairying £12,518,000, fisheries, game and poultry, and forestry £10,206,000.

Land Tenure.—Of the total area of the State (243,000,000 acres), 14,600,000 acres have been sold; 2,000,000 have been alienated by the Crown under systems of deferred payment; 116,000,000 acres are held under pastoral leases and 22,000,000 under other miscellaneous leases.

Agriculture.—The total area cultivated is 7,399,000 acres—under wheat, 1954-55, 1,689,000 acres, hay 257,000, oats 340,000, barley 1,020,000. Wheat harvest 1954-55, 31,463,000 bushels; barley, 18,376,000 bushels. Oranges, lemons, apples, apricots, peaches, and all stone fruits and olives are successfully grown, and fruit drying is profitable. There were 61,000 acres of vines with a production of 19,000,000 gallons of wine annually, 88,000 cwt. of dried currants and 282,000 cwt. of sultanas and raisins. Considerable quantities of fruits (fresh and dried) and also wine are annually sent to overseas countries, principally the United Kingdom, and the other Australian States. Brandy and other spirits are also produced. The land is also very suitable for the growing of all kinds of root crops and vegetables.

Live Stock (March 31, 1955).—There were 12,817,000 sheep, 524,000 cattle, 49,000 horses, 85,000 pigs. Wool production (1954-55), 156,000,000 lb.

Minerals.—Iron, gypsum, salt, coal, limestone, clay, &c., are found, the total mineral output being valued at £A8,553,000 (1954).

Manufactures.—In 1955 there were 3,750 factories, employing 89,565 hands, the gross value of the output being £293,061,000. Plant, machinery, land and buildings were valued at £94,277,000.

TASMANIA

Tasmania is an island in the South Pacific Ocean off the southern extremity of Australia, from which it is separated by Bass Strait, about 140 miles wide, in which are situated the Furneaux Group and King Island, included within the State. It lies between 40° 33'–43° 39' S. lat. and 144° 39'–148° 23' E. long., and contains an area of 26,215 square miles.

POPULATION.—On June 30, 1955, the estimated population numbered 314,679 (161,145 males and 153,534 females).

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1939	5,004	2,426	2,264
1953	7,736	2,551	2,424
1954	7,770	2,666	2,512
1955	8,089	2,489	2,600

The birth rate in 1955 was 25.59, death rate 7.87, marriage rate 8.22 per 1,000. Infant mortality (1955) 23.37 per 1,000 births.

Religion.

In 1954 there were 147,407 members of the Church of England, 27,069 Roman Catholics, 38,236 Methodists, 15,607 Presbyterians, 4,423 Congregationalists and Independents, and 6,293 Baptists.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The surface of the country is generally hilly and timbered, with mountains from 1,500 to 5,000 ft. in height, and expanses of level, open plains. There are numerous streams, the Derwent and the Tamar being the largest. The climate is fine and salubrious, and well suited to European constitutions. The hot winds of Australia do not reach the island. At Hobart the mean annual temperature averages 54° 4', the mean temperature for Dec., Jan., and Feb. being 60° 9', and that of June, July and Aug. 47° 4'. The western side of the island is very wet, the eastern side having a rainfall similar to that of eastern England; the average rainfall varies from 20 inches to 100 inches in different parts.

GOVERNMENT.

The island was first settled by the British in 1803 as an appendage to New South Wales, from which it was separated in 1825. In 1851 a partly elective legislature was inaugurated, and in 1856 Responsible Government was established. In 1901 Tasmania became a State of the Australian Commonwealth. The State executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown), aided by an Executive Council of Ministers responsible to the Legislature.

GOVERNOR.

Governor of Tasmania, His Excellency The Right Hon. Sir Ronald Hibert Cross, Bt., K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., apptd. July 1, 1951, term extended for 2 years from Aug. 1956.

AGENT-GENERAL IN LONDON.

Agent-General for Tasmania, Sir Eric Von Bibra, O.B.E.
Address, 457 Strand, Charing Cross, W.C.2.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of two Houses, a Legislative Council of 19 members, elected for six years (3 retiring annually, in rotation, except in every sixth year, when four retire) and a House of Assembly of 30 members, elected by proportional representation for five years (except when two opposing parties are returned in equal numbers, when its duration is for three years only), the electors for the latter being all adult Tasmanians who have resided continuously in the State for 6 months; the electorate for the Council is smaller, having a property or educational qualification for both sexes, but war service is a qualification for enrolment. The General Election for the House of Assembly in February, 1955, resulted in the return of 15 Labour and 15 Liberal members.

President of the Legislative Council, Hon. G. H. Green.

Speaker of the House of Assembly, Hon. H. W. Strutt, D.S.O.

Clerk of the House, Charles K. Murphy, C.B.E.

THE JUDICATURE.

The Supreme Court of Tasmania, with civil, criminal, ecclesiastical, admiralty and matrimonial jurisdiction, was established by Royal Charter on October 13, 1923.

Chief Justice (vacant).

Puisne Judges, Hon. R. K. Green; Hon. M. G. Gibson; Hon. M. P. Crisp.

Registrar of the Supreme Court, H. R. Dobbie.

Local Courts were established under the Local Courts Act, 1896, and are held before Commissioners who are legal practitioners, with a jurisdiction up to £250 in some cases, and up to £200 in others. Courts of General Sessions, constituted by a chairman who is a Justice of the Peace and at least one other Justice, are established in the municipalities for the recovery of debts and demands not exceeding £50. Courts of Petty Sessions are established under the Justices Procedure Act, 1919, constituted by Police Magistrates sitting alone, or any two or more justices.

EDUCATION

Primary education is compulsory, secular and free, there being 316 State schools divided into Primary, Arca, High and Technical High Schools, with a total enrolment of 59,838 scholars in 1954. There were 58 Private schools with an enrolment of 10,059. Compulsory education to the age of 16 became operative from Feb. 1, 1946. The University of Tasmania at Hobart, established 1890, had 709 students in 1954; there are technical schools at Hobart, Launceston, Burnie, Devonport, Queens-town, Rosebery, Ulverstone, Smithton and Zeehan.

FINANCE.

	£A	£A	£A
1938-39	3,614,764	3,640,748	26,366,990
1953-54	13,435,060	13,419,860	97,690,850
1954-55	15,095,270	15,307,005	109,804,950

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The net value of production in 1954-55 was £75,217,000—agriculture and pastoral £18,888,000, mines and quarries £7,053,000, other primary industries £9,966,000 and manufactures £33,065,000.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area of 16,778,000 acres there were, in 1954-55, 326,036 acres under crops. The principal crops are green fodder, hay, potatoes, followed by apples and other fruit, oats, peas, turnips, barley, wheat and hops. The live stock included (March 31, 1955) 319,417 cattle, 2,594,972 sheep, 58,382 pigs and 15,865 horses. The wool production (1954-55) was 23,796,740 lb.

Electrical Energy.—The Hydro-Electric Commission of Tasmania has effected important water-power developments at the Great Lake (Waddamana and Shannon), Lake St. Clair—River Derwent (Tarraleah and Butler's Gorge), Niue River (Tungatinah) and at Trevallyn. The network extends to practically all parts of the State and the advantages of cheap electric power exercise continued attraction for new establishment of manufacturing industries.

Forestry.—State forest areas in 1954-55, 1,946,939 acres. Areas held under lease or forest permits for saw-milling, logging, &c., 336,577 acres. The quantity of timber of various species cut on Crown Land forests in 1954-55 was 278,502,000 super feet, including 56,862,000 super feet for wood-pulp.

Minerals.—The chief minerals produced are copper, zinc, tin, silver, lead, gold, the value of all minerals produced in 1954 being £A10,810,000.

Manufactures.—The chief manufactures for export are: refined metals, jams and preserves, woollen manufactures, paper, confectionery and sawn timber; the net value of production in 1954-55 was £38,114,000, the value of land, buildings, plant and machinery for the 1,597 establishments being £59,481,829.

CAPITAL, Ψ HOBART, which was founded in 1804. Population (June 30, 1955) (with suburbs) 97,440.

Other towns (with population at June 30, 1954) are Ψ Launceston and suburbs (pop. 49,302), Ψ Devonport (10,624), Burnie (11,193), Queens-town (4,526) and Ulverstone (5,361).

Transmission of mails, 34 days by sea; 5 days by air.

VICTORIA

The State of Victoria comprises the south-east corner of Australia, at that part where its territory projects farthest into the southern latitudes; it lies between the 34th and 39th parallels of South latitude, and the 141st and 150th meridians of East longitude. Its extreme length from east to west is about 493 miles, its greatest breadth is about 290 miles, and its extent of coast-line is about 980 geographical miles, including the length around Port Phillip Bay, Western Port and Corner Inlet, the entire area being 87,884 square miles.

Population.—The population at Dec. 31, 1955 was 2,555,021 (1,288,058 males and 1,266,963 females).

Increase of the People.

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1939	30,493	20,169	17,368
1953	53,561	22,650	19,238
1954	54,660	22,554	19,404
1955	56,336	22,527	20,056

Vital Statistics.—Annual rate per 1,000 of population in 1955:—Births, 22.30; Deaths, 8.92; Marriages, 7.94. Deaths under 1 year per 1,000 births, 18.37.

Religion.

There has been no State aid to religion since 1875. Members of the Church of England at the date of the census in 1954 numbered 832,473, Roman Catholics 564,654, Presbyterians 326,422, Methodists 252,802, Baptists 34,316, Church of Christ 33,608 and Hebrew 24,016. The number of persons who did not state their religion was 243,555.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Australian Alps and the Great Dividing Range pass through the centre of the State, and divide it into a northern and southern watershed, the latter sloping down to the ocean and containing, especially in the south-east, well-wooded valleys. The length of the Murray River, which forms part of the northern boundary of Victoria, is about 1,200 miles along the Victorian bank. Melbourne, the capital city, stands upon the Yarra-Yarra, which rises in the southern slopes of the Dividing Range.

Climate.—The climate of Victoria is characterized by warm summers, rather cold winters, and rain in all months with a maximum in winter or spring. Prevailing winds are southerly from November to February inclusive, with a moderate percentage of northerlies often associated with high temperatures. Northerly or westerly winds predominate from March to October inclusive. Rain on an average falls 156 days per year, the annual average being 25.89 inches.

GOVERNMENT.

Victoria was originally known as the Port Phillip District of New South Wales, and was created into a separate colony in 1851, with a partially elective legislature. In 1855 Responsible Government was conferred. The executive authority is vested in a Governor, appointed by the Crown, aided by an Executive Council of Ministers.

Governor of the State of Victoria, His Excellency General Sir Dallas Brooks, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., D.S.O., born Aug. 22, 1896, appointed 1949, term extended for 3 years from Oct. 19, 1954. . £6,000

CITIES AND TOWNS

Ψ MELBOURNE, the capital city, which is an episcopal see, was originally laid out in the year 1837 with wisdom and foresight; its wide streets, park lands, public gardens, university, public library, museum and large churches are the principal features of the city. Melbourne and suburbs cover an area of 445,746 acres and contained on Dec. 31, 1955, a population of 1,595,300. Other cities and towns are Ψ Geelong, 78,530; Ballarat, 49,500; Bendigo, 38,130; Ψ Warrnambool, 12,800; Mildura, 11,280; Wonthaggi, 4,500; Hamilton, 8,850; Shepparton, 11,540; Maryborough, 7,010; Colac, 8,300; Horsham, 8,050; Castlemaine, 6,710; Ararat, 7,610; Wangaratta, 11,310; Stawell, 5,570; Echuca, 5,700; Sale, 6,790; Swan Hill, 5,470 and Benalla, 6,310.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Includes all that portion of the continent west of 129° E. long., the most westerly point being in 129° 52' E. long., and from 13° 30' to 35° 8' S. lat. Its extreme length is 1,500 miles, and 1,000 miles from east to west; total area 975,920 sq. miles.

POPULATION.—At December 31, 1955, the population was 670,750 (345,487 males and 325,263 females).

The estimated number of full-blooded aborigines on June 30, 1955, was 15,000.

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1952	15,413	5,209	5,389
1953	15,862	5,072	5,032
1954	15,928	5,364	5,204
1955	16,623	5,379	5,145

Religions.—Census of 1954—268,135 Church of England, 143,489 Roman Catholics, 68,489 Methodists, and 37,659 Presbyterians.

Physical Features.—Large areas of the State, for some hundreds of miles inland, are hilly and even mountainous, although the altitude, so far as ascertained, rises nowhere above that of Mount Bruce (4,024 ft.) in the north-west division or that of Bluff Knoll (3,640 ft.) in the Stirling Range in the south-west. The coastal regions are undulating, with an interior slope to the unsettled central portion of Australia. The Darling and Hamersley ranges of the west have a seaward slope to the Indian Ocean, into which flow many streams, notably the Preston, Collie, Murray, Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, and De Grey. In the north the Fitzroy flows from the King Leopold ranges into the Indian Ocean, and the Drysdale and Ord into the Timor Sea. The greater portion of the State may be described as an immense tableland, with an altitude of from 1,000 to 2,000 ft. above sea-level, the surface of which varies from stretches of clayey soils to the sand dunes of the far interior. The climate is one of the most temperate in the world. The total rainfall at Perth during 1955 was 46.52 inches, the average for the past 80 years 34.99. Of the total area two-thirds is suitable for pastoral purposes.

GOVERNMENT

Western Australia was first settled by the British in 1829, and in 1870 it was granted a partially elective legislature. In 1890 responsible government was granted, and the Administration vested in a Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The present constitution rests upon an Amending Act of 1899, further amended by the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1911; the Executive is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and aided by a Council of responsible Ministers.

The Legislative Assembly (elected April, 1956) is composed of Labour Party 29, Liberal and Country League 13, Country Party 8.

EDUCATION

Education.—Education is compulsory and free. In 1955 there were 466 Primary Schools, 20 High Schools and a School of Agriculture under the control of the Minister for Education representing a total of 86,609 pupils. In addition the Government has established a Teachers' Training College, Technical Schools and Schools of Mines and subsidises a University. There were also 262 private schools with an average attendance of 27,786. The total amount expended on education (from Revenue) during the year ended June 30, 1955, was £6,607,330, including grants of £372,844 to the University of Western Australia.

FINANCE

Revenue and Expenditure and gross public Debt for 5 years ended June 30 :—

1955	45,719,846	46,203,889	177,660,291

Banking.—There were, including the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, 8 cheque-paying banks in the State on June 30, 1955. The amount due to depositors in Savings Banks on Dec. 31, 1955, was £54,372,281.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY

The gross value of primary production in 1954-55 was: agricultural £40,306,753, pastoral and trapping £43,884,930; dairying, poultry keeping and bee-farming £10,861,251; forestry £4,077,845; fisheries £2,191,669; mining £21,261,136.

Crops and Live Stock.—Of the total area under crop (5,042,856 acres), 2,979,000 acres were under wheat for grain, the 1954-55 crop being estimated at 34,300,000 bushels. On March 31, 1955, the livestock included 860,574 cattle, 13,411,282 sheep, 107,039 pigs and 46,886 horses. In 1954-55 there were 9,015 acres of vineyards and 21,475 acres of orchards. The wool clip in 1954-55 was 121,125,000 lb. in the grease.

Manufacturing Industries.—There were on June 30, 1955, a total of 3,727 industrial establishments in the State employing either machinery or at least four hands. The total number of persons employed in them was 49,314.

Forestry.—The forests contain some of the very finest hardwoods in the world. Two of these, jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata) and karri (Eucalyptus diversicolor), are largely exported. The quantity of timber sawn and hewn during the 12 months ended June, 1955, is computed to have been 254,000,000 super feet.

Minerals.—The mines of the Coolgardie and adjacent goldfields, which cover a vast portion of the interior and extend to the 125th meridian, and of the northern fields, are being constantly worked. The production of gold in the State for 1955 was 842,005 fine oz. (£A13,155,329). The total amount produced from 1886 to Dec. 31, 1955 is 57,336,653 fine oz. (£A365,301,077). Magnetic iron, lead, copper, tin and manganese ores and coal, asbestos, bauxite and gypsum exist in large quantities.

Communications.—On June 30, 1955, there were 4,111 miles of State government railway; 277 miles of private lines open for general and passenger traffic; and 450 miles of the Commonwealth line (Kalgoorlie—Port Pirie Junction). On Dec. 31, 1955, there were on the State register 357 vessels, of 12,189 tons, of which 141 were steam or motor vessels (8,567 tons) and 216 sailing vessels (3,622 tons).

PHYSIOGRAPHY

New Zealand consists of a number of islands of varying size in the South Pacific Ocean, and has also administrative responsibility for a large uninhabited tract in the Antarctic Ocean. The two largest and most important islands, the North and South Islands of New Zealand, are separated by only a relatively narrow strait. The remaining islands are very much smaller and, in general, are widely dispersed over a considerable expanse of ocean. The boundaries, inclusive of the most from 8° South latitude to South of 60° South latitude, and from 160° East longitude to 180° West longitude, have a total length of 15,000 miles. The surface is mountainous in character. The principal range is the North Island, the entire length of the South Island and having its culminating point in Mount Cook (12,349 ft.). The North Island mountains include several volcanoes, two of which are active, others being dormant or extinct. Mt. Ruapehu (9,175 ft.) and Mt. Ngauruhoe (7,515 ft.) are the most important. Of the numerous glaciers in the South Island, the Tasman (18 miles long by 1½ wide), the Franz Joseph and the Fox are the best known. The North Island in particular is noted for its hot springs and geysers. For the most part the rivers are too short and rapid for considerable use in navigation. The more important include the Waikato (270 miles in length); Wanganui (180), and Clutha (210). Lakes (Taupo, 238 sq. miles in area; Wakatipu, 112; and Te Anau, 132) are abundant, many of them of great beauty.

Climate.—New Zealand has a moist-temperate marine climate, but with abundant sunshine. A very important feature is the small annual range of temperature which permits of some growth of vegetation, including pasture, all the year round. Very little snow falls on the low levels even in the South Island. The mean temperature ranges from 50° F. in the North to about 49° F. in the South. Rainfall over the more settled areas in the North Island ranges from 35 to 70 inches and in the South Island from 25 to 45 inches. The total range is from approximately 13 to over 250 inches. The number of rainy days is generally in the neighbourhood of 160 to 180 in the North Island and between 120 and 140 in the South, except in the southern portion of the west coast. The amount of sunshine is generally over 2,000 hours per annum and ranges between 1,600 and 2,500 hours.

GOVERNMENT

The west coast of the South Island of New Zealand was discovered by Abel Janszoon Tasman, the navigator (voyaging under the direction of the Netherlands' East India Company), on December 13, 1642. The islands were visited, and charted, in 1769 by Captain Cook, who returned to them in 1773, 1774, and 1777. From 1792 onwards sealers and whalers settled along the coasts, and trade in timber and flax followed. Christianity was introduced in 1814, and in 1832 a British Resident was appointed. In 1840 British sovereignty was proclaimed, and on May 3, 1841, New Zealand was, by letters patent, created a separate colony distinct from New South Wales. Organized colonization on a large scale commenced in 1840 with the New Zealand Company's settlement at Wellington. On Sept. 26, 1907, the designation was changed to The Dominion of New Zealand. The Constitution rests upon the Imperial Act of 1852, and on the New Zealand Constitution (Amendment) Act of Dec. 10, 1947. The Statute of Westminster was formally adopted by New Zealand in 1947. The executive authority is entrusted to a Governor-General appointed by the Crown and aided by an Executive Council, within a Legislature consisting of one chamber, the House of Representatives.

POLICE

On March 31, 1956, the strength of the Police Force was 2,030 of all ranks, including 498 temporary constables, equivalent to 1 for every 1,072 of the population. The total cost of police protection in 1955-56 was £2,033,000.

PASSPORTS

With certain exceptions, no person over 16 years of age is permitted to land unless in possession of a passport or some other document satisfactorily establishing his or her nationality and identity.

DEFENCE

Navy.

The Royal New Zealand Navy (established 1913) was greatly expanded following the outbreak of war and a number of small vessels were built in New Zealand. New Zealand naval personnel totalled 10,000, of whom 4,000 were with the Royal Navy. Over 1,000 New Zealanders served with the Fleet Air Arm. The naval forces include the Women's Royal New Zealand Naval Service, and four Reserve forces. The strength is 2 cruisers, 3 frigates, a survey ship and 15 other vessels in commission; 3 frigates and 7 trawlers in reserve. Active naval personnel numbers 324 officers and 2,403 ratings. A frigate of the Royal New Zealand Navy is at present on the Far East Station. Naval expenditure in 1955-56 amounted to £3,817,000.

Army.

The New Zealand Army Defence Forces consist of the Regular Force (General Service Section and Home Service Section), the Territorial Force, the Army Reserve and the Cadet Corps. The establishment of the Regular Force at Sept. 30, 1955, was 3,816 in all ranks.

During the war of 1939-1945 New Zealand sent a division (the 2nd) to the Middle East theatre, which took part in the campaigns in Greece, Crete, North Africa and Italy. Another division (the 3rd) saw service in the South Pacific and took part in a number of actions in that area. A Force is now serving in Korea and Malaya.

A National Referendum on Aug. 3, 1949, authorized compulsory military service with the object of creating a citizen defence force. This scheme is in operation, and all men on reaching the age of 18 years are liable for an initial period of fourteen weeks' full training (at present the period is 20½ weeks). At the conclusion of this period, they are posted to the Territorial Force. The active strength of the Territorial Forces at Sept. 30, 1955, was 35,888 in all ranks.

Expenditure on the land forces for the year 1955-56 was £7,612,000.

Air.

The Royal New Zealand Air Force was mobilized in September, 1939, and its organization was linked with the Empire Training Scheme. A number of New Zealand Units, including Bomber Squadrons, Fighter Squadrons, and Torpedo Bomber Squadrons operated with the R.A.F., and considerable numbers of New Zealand personnel served with other R.A.F. Units in many theatres. Approximately 10,000 of the R.N.Z.A.F. (mostly air crew) went to the European theatre and over 20,000 to the Pacific area. 26 squadrons of various types operated in the Pacific area. The post-war Air Force consists of the Regular and Territorial Air Forces, the Air Force Reserve, Air Training Corps, and Women's Auxiliary Air Force. The strength of the Regular Force at March 31, 1955, was 4,370.

Air Force expenditure in 1955-56 was £8,759,000.

FINANCE

Figures of the Consolidated Fund shown in this table are quoted on a gross basis, i.e. credits have not been deducted from departmental expenditure, but have been included as receipts. Expenditure includes transfers to the Public Works Account (£7,500,000 in 1955-56, exclusive of transfers from the previous year's surplus) and to the Social Security Fund, the amount in 1955-56 being £14,000,000. The expenditure of the Social Security Fund for 1955-56 was £72,884,000 as compared with an expenditure of £67,164,000 in 1954-55.

Year ended March 31	Revenue	Expenditure
	£(N.Z.)	£(N.Z.)
1939	43,699,000	42,889,000
1953	177,822,000	174,315,000
1954	182,319,000	180,516,000
1955	191,216,000	184,376,000
1956	197,433,000	193,282,000*

* Includes £12,703,000 for debt redemption and £24,393,000 for defence.

Revenue from taxation in 1955-56 amounted to £244,829,000, of which £167,419,000 were receipts of the Consolidated Fund, £59,911,000 receipts of the Social Security Fund and £17,499,000 receipts into the National Roads Fund.

DEBT.

The gross Public Debt amounted on March 31, 1956, to £735,201,000, of which £95,804,000 was domiciled in London. The amount domiciled in London excludes £24,100,200 in respect of which interest payments have been suspended since 1931 by agreement with the Imperial Government.

BANKING.

There are five trading banks (with numerous branches) doing business, two of which are predominantly New Zealand banks. Of these the Bank of New Zealand is owned by the State. At March 28, 1956, total assets amounted to £284,031,000; liabilities, £286,486,000; and the value of notes in circulation amounted to £63,052,000. The Reserve Bank of New Zealand commenced business on August 1, 1934. The note-issuing powers of other banks have since been withdrawn and the Reserve Bank notes are legal tender. Net overseas assets of banks (on account of New Zealand business only) at March 28, 1956, amounted to £84,775,000, of which £28,227,000 and £27,891,000 represented the Reserve Bank's holdings of sterling exchange and sterling investments respectively. Trading banks' advances, including discounts, at the end of March, 1956, totalled £184,207,000, compared with £189,241,000 in the previous year. Deposits with trading banks at the end of March, 1956, amounted to £272,839,000. At the corresponding date in 1955 they were £293,850,000.

Post-office and trustee savings banks had, at the close of the year 1955-56, 1,974,000 depositors having £264,965,000 to their credit. This amount does not include National Savings Accounts in which depositors had £69,451,000 to their credit at March 31, 1956.

As from Aug. 20, 1948, New Zealand restored her currency to parity with sterling, in place of the depreciated rate of £N.Z.125 = £100 adopted in 1933.

EDUCATION

The State system of education is free, secular, and compulsory. The school-leaving age was raised to 15 years as from Feb. 1, 1944. There were (Dec. 1955) 1,938 public primary schools, with 321,327 scholars; there were also 321 registered private primary schools with 44,355 scholars, and 164 Maori village schools with 13,598 scholars, of whom 12,351 were Maoris. There were also 22,230 Maori children attending public primary schools. The higher education of boys and girls in the cities and large towns is carried on in 59 secondary and combined schools, and in 34 technical high and technical day schools. In addition there are 107 secondary departments of district high schools, 86 endowed and private secondary schools and 10 Maori secondary schools. The total number of pupils receiving full-time secondary education at the end of 1955 was 81,066 and in addition there were 43,349 part-time students attending technical classes, 1,946 receiving part-time tuition from the Correspondence School and 2,187 receiving instruction from the Technical Correspondence School. The University of New Zealand, with power to confer degrees, consists of Auckland University College, Victoria University College, Canterbury University College, and the University of Otago. Two Agricultural Colleges (Massey and Canterbury) are associated with the University. The 6 Colleges had a total of 11,742 students in 1955.

The total expenditure on Education out of public funds in 1955-56 was £28,519,000.

THE ISLANDS OF NEW ZEALAND

In addition to North, South, Stewart and Chatham Islands:—

The Three Kings (discovered by Tasman on the Feast of the Epiphany), in 34° 9' S. lat. and 172° 8' 8" E. long. (uninhabited). Auckland Islands, about 290 miles south of Bluff Harbour, in 50° 32' S. lat. and 166° 13' E. long. The islands contain several good harbours, but are uninhabited. Campbell Island (population 7 at April 17, 1956). Antipodes Group (49° 41' 15" S. lat. and 178° 43' E. long.) uninhabited. Bounty Islands (47° 4' 43" S. lat., 170° 0' 30" E. long.). Snares Islands and Solander (uninhabited).

The Kermadec Group (population 11 at 1956 Census), between 29° 10' to 31° 30' S. lat., and 177° 45' to 179° W. long., includes Raoul or Sunday, Macaulay, Curtis Islands, L'Esperance, and some islets.

Cook and other Islands, included in the boundaries of New Zealand since June, 1901, consist of the islands of Rarotonga (6,072), Aitutaki (2,590), Mangaia (2,201), Atiu (1,416), Mauke (147), Mitiaro (348), Manuae (51), Takutea (uninhabited), Palmerston (102), Penrhyn or Tongareva (595), Manihiki (897), Rakahanga (298), Pukapuka or Danger (625), Suwarrow (uninhabited), Nassau (72), Niue or Savage (4,679). The population figures are as at March 31, 1956, the total for the Group being 21,103. The chief exports are citrus fruits, tomatoes, pineapples, copra, pearl shell and manufactured apparel. The trade is chiefly with New Zealand and the U.S.A. The exports (1955) were valued at £N.Z.420,053, and the imports at £N.Z.572,364 for Cook Islands, and at £N.Z.78,360 and £N.Z.158,082 for Niue Island. Rarotonga is the chief island of the Cook Group, with a Maori population of 6,063 and a population other than Maori of 349. Local administration is carried out by Resident Commissioners at Rarotonga and Niue, and Resident Agents on the other inhabited islands, the latter being answerable to the Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga. In their administration, commissioners and agents are assisted by the Island Councils of Maori Arikis (chiefs) and elected members, but ordinances may be disallowed by the Governor-General of New Zealand.

The revenue of the Cook Islands in 1954-55, exclusive of a subsidy from the New Zealand Government of £339,727, was £248,582, and expenditure, £448,004. Revenue of Niue, exclusive of subsidy £99,254, was £73,660, and expenditure £188,269.

Ross Dependency (1923), see p. 723.

Tokelau (or Union) Islands.—A group of atolls (Fakaofu, Nukunono and Atafu) (population 1,921 at March 31, 1956), proclaimed part of New Zealand as from Jan. 1, 1948.

The Trust Territories are:—

Western Samoa, consisting of the islands of Savaii (793 square miles) and of Upolu, which with its small adjacent islands, is 430 square miles. The estimated population at March 31, 1956 was 97,218 of whom 92,139 were Samoans. All the islands are mountainous. Upolu, the most fertile, contains the harbours of Ψ Apia and Ψ Saluafata, of which the former is the capital. The islanders are Christians of different denominations. Coconuts (copra), cocoa and bananas are the chief products of the islands. The revenue for 1955, exclusive of a grant of £36,030 from the New Zealand Government, was £1,224,360. Expenditure £1,297,150. The exports were valued in 1955 at £2,512,000 and the imports, 1955, £1,895,000.

A law (No. 17 of 1923) amending and consolidating the pre-Union Acts in force in the four Provinces was passed and came into force as from January 1, 1924. Under this law registration of all European, Asiatic and Coloured (as distinct from Native) births and deaths is compulsory throughout the Union. From July 1, 1952, compulsory registration of births and deaths of natives, which was already in force in urban areas, was extended to rural areas, but registration is still very incomplete. (a) Excluding Natives. (b) Only marriages solemnized under the prescribed civil laws are subject to registration.

PHYSIOGRAPHY

Boundaries.—The provinces of the Union extend from the southernmost point of the African Continent to the courses of the Limpopo, Matopo and Orange Rivers, i.e., from 34° 50'–22° South latitude, and include all territories within those limits, with the exception of Basutoland, Swaziland, Bechuanaland and a part of Mozambique.

Relief.—The southernmost province contains many parallel ranges, which rise in steps towards the interior. The south-western peninsula contains the famous Table Mountain (3,582 feet), while the Great Swartling and Langberg run in parallel lines from west to east of the Cape province. Between these two ranges and the Roggeveld and Nuweveld to the north is the Great Karroo Plateau, which is bounded on the east by the Sneeuberg, containing the highest summit in the province (Kompasberg, 7,800 feet). In the east are ranges which join the Drakensberg (11,000 feet) between Natal and the Orange Free State.

The Orange Free State presents a succession of undulating grassy plains with good pasture-land, at a general elevation of some 3,800 feet, with occasional hills or kopies. The Transvaal is also mainly an elevated plateau with parallel ridges in the Magales and Waterberg ranges of no great height. The veld or plains of this northernmost province is divisible into the High Veld of the south, the Banker Veld of the centre, and the Low Veld of the north and east, the first and second forming the grazing and agricultural region of the Transvaal and the last a fertile sub-tropical area. The eastern province of Natal has pastoral lowlands and rich agricultural land between the slopes of the Drakensberg and the coast, the interior rising in terraces as in the southern provinces.

Rivers.—The Orange, with its tributary the Vaal, is the principal river of the south, rising in the Drakensberg and flowing into the Atlantic between the Protectorate of South-West Africa and the Cape Province. The Limpopo, or Crocodile River, in the north, rises in the Transvaal and flows into the Indian Ocean through Portuguese East Africa. Most of the remaining rivers are furious torrents after rain, with partially dry beds at other seasons.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

The Cape of Good Hope was discovered in 1488 by Bartholomew Diaz, the commander of one of the many expeditions sent out by successive Kings of Portugal to discover an ocean route to India. Diaz merely doubled the Cape and returned home. In 1497–8, Vasco da Gama not only doubled the Cape and landed in what is now Natal, but successfully accomplished the voyage to India. The Portuguese, however, did not make any permanent settlement at the Cape, although it was used by their vessels until about 1511, and subsequently also by those of England and the Netherlands, as a place of call in going to and from the East Indies. In 1652 the Netherlands' East India Company took possession of the shores of Table Bay, established a fort, and occupied the adjacent lands, in order to be always ready with supplies for their passing ships. In 1814 the Cape was formally ceded to the British Crown.

Natal derives its name from the fact of its discovery on Christmas Day, 1497, by the celebrated Portuguese navigator, Vasco da Gama. The first European settlement was formed (1824) by a small party of Englishmen, who came by sea and established themselves on the coast where Durban now stands. Natal was then a part of the great Zulu kingdom under T'Chaka. Between 1838 and 1840 another settlement was formed by a large body of Dutch Boers, who came with their waggons overland from the Cape Colony and settled in the northern districts, where to this day the Boers preponderate. In the year 1843 Natal was proclaimed as British and annexed to the Cape Colony. In 1856 it was erected into a separate colony, with representative institutions, and in 1893 acquired responsible government.

The Transvaal was formed as the South African Republic by parties of Dutch Boers from the English colonies who "trekked" into the interior of the continent and wrested the land across the Vaal river from the native chiefs. The discovery of the goldfields within its borders led to the settlement of large numbers of foreigners, and eventually to hostilities with the British Government. A war of nearly three years' duration was fought with great tenacity, and its close was marked by the inclusion of the South African Republic within the British Empire, "responsible government" being granted almost immediately.

The Orange Free State was founded, as with the Transvaal, by Boer emigrants from Cape Colony, and its independence was granted in 1854. Its subsequent history is identical with that of the Transvaal.

Delville Wood.—The title deeds of Delville Wood, containing the graves of South African troops who fell there during the battles on the Western Front in France in the Great War 1914-1918, are held by the Government of the Union of South Africa, and Delville Wood is part of South Africa.

Antarctic (see also pp. 722-3).—Prince Edward Islands were annexed in December, 1947. A meteorological station was established on Marion Island in January, 1948.

GOVERNMENT

The Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. VII., cap. 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909. In terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony became united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative Union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, those Colonies becoming original Provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal and the Orange Free State respectively. The Union Government is seised of all state property, and the Railways, Ports and Harbours are administered by Commissioners.

The seat of the Government is Pretoria; the seat of the Legislature is Cape Town.

The Executive is vested in a Governor-General appointed by the Sovereign, and aided by an Executive Council, with a Legislature of two Houses.

Under the Citizenship Act, 1949, five years' residence in the Union is necessary for the acquisition of South African citizenship.

THE LEGISLATURE

The Senate, as reconstituted by Act No. 53 of 1955, now consists of 89 members appointed or elected for a term of five years. Eighteen are nominated by the Governor-General in Council (16 for the Union and 2 for South West Africa). Sixty-seven are elected (27 for the Transvaal; 22 Cape; 8 Natal; 8 Orange Free State and 2 for South West Africa). In addition, four members are elected under the provisions of the Representation of Natives Act No. 12 of 1936.

The House of Assembly consists of 159 elected members, 54 of whom represent the Cape of Good Hope, 15 Natal, 68 Transvaal, 13 the Orange Free State, and 6 South-West Africa, with 3 Native members. Cape native voters being entitled to elect three members of the House of Assembly, who hold their seats for 5 years notwithstanding any dissolution of the House. Members of both Houses must be South African citizens of European descent. European female franchise was introduced under the provisions of Act No. 18 of 1930.

In June, 1956 the party representation in the House of Assembly was as follows: Nationalist Party, 95; United Party, 51; National Conservative Party, 5; Labour Party, 5; Native Representatives, 3. Total, 159.

DEFENCE

The South Africa Defence Act, 1912, became law on June 14, 1912. This Act, as amended in 1922, 1932, 1947, 1949, 1951 and 1952 provides that every citizen between the ages of 17 and 65 is liable to render personal service in time of war, and those between 17 and 25 are liable to undergo a prescribed course of peace training with the Active Citizen Force spread over a period of four consecutive years. The Act states, however, that not more than 50 per cent. of the total number liable to peace training shall actually undergo that training unless Parliament makes financial provision for the training of a greater number.

EDUCATION

The Provinces have been relieved of all vocational education (technical and industrial), and the Department of Education, Arts and Science under the Minister is concerned with 9 Universities, 11 technical colleges, schools of industries, reformatories and State technical, housecraft and commercial high schools; State-aided vocational schools and State and State-aided special schools for the physically handicapped.

The number of full-time students at the universities in June, 1954, was 18,556. The State expenditure on higher education, including administration and expenditure connected with the above-mentioned institutions, for the financial year 1953-54 was £6,871,612.

Primary Education and Education other than Higher Education.—The central direction of public education (other than higher education) is exercised by the Provincial Education Department in each of the four Provinces of the Union. Each Department is controlled by a Director. The majority of European schools in all the Provinces are State Schools and the majority of non-European schools are State-aided. In all Provinces primary education in schools for all races is free. Secondary education in all the Provinces is also free, with an age limit of 19 years in the Cape Province.

COMMUNICATIONS

Railways.—The total open mileage of Government-owned lines at the end of March, 1955, was 13,429 miles (comprising Cape 5,280, Orange Free State 1,675, Natal 1,675, Transvaal 1,675, and West Africa 1,675).

capital expenditure on Government railways up to March 31, 1955, amounted to £18,919,880. Working expenditure (excluding depreciation) amounted to £70,488,536. Through communication by rail is now available from Cape Town to Port Francqui in the lower Congo, 3,300 miles, all 3 ft. 6 in. gauge. The Trans-Zambesia Railway, from Dondo junction (on the Beira-Mashonaland line) to the Zambesi, places the Union in direct communication with Nyasaland. This railway now extends to Blantyre and to Salima on Lake Nyasa.

Posts and Telegraphs.—On March 31, 1955, there were 3,471 post and 3,538 telegraph offices open in the Union.

Airways.—Internal air services are operated between all the major centres in the Union and South-West Africa. Regional air services are operated between Johannesburg and Bulawayo and Johannesburg and Lourenco Marques.

The "Springbok Service" is operated jointly by South African Airways and the British Overseas Airways Corporation, using modern pressurised aircraft and providing a regular service between Johannesburg and London.

Broadcasting Stations.—On March 31, 1955, there were 11 licensed broadcasting stations in the Union and 717,941 licensed listeners to broadcasting. The stations are controlled by the South African Broadcasting Corporation. (Board of Governors appointed by the Government.)

Shipping.—In 1955, South African ports handled about 13,950,111 tons of goods, excluding mail, passengers' baggage and stores, in the overseas trade, and 1,988,906 tons in coastwise trade. The total harbour revenue for 1954-55 was approximately £6,967,428, the expenditure £2,767,787. The principal ports are Cape Town, Port Elizabeth, and East London (Cape Province); Durban (Natal); Walvis Bay and Luderitz Bay (S.-W. Africa).

South-West Africa.

(Suidwes-Afrika.)

Administrator, D. T. du P. Viljoen.

Secretary, J. Nesper.

SOUTH-WEST AFRICA lies between S. lat. $17^{\circ} 23'$ and the Orange River, with a narrow strip between $17^{\circ} 30' - 18^{\circ} 20'$ S. lat. extending from 21° to 25° E. long., known as the Caprivi Zipfel, and gives access to the Zambesi. Off the coast are a number of guano islands (Hollandsbird, Mercury, Ichaboe, Seal, Penguin, Halifax, Long, Possession, Albatross, Pomona, Plumpudding, Sinclair and Roastbeef Islands).

The estimated area of the country is 317,725 square miles, and the population (1951 Census) is 418,104, of whom 49,612 are Europeans. The native population in the Police Zone is 153,642 and that beyond the Police Zone is estimated to be 227,464, of whom 196,350 are estimated to be in Ovamboland.

South-West Africa was occupied by Germany in 1884, but at the conclusion of the War of 1914-1918 the territory was mandated to the Union in accordance with the Treaty of Versailles and South-West Africa has since that time been administered by the Union.

Under the Union Act No. 49 of 1919, the exercise of the mandate was vested in a Governor-General, who delegated his powers to an Administrator appointed by the Union Government. A limited measure of self-government was conferred upon the inhabitants by the Union Act No. 42 of 1925. Fundamental and far-reaching changes in the constitutional position of the Territory were introduced by the passing of the South-West Africa Affairs Amendment Act, 1949 (No. 23 of 1949). The Advisory Council was abolished and in future all 18 members of the Legislative Assembly will be chosen by the registered voters of the Territory.

The Territory is represented in the Union House of Assembly by six members duly elected by the registered voters of the Territory and in the Senate by four Senators, of which two are elected and two nominated by the Governor-General.

Generally speaking, only the Parliament of the Union will, in future, have the power to legislate on those matters in respect of which the Legislative Assembly is not competent to legislate, and the Legislative Assembly in respect of other matters. In an emergency, however, the Governor-General, may, by proclamation, make laws about any matter on which the Legislative Assembly is not competent to make ordinances.

On July 11, 1950, the International Court of Justice at The Hague delivered an opinion that South-West Africa was still under international mandate; that international obligations resulting from the mandate were still incumbent on the Union, including obligation to submit reports on its administration; and that South Africa was not competent to modify its international status without consent of the United Nations.

The Capital of the Territory is Windhoek, which lies practically in the centre of the country at 5,500 ft. above sea-level. (Urban white population, 1951, 10,246.) The ports are Ψ Walvis Bay (Urban white population, 1951, 936) and Ψ Luderitz (Urban white population, 1951, 1,132).

ORANGE FREE STATE

The Province of the Orange Free State has a total area of 49,866 square miles, and is divided into 43 districts. The population at the 1946 and 1951 censuses was:—

1951	227,652	788,918	1,016,570

Education.—Primary and secondary education is under the control of the Provincial Administration. On June 6, 1954, there were 324 schools for Europeans with 54,373 pupils and 2,352 teachers; and 30 schools for coloureds with 3,190 pupils and 107 teachers. The expenditure in 1954-55 was £2,880,119 for European and £63,481 for coloured education.

Finance.—Revenue 1953-54 (including Union Government subsidy), £6,848,825; expenditure, £6,897,003 (excluding capital expenditure of £1,150,091, financed from loan funds).

Administration.—The government is administered by an Administrator aided by a Provincial Council of 25 members (elected for 5 years). There is an Executive Committee of 4 elected members and the Administrator who is Chairman of the Committee.

Administrator, Hon. J. J. Fouché. £3,250
Executive Committee, W. J. Pretorius; S. I. Senekal; Z. A. Thuymsma; W. F. Wentzel.
Provincial Secretary, J. A. Viljoen.

BLOEMFONTEIN, the Capital and seat of the Provincial Government, has a population (1954) of 115,000 persons, 54,000 Europeans and 61,000 non-Europeans.

India and Pakistan

The Indian Independence Act, 1947, which received the Royal Assent on July 18, 1947, brought to an end the whole structure of British Government in India and the handing over of power was completed by August 15, 1947. The Indian Empire, with a vast area over territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia, is represented from that date by the Republic of India, the Dominion of Pakistan, and Territories of Indian Rulers formerly under the suzerainty of the King-Emperor. Certain tracts of Tribal Territory on the North West and North East Frontiers are under the political influence, though not under the administrative rule, of the Government of Pakistan.

Except where otherwise stated herein "India" includes the Republic of India, the Dominion of Pakistan, the States of India and Tribal Areas.

THE INDIAN INDEPENDENCE ACT, 1947

A Cabinet statement on Indian policy (Cmd. 7136) issued on June 3, 1947, explained that, no agreement other than by partition having proved acceptable, the plan evolved by Viscount Mountbatten of Burma and agreed to by Indian political leaders would be proceeded with. This involved a decision of the two Indian parties as to whether there should be a partition of India and if partition was decided then two Constitutional Assemblies would determine the future constitution of each of these divisions. The Constituent Assembly for India held its first meeting on December 9, 1946, and that for Pakistan on August 10, 1947.

The United Kingdom Cabinet statement anticipated the date of June, 1948, for the handing over of power and His Majesty's Government proposed to introduce legislation for the transfer of power in 1947 on a Dominion Status basis to one or two authorities, according to the decisions taken as a result of the announcement. This did not prejudice the right of the Constituent Assemblies to decide in due course whether or not the part of India in respect of which they had authority would remain within the British Commonwealth.

The Indian Independence Act, which became law on July 18, 1947, made provision for the setting up of a Dominion of India and a Dominion of Pakistan. It defined the territories of each, abolished the existing Provinces of Bengal and Punjab, and, subject to the decisions of a boundary commission, allotted to each new Provinces of East and West Bengal and East and West Punjab. As the result of a referendum the district of Sylhet in Assam (less four thanas) was included in Pakistan.

The Act eliminated the words India Imperator and "Emperor of India" from the Royal Styles and Titles and provided for the appointment by the King of a Governor-General to each of the new Dominions. Paramountcy over the Indian States was allowed to lapse and the functions of the India Office were transferred to the Commonwealth Relations Department.

By the adaptation of the Government of India Act, 1935, and by Orders temporarily passed and valid until March 31, 1948, powers were vested in the Governor-General mainly for the purpose of the transfer of powers, rights, property, duties and liabilities of the existing Central Government.

The existing rights of members of the former Secretary of State's Services and of judges who elected to serve in either India or Pakistan were guaranteed. The authority of His Majesty's Government in relation to British forces who might remain in India or Pakistan was unaffected by the Act.

The Central Government and Legislatures came to an end on August 15, 1947, and the responsibility of the British Government for the government of former British India ceased.

GEOGRAPHICAL INDIA AND PRE-PARTITION STATISTICS, ETC.

Boundaries.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia and Afghanistan from the Gulf of Oman to Povalto Schveikovski on the Taghumbash Pamir. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire and Nepal, till the limits of Burma are reached. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 97° E. longitude. Delhi, the capital of the Republic of India, lies in 77° E. long. Karachi, the capital of the Dominion of Pakistan, lies in 66° E. long.

Area and Population.—The total area of India proper in 1941 was 1,581,410 square miles, with a population of nearly 389 millions (about three-fourths of the population of the British Empire). The British provinces, as distinguished from the Indian States, comprised 55 per cent. of the area and about 76 per cent. of the population. The details of the census were given on pages 706-7 of the 1947 "Whitaker."

Physical Features.—The country may be broadly divided into three sections, viz. the Himalayan region the northern river-plains, and the southern tableland.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,002 feet, Kunchinjunga, 28,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes give a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, decidar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever-haunted Tarai or Duar jungle, densely forest-covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. The sources of two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing

W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus; and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles, drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges, 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water-carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea; while in the south, indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboos, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Sulaiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhyas. The Eastern and Western Ghats all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghats, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapti flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghats lie close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapti; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghats, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Cauvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast, shut in by mountains, is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E., open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghats, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound. The jungles in the E. are very deadly. The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various small game afford sport. Snakes are found everywhere. In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised, chiefly rice, millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and chinchona. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern tableland has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, monazite, and gold.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon rains. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rainfall, which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 39 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan, but is small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn. In 1950, owing to the vagaries of the monsoon, heavy losses of life and property were caused by floods in Northern India, while in the Deccan there was widespread drought, and consequent grave shortages of food.

Languages.—India has 225 languages, exclusive of dialects. The languages spoken by 349,883,022 persons in 1931 (excluding 2,308,221 persons for whom details by language were not available) were grouped in eight families. The principal languages were Western Hindi (spoken by 71,547,000 persons), Bengali (53,469,000), Bihari (27,927,000), Telugu (26,374,000), Marathi (20,890,000), Tamil (20,412,000), Punjabi (15,839,000), Rajasthani (13,898,000), after which came Kanarese, Oriya, Gujarati, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, containing a large number of Persian and Arabic words, is the lingua franca of India. Hindustani and Hindi have become the chief literary languages of Hindustan. English is understood by many.

Indian System of Notation.—The Indian numerical notation system differs from the European. Large numbers are punctuated as crores and lakhs and not in hundreds, thousands and millions. A lakh is one hundred thousand (written 1,00,000), and a crore is one hundred lakhs or ten millions (1,00,00,000). Thus, 1,68,00,000 is read as 1 crore 68 lakhs. A lakh of rupees (Rs. 1,00,000) may be read as equal to £7,500 at 13½ rupees—the statutory rate adopted for conversion in this article. The rupee is divided into 26 annas and, at 13½ rupees to £1, the anna is equivalent to 1½d. The anna is subdivided into 12 pies (1½d. approximate value).

Currency.—The principal coin in use is the silver rupee, pre-war content 165 grains of fine silver and 15 grains of alloy, weight in all 180 grains troy or 1 tola.

GOVERNMENT

The Dominion of India was constituted under the Indian Independence Act, 1947, which received the Royal Assent on July 18, 1947. In terms of that Act it consisted of certain former territories of British India. The boundaries of the Provinces of West Bengal and East Punjab were defined by a Boundary Commission, presided over by Sir Cyril Radcliffe, K.B.E., Q.C. (now Lord Radcliffe).

An Act passed in January, 1949, by the Constituent Assembly gave certain extended interim powers to the Central Government. The Conference of Prime Ministers came to a unanimous agreement on April 27, 1949, about India's relations to the Commonwealth. According to this agreement India will remain a full member of the Commonwealth. She has accepted the Sovereign as "the symbol of the free association of its independent member nations and, as such, the head of the Commonwealth." The Constitution of the Republic of India was finally adopted on Nov. 26, 1949, by the Constituent Assembly, which thus completed its work. The Republic was formally proclaimed in the Durbar Hall, New Delhi, on Jan. 26, 1950.

THE LEGISLATURE

The Constitution of India came into force on January 26, 1950. The President of the Union "Rashtrapati" is elected for 5 years by an electoral college consisting of all elected members of Parliament and of the various state legislative assemblies. The bicameral union of the legislature is on the British model with two houses, called "Lok Sabha" or the House of the People, and "Rajya Sabha" or the Council of States, which have not more than 500 and 250 members respectively. Separate electorates for communities and untouchability have been abolished. The age limit for adult suffrage for both sexes is 21. The legislative Assemblies in the States have 3,283 members, elected in almost as many constituencies.

Governors and Rajpramukhs of States are appointed by the President and ordinarily hold office for 5 years.

General elections were held from Oct. 1951-Feb. 1952. For the House of People 105,900,000 valid votes were polled. Of a total of 499 seats, 362 are held by the Congress Party and 12 by Socialists. For the States Assemblies, of 103,800,000 valid votes cast, Congress Party obtained 43,950,265, Socialists 10,072,316, Independents 21,974,210. Of a total of 3,283 seats in the States Assemblies, 2,247 are held by the Congress Party and 125 by Socialists. The new Parliament held its first session in New Delhi on May 13, 1952. In undivided India there were 35 million voters out of a total population of 390 millions; the new constitution admits 170 million voters (about one in two of the population).

The States in Part A (p. 748) are based on Provinces or parts of Provinces of the old British India as expanded since 1947 by the addition of former Princely States. Lower Houses or Legislative Assemblies are elected directly by adult suffrage. There is indirect election to Upper Houses in those States where there is a Legislature of two Houses.

The States in Part B are based upon former Princely States and Unions of Princely States established between August 1947 and January 1950. Instead of a Governor as in Part A States there is a Rajpramukh or President appointed by the President of India. Legislatures consist of a single Chamber except in Mysore.

Subject to the provisions of the Constitution, the Union Parliament may make laws for the whole or any part of the territory of India. The Union Parliament has exclusive powers to make laws with respect to matters grouped under 97 headings in the Constitution including e.g. foreign affairs, defence, citizenship, currency and banking, railways, airways, shipping, communications, trade and commerce with foreign countries.

The Legislature of a State in Parts A and B has exclusive power to make laws for the State in matters grouped under 66 headings in the Constitution e.g. public order and police, education, public health, the administration of justice, elections to the legislature, excise and taxes, water, land, forests.

The States in Parts C and D are considerably less independent of Union control than those in Parts A and B. Part C States are based on Chief Commissioners Provinces of British India or Princely States.

Municipalities at the end of 1950 numbered 1054, with a population of 24,378,659. The total number of municipal committee members was 13,712. Income of Municipalities 1949-50 Rs. 929.5 mill.

(669,717,973). Municipal bodies impose taxes, enact bye-laws and spend with the sanction of the State Government concerned.

THE JUDICATURE

The Supreme Court of India, consisting of a Chief Justice and seven associate judges, is the highest supreme court in respect of constitutional matters. It is also the final Court of Appeal in the country.

Chief Justice, Sudhi Ranjan Das. Rs. 66,000.
Judges, T. L. Venkataama Iyer; B. P. Sinha; S. J. Imam; S. K. Das. Rs. 66,000. Vivian Bose; N. H. Bhagwati; B. J. Das. Rs. 48,000.

FINANCE

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.—The total liabilities of the undivided Indian Government on Ang. 15th, 1947, were Rs. 32,000 mill. (£2,400 mill.) and assets Rs. 28,000 mill. (£2,100 mill.).

The cost of purchase of annuities for financing payment of sterling pensions and acquisition of defence installations and stores left after the passing of the Independence Act amounted to Rs. 284 crores (£213 m.).

The Exchange Rate (Free Market) in London on Sept. 1, 1956, was 1s. 5d. and fifteen-sixteenths of 1d. to 1s. 6d. and one-sixteenth of 1d. to the rupee. From Sept. 18, 1949, the Indian rupee was devalued in line with sterling from 1 rupee = 30.2 U.S. cents to 21 U.S. cents. The sterling rate remained unchanged at 1 rupee = 1s. 6d. On Aug. 1, 1955, the Pakistan rupee was re-valued and new exchange rates were fixed. Rs. 4-76190 = 1 U.S. dollar. 1 rupee = 21 U.S. cents = 1s. 6d. See also page 84.

Union Excise duties.—Net revenue 1954-55, Rs. 1,08.22 lakhs (₹81,165,000).

The general rate of import duty is 25 per cent. plus a temporary surcharge of 1/4th. Average rate of export duty in tea in As. 10 per pound.

40 per cent. of the net proceeds from excise duties on matches, tobacco and vegetable products (after cost of collection) is paid to State Governments.

PRODUCTION

About 249,000,000 inhabitants of India are dependent on agricultural pursuits. Most of the agricultural holdings are less than 5 acres. Food crops occupy four-fifths of the cultivated land. There are about 150,000,000 cattle, or about a quarter of the world's cattle population. The average yield of wheat per acre is at present 600 lb.

Industrial

The output of coal in 1954 was 38,200,000 tons against 36,768,000 in 1953. In 1953 there were 384,275 people employed in the industry. Nine-tenths of the coal mined comes from West Bengal and Orissa. Production of steel was 1,704,000 in 1955 as against 1,684,000 tons in 1954. Cement 4,416,000 tons against 4,200,000 tons in 1954.

Paper production 184,884 tons, cloth 5,087 mill. yards in 1955 and yarn 1,634,400 lbs as compared with 4,990 mill. yards and 1,561,000 lbs in 1954.

In 1955 finished steel output was 1,260,000 tons as against 1,243,000 tons in 1954. 7,225.2 tons of aluminium were produced. The yield of gold in 1955 was 239,168 ozs. Monazite and manganese ores have taken an important place in the list of minerals produced in India. In 1955 mica production totalled 154,306 cwt.

COMMUNICATIONS

Civil Aviation.—India occupies an important place in civil aviation among the nations of the world. All air lines were nationalized in 1953 and operate over 28,500 miles of scheduled services within and outside India. In 1952, 434,282 passengers, 36,250 tons of freight, 2,098 tons of newspapers and 3,750 tons of mails were carried on scheduled services, and 88,498 passengers and 55,982 tons of freight on non-scheduled services. At the end of 1952, 77 aerodromes were maintained by the Civil Aviation Department of the Government.

Railways.—On August 15th, 1947, 40,588 miles of railway were split in two portions, 6,958 miles of line in Sind, N.W.F. Prov., West Punjab and East Bengal went to Pakistan and the rest comprising 33,630 route miles to India. On April 1, 1950, some 6,495 miles of former States Railways were absorbed. There will be 6 zones of Indian Railways (Northern, Western, Central, Southern, Eastern and North-Eastern), absorbing 19 independent railway units.

In 1954-55, passengers "originating" were 1,259,200,000, mileage 38,649,300,000, goods traffic freight-ton miles 32,136,000,000.

Gross Traffic Receipts (1954-55) Rs. 28,678 million. Working expenses, Rs. 2,059 million. Net railway revenues, Rs. 441 million.

Roads.—India has about 115,500 miles of all-weather highways, excluding urban roads. Roads (other than urban roads) are divided into four main administrative classes, namely, National Highways, State Highways, District Roads and Village Roads. The National Highways connect capitals of States, major ports and foreign highways, and constitute the main arteries of communication in the country; they also include roads of strategic importance. The State Highways are the main trunk roads of the States, while the District Roads connect areas of production and markets with distribution centres. They also form the main link between headquarters of neighbouring districts. The Village Roads meet the requirements of rural communities.

India's roads system is at present insufficient for her needs, the all-weather roads being only 9.5 miles per hundred square miles of the area of the country. Development of road communication is, therefore, one of the major items of India's Five-Year Plan.

There are at present 307,517 motor vehicles in India, comprising 147,652 cars, 45,640 passenger vehicles, 83,194 goods vehicles, 27,065 motor cycles and 3,966 miscellaneous vehicles.

Ports.—India has a coastline of approximately 3,200 miles, and a land frontier of approx. 2,000 miles.

The chief seaports are Ψ Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Cochin and Vishakapatnam. There are over 150 minor ports with varying capacity. A new major port is to be constructed at Kandla (Kutch).

Shipping.—The total Indian owned registered tonnage of merchant ships of over 150 gross tons is a little over 450,000. The Scindia Steam Navigation Co. and India Steamship Co., both members of the India-U.K.-Continent Conference and the former also of the India-North America Conference, are important companies. The Government-sponsored Eastern Shipping Corporation, founded in 1950, is operating in the India-Malaya and Australia trades. The shipbuilding yard at Vishakapatnam is now able to build ships of all types.

The following table shows the net register tonnage of vessels engaged in foreign trade which entered and cleared from Indian ports, April, 1951-March, 1954.

	Entered Tons	Cleared Tons
1950-51	8,656,480	7,733,067
1951-52	9,505,360	7,599,107
1952-53	8,917,447	9,453,314

Postal.—There are 42,084 post offices, 8,240 telegraph offices, 4,217 telephone exchanges and 184,010 telephones (March 1952). Trunk calls averaged 740,000 a month in 1951-52.

DEFENCE

The supreme command of the armed forces is vested in the President. Administrative and operational control resides in the Army, Navy and Air Headquarters under the supervision of the Ministry of Defence.

Recruitment is open to all, irrespective of class or creed and depends on competitive merit. The Army has 3 Commands, Southern, Eastern and Western, with headquarters at Poona, Ranchi and Delhi respectively. A Territorial Army was inaugurated in Oct. 1949. It is intended to take over A.A. and coastal defence, and to act as a second line of defence. A National Cadet Corps, with senior, junior, and girls' divisions has also been raised.

The Indian Navy (Royal Indian Navy till 1950) traces its history from the formation in 1612 of the Hon. East India Company's Marine. It consists of the cruiser Delhi (ex Achilles), 6 destroyers including 3 of the Hunt class, 5 frigates, 6 minesweepers and some auxiliary vessels. There are training establishments at Cochin, Vishakapatnam, Jamnagar and Lonavla (Bombay State). The Navy's air station is at Cochin.

The Indian Air Force (Royal Indian Air Force from 1945 to 1950) dates from 1933, when the first flight of the Indian Air Force was formed at Karachi. The first Indian designed and constructed aircraft trainer was introduced in 1953.

EDUCATION

Education is undergoing tremendous expansion in accordance with a plan for post-war development prepared in 1944 by the Central Advisory Board of Education. The second five year plan provides for schooling for 62.7 per cent. of age group 6-11, and 22.5 per cent. of age group 11-14. At present, 82 per cent. of the population are illiterate, and 60 per cent. of children from 6-11 do not attend school. In March, 1951, there were 210,000 primary schools and 21,000 secondary schools. The budget estimates for 1955-56 provided for an expenditure of about Rs. 216.2 million.

An All India Council for technical education has surveyed the needs of the country as a whole and the Central Government, in co-operation with the Provincial Governments, has sent abroad some 1,400 scholars for higher technical training and research. Reorganization of 54 existing technical institutions and the establishment of 160 others are contemplated in the provincial 5-year plans. Special provision is being made for the training of high-grade engineers and technologists (designers, planners, research workers and production experts), and the Government proposes to establish central higher technological institutes, at or near Calcutta and Bombay, each with facilities for about 2,000 undergraduates and 1,000 post-graduates. Detailed statistics are not yet available.

There are thirty Universities in India, including those at Calcutta (founded in 1857), Madras (1857), Bombay (1857), Patna (1917), Lucknow (1921), Delhi (1922), Nagpur (1923), Andhra (1926), Agra (1927), Utkal (1943), Annamalai (1929) and Allahabad, in addition to the Hindu University at Banaras founded in 1926 and the Moslem University at Aligarh (1926). Thomson College at Roorkee was raised to the status of an Engineering University in 1948.

LANGUAGE

In Sept. 1949 the Constituent Assembly decided that the official language should be Hindi, written in the Devanagari script, and that the international form of the Indian numerals should be used officially. For 15 years, however, English should continue to be used for all official purposes. In East Punjab the official language is to be Punjabi in the Gurmukhi script. The following 14 languages are recognized: Assamese, Bengali, Gujarati, Hindi, Kannada, Kashmiri, Malayalam, Marathi, Oriya, Punjabi, Sanskrit, Tamil, Telugu, Urdu.

NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS

The number of newspapers and periodicals published on Jan. 1, 1953 were—English 1,226, Hindi 1,748, Gujarati 302, Urdu 837, Bengali 759, Tamil 501, Oriya 63, Sindhi 53, Malayalam 164, Assamese 66, Kannada 189, Punjabi (Gurmukhi) 104, Marathi 331, Telugu 327, Sanskrit 10, bi-lingual or multi-lingual 732 and other languages 64.

TRIBAL WELFARE IN INDIA

The tribal population numbers some 28 millions of whom there are 700,000 in Hyderabad. In 1951-52 Rs.17½ mill. for the promotion of their welfare was granted by subsidies to States.

STATES AND ADMINISTRATION OF THE REPUBLIC OF INDIA

MADRAS

Madras (area, 60,362 sq. miles; est. pop. (1951) 35,734,489) was not only the oldest, but the most important of the three original Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal, though it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801. The state has no good natural harbour, but an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense. The state is not naturally fertile, though irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet, and other food-grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, etc., are cultivated. Madras is served by the Southern Railway. About 87 per cent. of the people are Hindus. There are 1,432,761 Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. The languages principally spoken are Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam and Kannada. Madurai (361,781) and Trichinopoly (218,921), famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital. The State of Pudukkottai merged with the State of Madras in 1948.

The Laccadive and Amindivi Islands, 24 islands (10 inhabited), distant 125 miles from the Malabar Coast of Madras in the Arabian Sea, are included in the State of Madras. Population (1951), 21,195.

BOMBAY

The Island of Bombay was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662), and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the present territory was obtained by annexations from the Maharattas and by the lapse of the Satara State. The State of Bombay stretches along the Arabian Sea coast of India from Rajasthan in the north to the States of Madras and Mysore in the south, and in the east it is bounded by the States of Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat, Madhya Pradesh, Hyderabad and Madras. The state contains 111,434 square miles, with an estimated population (1951) of 35,956,150. About 88 per cent. of the people of the State are Hindus, and 9 per cent. Muslims. The Parsis (97,573), who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. Marathi, Gujarati and Kannada are the principal languages. 61.5 per cent. of the population are dependent on agriculture; cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Western Railway running from Bombay to the north, the Central Railway to the north-east and south-east and the Southern Railway running from Poona to the south. Ahmedabad (788,333), Poona (480,982), Sholapur (266,050), Surat (223,182), Baroda (211,407), Kolhapur (136,835) and Hubli (129,609) are the most important cities.

CHIEF CITY, Ψ Bombay. Population, 2,839,279. A "Greater Bombay" plan was promulgated in April, 1950, whereby the City boundaries have been extended from 25 sq. miles to 91 sq. miles, by the incorporation of a number of suburbs and villages, raising the population of the City by about 510,000. Governor, Dr. Harekrishna Mohatab (March 2, 1955)

WEST BENGAL

West Bengal has an area of 30,775 sq. miles and a population (1951 Census) of 24,810,308. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India, but subsequently Bengal Province consisted of part of Bengal proper with Bihar, Orissa and Chota Nagpur. In 1905 the Province was divided but in 1911 it was reunited. This Province of Bengal ceased to exist in 1947 when it was again divided, West Bengal forming part of India and East Bengal part of the Dominion of Pakistan. The state of Cooch Behar was merged with West Bengal on Jan. 1, 1950, and the French settlement of Chandernagore, which came under Indian administration on May 2, 1950, was merged with West Bengal on Oct. 2, 1954.

The chief products are rice, oilseeds, sugar cane, sugar, tobacco, jute, silk, tea and coal. West Bengal is now served by two State Railways, the Eastern Railway and North Eastern Railway. The Eastern Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley.

Howrah (pop. District, 2,982,307; Town, 433,630), the great jute manufacturing centre, adjoins Calcutta.

UTTAR PRADESH

Uttar Pradesh, called the United Provinces until 1949 (formerly the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh) (area, 113,409 sq. miles; est. pop. (1951) 63,215,742), forms the upper part of the great Ganga plain to the W. of Bengal, lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. Under the new Constitution of India, the Province has now become a State in which the former three princely States, Rampur (pop. 543,324), Tehri-Garhwal (pop. 412,047) and Benares (pop. 451,428) have been merged and certain areas of the Vindhya Pradesh and Rajasthan

States have also been absorbed. Agriculture employs 74 per cent. of the population, the chief products being wheat, rice, barley, pulse, tobacco, millet, cotton, sugar, and oilseeds. About 85 per cent. of the population are Hindus and 14.3 per cent. Muslims. Hindi is the chief language. The State is served by the Northern Railway and the North-Eastern Railway. Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (375,665), containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture, the sacred Hindu city of Varanasi (Benares) (355,777), the great manufacturing centre, Kanpur (Cawnpore) (705,383), Lucknow (496,861), Bareilly (208,083), and Allahabad, (332,295).

CHIEF CITY, Lucknow.

PUNJAB

The Punjab, the eastern part of the old Punjab Province, has an area of 37,378 sq. miles and an estimated population (1951) of 12,641,205. Before partition the Punjab had an area of 99,089 sq. miles. It occupied the north-west angle of the great northern plain of India. Its name is derived from the five Rivers (Beas, Ravi, Sutlej, Jhelum and Indus) which descend from the Himalayas, traverse the plain, and unite in the Indus. It is mainly an agricultural area, and owing to the scanty rainfall depends largely for its harvests on irrigation canals, which will, on the completion of the Bhakra-Nangal project, be greatly extended. The Punjab State has two houses of legislature, the Legislative Assembly and the Legislative Council. Hindi and Punjabi are the principal languages.

The chief crops are wheat, millet, rice, oilseeds, cotton, sugar cane and gram.

BIHAR

This state has an area of 70,330 sq. miles and an estimated population (1951) of 40,225,947. It comprises Bihar and Chota-Nagpur. Bihar is liable to extreme temperatures. The population is exceedingly dense, being 572 to the square mile in 1951. The highlands of Chota-Nagpur are thinly peopled and contain a large aboriginal population. The Patna High Court came into existence on March 1, 1916. Rice, wheat, oilseeds, sugar and tobacco are cultivated, 85 per cent. of the people are Hindus. There is a variety of languages, that spoken by the majority of the population being Hindi. The railway systems are the Eastern and North Eastern Railways. The States of Serakella and Kharswan were merged with the Province in 1948.

MADHYA PRADESH

Madhya Pradesh, formerly the Central Provinces and Berar, has a total area of 130,272 sq. miles with an estimated population (1951) of 21,247,533 (area, Central Provinces alone, 112,666 sq. miles, pop. 17,463,229). The Central Provinces were formed in 1861 out of territory taken from the North-West Provinces and Madras, but originally belonging to the Maharashtra Kingdom of Nagpur. A small part of the Province was transferred to the new Province of Orissa on April 1, 1936. The country, hilly and forest-clad, contains a large population of aboriginal tribes. The people are mostly Hindus, and they speak mainly Western Hindi and Marathi. The province, which is served by the Central and Eastern Railways, possesses coal and manganese ore, and produces rice, wheat, millet, pulse, oilseeds and cotton. There are cotton mills at Nagpur.

In October, 1902, BERAR was amalgamated with the Central Provinces. Berar (area, 17,806 sq. miles; pop. 3,784,304), which lies to the north of Hyderabad, was placed in British hands by the Nizam in 1853, in payment of arrears, and its revenues were charged with the future cost of the Hyderabad Contingent (which was in 1903 incorporated in the Indian Army). In 1902 Berar was leased in perpetuity to the Government of India on payment of £167,000 a year to the Nizam. Berar is purely agricultural. It is very fertile, and yields cotton, millet, oilseeds, &c. The chief language is Marathi, and most of the people are Hindus.

ASSAM

Assam, which has an area of 85,012 sq. miles; pop. 9,043,707 (1951 census) (after the exclusion of Sylhet), was constituted a separate administration in 1874 out of certain Bengal districts, most of which had been ceded by Burma in 1825. It was combined in 1905 with part of Bengal to form a new province, Eastern Bengal and Assam, but again became a separate administration in 1912. By the terms of the Indian Independence Act, 1947, the district of Sylhet was detached from Assam and amalgamated with East Bengal (Pakistan). A range of mountains divides Assam into the Surma and Brahmaputra valleys, of which the chief towns are Silchar and Gauhati respectively. The people are mainly Hindus, Moslems and Tribals, and the chief languages are Assamese (4,972,493 persons) and Bengali (1,719,155 persons). The North-Eastern railway serves the state. Tea, petroleum, coal, timber, jute and rice are the principal products, Assam contains 1,069,493 persons who were born outside the state, chiefly coolies for tea-gardens, and 274,455 displaced persons, mostly from East Bengal.

(1951) 14,645,946, constituted a Governor's Province on April 1, 1936, comprises the Orissa Division, transferred from the Province of Bihar and Orissa, areas transferred from the Presidency of Madras, and certain areas transferred from the Central Provinces. 24 States were merged with Orissa in 1948 and 1949. Practically the whole of the population is Hindu. It is an agricultural State with few towns. A dam across the Mahanadi river at Hirakud is under construction. The Oriyas, the inhabitants of Orissa, trace their traditions far back to the Mahabharat (about 1,000 B.C.). The great Hindu temple of Sree Jagannath (Juggernaut) is at Puri (pop. 78,382). HIMACHAL PRADESH

The State of Himachal Pradesh, formed in April, 1948 (area 10,904 sq. miles, population, 1951 Census, 1,109,466), consists of 22 former Punjab Hill States and their 9 tributaries. The transfer of these territories to the Republic has consolidated into a sizeable administrative unit a large number of small states inherently incapable of surviving as separate "viable" units. Bilaspur was merged into the State on July 1, 1954. The State is divided into five administrative districts, Mahasu, Sirmur, Mandi, Chamba and Bilaspur. The State Assembly has 41 elected members. Capital, Simla.

Lieut.-Governor, Shri Bajrang Bahadur Singh.
Ministers, Dr. Y. S. Parmar (Chief Minister); Pandit Padam Dev; Shri Gauri Prasad.

AJMER

The State of Ajmer (area 2,417 sq. miles; pop. est. (1951) 698,372) lies within Rajasthan. The Chief Commissioner is the head of the State with a Council of Ministers. There is a legislature of 30 members. There is a separate Judicial Commissioner, whose Court is the highest Court of the State. 78 per cent. of the people are Hindus. Rajasthani and Hindi are the chief languages.

CHIEF CITY, Ajmer. Population, 196,633.

Chief Commissioner, M. K. Kirpalani.

Ministers, H. B. Upadhyaya; B. K. Kaul; B. M. Sharma.

CQORG

This State came under British control in 1834, and in 1881 the resident in Mysore became Chief Commissioner of Coorg until July 1, 1940, when a separate Chief Commissioner was appointed. Coorg has a Legislative Assembly of 24 members and a Ministry consisting of two Ministers. The area of the State is 1,586 sq. miles, with a population (1951) of 229,405. Kannada (with Kodagu dialect in some parts) is the chief language. Paddy and coffee are the principal crops.

CHIEF CITY, Mercara. Population, 10,116.

Chief Commissioner.—T. G. N. Ayyar.

Ministers, C. M. Poonacha (Chief Minister); K. M. Mallappa.

DELHI

This State (area 578 sq. miles; est. pop. (1951) 1,744,072) was constituted on October 1, 1912, out of the Punjab division of Delhi, in pursuance of the policy announced at the Delhi Durbar in December, 1911, to move the capital of India and its seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi. On April 1, 1955, certain other territory, previously included in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, was added to the State.

CHIEF CITY, Delhi. Population, 1,008,085.

Chief Commissioner.—A. D. Pandit.

Ministers, S. Gurmukh Nihal Singh (Chief Minister); Brahm Perkash; Dr. Yudhvir Singh.

ANDAMANS AND NICOBARS

The Andamans and Nicobars (area 3,215 sq. miles; pop. in 1951, 30,971) form a chain of islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. Five large islands closely grouped together form the Great Andamans, and to the south is the island of Little Andaman. Port Blair, in South Andaman, was used as an Indian penal settlement from 1858 to 1942. The group, densely wooded, contains many valuable trees, both hardwood and softwood. Coconut, coffee and rubber are other sources of income.

The islands possess a number of harbours and safe anchorages, notably Port Blair, Elphinstone, Mayabundar, Port Cornwallis and Nancowrie.

The Andaman Islands are administered by the President acting through a Chief Commissioner and an Advisory Council of 5 Members.

The Nicobar Islands, almost due south of the Andamans, were first occupied by the British in 1869. They comprise 19 islands, 7 uninhabited (area 635 sq. miles). The principal product is coconuts.

CHIEF CITY, Port Blair. Population, 8,024.

Chief Commissioner.—C. Ramachandran.

UNIONS

Six Unions (Saurashtra, Vidhya Pradesh, Greater Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat, Patiala and E. Punjab and Travancore-Cochin) have been formed as a result of mergers of States. In Dec. 1949, it was announced that from Jan. 1, 1950, Vidhya Pradesh would be taken over by the Central Government, and administered centrally with a Chief Commissioner in the Province.

SIKKIM

It was announced in Delhi on June 7, 1949, that the administration of the State of Sikkim had been taken over temporarily by the Government of India's political officer at the request of the Maharaja of Sikkim. A threat to law and order within the State had been caused by a disagreement between the Maharaja and the Congress Party.

HYDERABAD STATE

Hyderabad, area 82,698 sq. miles, population (Census of 1951), 18,055,108, forms a polygonal tract occupying almost the centre of the Deccan plateau. The country is an extensive plateau with an average elevation of about 1,250 feet above sea level.

The Legislative Assembly consists of 175 members. There is a High Court of Judicature.

The number of public education institutions in 1955-1956 was 14,008. The Osmania University was founded in 1918, and its charter was revised in 1947 and 1950. It has 18 constituent and 13 affiliated colleges. It is completely autonomous, though it is wholly financed by the government. The total estimated expenditure on education for 1956-57 is Rs. 5.46 crores.

The financial year 1956-56 anticipates a revenue deficit of Rs. 429.8 lakhs.

Chief Minister, Dr. B. Ramakrishna Rao.

JAMMU AND KASHMIR

The Kashmir territory, area 82,258 sq. miles, population 4,021,616 (census 1941), of whom some 880,000 are non-Moslems, may be divided physically into two areas, the north-eastern and south-western areas. The dividing line is formed by the great Himalayan chain which runs from the northern boundary of the Chamba State to where Nanga Parbat towers 26,600 feet above the Indus. The smaller, more populous south-western area may be divided geographically into three sections; the region of the outer hills, the middle mountains and the Kashmir Valley. The north-eastern section is comprised between the great central chain on the south and the Karakoram range and its continuation on the north. The chief characteristic of this region is the great altitude of the rivers and plains. The Indus near the Kashmir-Tibet boundary runs at a height of 13,800 feet above sea level.

A 65-mile metalled road, opened in July 1948, gives for the first time direct communication between the Indian Republic and Jammu. Running from Pathankote to Jammu the road is straight for 36 miles and then becomes winding, passing through beautiful mountain slopes and ravines. The new Ravi bridge is 2800 feet long.

Kashmir, previously subject to a series of Buddhist and Hindu dynasties, became part of the Mogul Empire in A.D. 1586, but was afterwards subjugated both by the Afghans and the Sikhs. At the time of the First Sikh War the district was ruled by Gulab Singh, a Dogra Rajput officer who ruled as a feudatory of the Maharajah of the Punjab. After the victory of the British Forces in 1846, the possession of Kashmir was confirmed to Gulab Singh by treaty. The State is celebrated for its woollen and silk hand-made products.

After the passing of the Indian Independence Act, an interim Government was formed and Sheikh Abdullah, leader of the Nationalist Conference, was installed as Premier. The Maharajah's decision to accede to the Republic of India was provisionally accepted and the Government of India stated it was their intention to arrange a plebiscite to decide the issue when peace was restored. In December, 1947, the Government of India, alleging armed intervention in the State by the neighbouring Dominion of Pakistan, referred the dispute to the Security Council of the United Nations. The Security Council set up a Kashmir Commission, and at a joint meeting at Karachi on July 26, 1949, between the Truce Sub-Committee of the Commission and Indian and Pakistani representatives, a cease-fire line was agreed. The demarcation of this line was completed by the U.N. Commission on Nov. 3. The Indian Government had, however, in the meanwhile rejected the Commission's suggestion for the appointment of an arbitrator whose decisions should be binding on both sides. In March, 1950, the Security Council appointed Sir Owen Dixon as Mediator, and in April dissolved the Commission. On August 22 Sir Owen stated that he had come to the conclusion that there was no immediate prospect of India and Pakistan composing any of their differences over Kashmir, and there was no purpose in his remaining longer. Capital, Srinagar (pop. 207,787).

ANDHRA

A new State of Andhra was inaugurated on October 1, 1953, consisting of the undisputed Telugu-speaking areas of the Madras State, with Kurnool as capital. Broadly the new State consists of all that territory of the Province of Madras slightly to the north of the city of Madras running west to Mysore.

Andhra has an area of 63,439 square miles with a population of 20,507,801. The approximate revenue is estimated to be Rs. 219,134,800, expenditure on revenue account, Rs. 248,822,600.

Fed by the rivers Godavari, Krishna and Pennar, Andhra has a rich canal system running into 1,078 miles. There are 15,465 miles of roads and 2,215 miles of railways. Acres under cultivation 15,462,712 forests 14,600 sq. miles. Raw materials include antimony, asbestos, barytes, copper, graphite, gypsum, lead and mica.

The Legislature consists of one chamber, i.e. the Legislative Assembly.

Governor, Chandulal Madhavji Trivedi.

Chief Minister, Bezawada Gopala Reddy.

THE FORMER PRINCELY STATES OF INDIA

The Indian States, which numbered about 570, occupied in area approximately two-fifths of the entire Indian peninsula and contained over one-fifth of the whole population of the country. They displayed a very wide diversity in size, population and resources. They were not British territory and the suzerainty of King George VI. lapsed at the passing of the Indian Independence Act, 1947. Their inhabitants were not British subjects. The States were governed by hereditary Rulers and had no relations with foreign powers. A common characteristic of all Indian States, important or insignificant, was that in their territory British Indian law did not run. For them the Indian Legislature, or the Provincial Legislature could not legislate; and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces had no jurisdiction.

The former Indian States had a combined area of 775,964 square miles, and a population of 93,189,233. They maintained in the aggregate a considerable body of troops of inferior military organization in addition to their Indian State forces. Many treaties provided that States should furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of Indian States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century. Lord

Curzon inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles. The States varied greatly in size and importance. Hyderabad is nearly as large as Great Britain. In Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom led to minute sub-division, there were many chiefs of single villages. In these petty estates the nominal chief may have had some very limited magisterial powers. The majority represented the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Mogul Empire in the 18th century. The rulers of the former Indian States of Gwalior, Indore, and the State of Baroda were all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power. Most of these States were of more recent origin than the British power in India. A unique step was taken in 1910, when a new Indian State was created out of the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares.

In 1950 there were 8 States recognized as viable units (i.e. States with a population of about 1,000,000 persons entitled to return their own representatives to the Constituent Assembly), under constitutional Princely Rulers, viz., Hyderabad, Mysore, Jammu and Kashmir, Travancore-Cochin, Saurashtra, Madhya Bharat, Rajasthan and Patiala and East Punjab States Union.

Pakistan

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan consists of two geographical units of West Pakistan and East Pakistan situated respectively to the north-west and north-east of the Republic of India and separated by about 1,200 miles of the Indian territory.

AREA AND POPULATION

Province	Area (English sq. miles)	Population (000's)

* The density of East Pakistan has been calculated excluding the larger river areas amounting to 360 sq. miles.

† Excluding Jammu and Kashmir, Gilgit and Baltistan, Junagadh and Manavadar.

AREA AND POPULATION.—The total population of Pakistan (1951 Census) is 75,842,000, of which 85.9 per cent. are Muslims. Its area is approximately 364,737 square miles.

FLAG.—The National Flag of Pakistan is dark green, with white vertical part at the mast, the green portion bearing a white crescent in the centre and a five-pointed heraldic star.

GOVERNMENT

Pakistan was constituted as a Dominion under the Indian Independence Act, 1947, which received the Royal Assent on July 18, 1947.

In terms of the Act the Dominion of Pakistan consists of former territories of British India, as shown in the above table. The Punjab States of Bahawalpur and Khairpur, with a Muslim population of almost 80 per cent. and with Muslim rulers, acceded to Pakistan in October, 1947. Boundaries of the Provinces of East Bengal and of Punjab (West Punjab) have been defined by a Boundary Commission presided over by Sir Cyril Radcliffe, K.B.E., Q.C. (now Lord Radcliffe). The following States have also acceded to Pakistan: the Baluchistan States of Kalat, Mekran, Las Bela and Kharan, and the North-West Frontier States of Amb, Chitral, Dir and Swat. The States of Junagadh and Manavadar which had acceded to Pakistan, were occupied by India on November 8, 1947.

The Constitution of Pakistan was passed on February 29, 1956. Pakistan became a Federal Republic on March 23, 1956, when the provisions of the Constitution came into force. The National Assembly consists of 320 members with full powers of legislation in all federal subjects, including money bills. The President is elected by the members of the National and Provincial Assemblies.

Chief Justice, Hon. Mohammad Munir.
 Judges, Mohammad Shahabuddin; A. R. Cornelius; Mohammad Sharif; Amiruddin Ahmad.

DEFENCE

Army—8 Infantry Regiments, 6 Armoured Corps units, 8½ Artillery Regiments and 34 Engineer units. Most infantry regiments of the Indian Army with a Moslem majority were allotted to Pakistan. In March, 1950, it was announced that the Government had decided to introduce legislation to establish a Territorial Army.

Navy—The Navy consists of a sloop, a frigates, 4 minesweepers, a trawler, a motor minesweepers and 4 harbour defence launches. A modern British destroyer, the Onslow, was transferred to the Pakistan Navy in 1949, and it was announced that her sister ship, the Offa, would be transferred later.

EDUCATION

The latest census (1951) shows that 18.9 per cent. of the total population of Pakistan (i.e. 13,958,000 persons) is literate. Both the Central and Provincial Governments have embarked on ambitious programmes to remove illiteracy. A six-year (1951-57) national plan of educational development was drawn up to achieve an integrated and balanced development of education at all stages. The estimated cost of the plan, which was divided into two phases (1951-53 and 1953-57), is about Rs.1,150,000,000.

Apart from the three Universities of Dacca, Punjab and Sind, which were inherited at the time of partition, three more, at Peshawar, Karachi and Rajshahi (in East Pakistan), have been established. The Punjab University, founded in 1882, is mainly an affiliating University, but also provides for post-graduate teaching and research in a few subjects.

The University of Dacca, East Pakistan, was established in 1921 as an unitary residential university, but had to assume, on partition, the additional functions of an affiliating University for colleges in East Bengal.

The University of Sind, created in 1947 and removed from Karachi to Hyderabad, in May 1952, is an affiliating and examining University. Peshawar University was founded in 1950. It is a teaching, residential and affiliating University. The Federal University of Karachi was established in 1951. It is intended to develop it into an unitary residential university with all the colleges in Karachi as its constituent members and a number of halls of residence under its control and supervision. The Rajshahi University was established in East Pakistan in 1953, and is a teaching and affiliating University.

The total number of educational institutions in Pakistan in 1954 was: Primary Schools, 42,474; Secondary Schools, 5,118; Colleges, 169; Universities, 6; Teacher's Training Institutes, 134; Technical and Industrial Institutes, 220; Commercial Institutes, 22; and Institutions for the Handicapped, 10.

LANGUAGE

Urdu and Bengali are the two main languages of Pakistan.

IRRIGATION

Pakistan has one of the longest irrigation systems in the world. The total area irrigated is about 22,000,000 acres.

PRODUCTION

The estimated acreage (000's omitted) of principal crops in 1954-55 was: rice 23,700, wheat 10,661, jowar 1,119, sugar cane 1,017, rape and mustard 1,803, cotton 3,185, jute 1,243, maize 1,068, gram 3,102 and barley 568 acres. The total jute production was 4,662,000 bales of 400 lbs. each.

COMMERCE

The chief exports of the country are raw jute, cotton, tea, raw wool, raw hides and skins, and cotton seeds. Industrial machinery and mill work, metals and ores, chemicals and drugs, mineral oils and hardware, instruments and spare parts are the principal imports. Among exports the value of raw jute from July 1954 to March 1955 amounted to Rs.459,700,000, and that of cotton to Rs.181,800,000. Total exports for the same period amounted to Rs.842,600,000 and imports to Rs.763,800,000.

FINANCE

The Pakistan rupee was revalued on Aug. 1, 1955. New exchange rates are Rs.100 = £13.33 sterling or U.S. $21.

The State Bank, established July 1, 1948, has a capital of Rs.30,000,000, 51 per cent. of which is held by the State. Deposits at all banks in the country in December, 1955 amounted to Rs.1,925,500,000. There are 92 insurance companies operating in the country, of which 17 are Pakistani businesses.

Revenue and Expenditure from 1954-55 to 1956-57 are as follows:—

Revenue: (Actual 1954-55) Rs.1,157.0 million; (Revised Est. 1955-56) Rs.1,276.8 million; (Est. 1956-57) Rs.1,310.2 million.

The chief items of revenue for (1956-57) are: Customs Rs.474.5 million; Central Excise Rs.137.7 million; Income Tax and Corporation Tax Rs.206.6 million; Sales Tax Rs.117.0 million; Salt Rs.22.5 million and Railways Rs.76.8 million.

Expenditure: (Actual 1954-55) Rs.1,150.1 million; (Revised Est. 1955-56) Rs.1,276.2 million; (Est. 1956-57) Rs.1,304.4 million.

The chief items of expenditure for 1956-57 will be: Defence Service Rs.793.5 million; Civil Administration Rs.277.1 million; Debt Services

Rs.100.4 million; Direct Demand on Revenue Rs.33.5 million; Civil Works Rs.28.2 million; Contributions and Miscellaneous adjustments between Central and Provincial Governments Rs.22.7 million.

COMMUNICATIONS

There are 7,047 miles of railway line in the country. Of this total mileage, West Pakistan has 5,344 miles of railway line and East Pakistan has 1,703 miles. The Pakistan railways comprise two independent railway systems—the North Western Railways in West Pakistan and the Eastern Bengal Railway in East Pakistan—managed and owned by the State.

The total road mileage is about 60,000, of which 15 per cent. is high type.

The principal sea ports are Karachi and Chittagong in West and East Pakistan respectively. These two ports handled in 1955-56 about 3,671,000 tons and 1,535,000 tons of traffic respectively. The anchorage of Chalna, established in Dec. 1950, on the river Pussur in East Bengal to relieve congestion of traffic at Chittagong, handled 566,000 tons during 1955-56.

Karachi is the main air port, and being situated on the trunk air routes of the world, holds an important position. Pakistan International Airlines is the chief air transport company in Pakistan.

Post and telegraph facilities are available to every country in the world.

PROVINCES OF THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF PAKISTAN

1. WEST PAKISTAN

The Establishment of West Pakistan Act, 1955, came into force on October 3, 1955, and has incorporated: (1) the former Governors' Provinces of the Punjab, North-West Frontier and Sind; (2) the former Chief Commissioners' Provinces of Baluchistan and Karachi; (3) the States of Bahawalpur and Khairpur and the Baluchistan States Union; (4) the Tribal Areas of Baluchistan, the Punjab and the North-West Frontier and the States of Amb, Chitral, Dir and Swat, into the Province of West Pakistan with effect from October 14, 1955, which has been divided into 10 Commissioners' Divisions and the Federal Capital for administrative purposes.

West Pakistan, with an area* of 310,236 square miles, has a population* of 33,779,000 (of whom 97.1 per cent. are Muslim; 0.5 per cent. Caste Hindu; 1.1 per cent. Scheduled Caste Hindu and 1.3 per cent. Christian). Running through West Pakistan are five great rivers, the Indus, and its tributaries, Jhelum, Chenab, Ravi and Sutlej. The upper reaches of these rivers are in Kashmir and their sources are in the lofty Himalayas.

West Pakistan is one of the richest wheat-producing areas populated by a hardy peasantry with great martial traditions. Of the other crops grown, cotton, rice, gram, jowar and oil-seeds are the most important. There are large deposits of rock salt, which with wheat and other food-grains and cotton form the principal exports. The Province is served by the North-Western Railway.

Chief City and Headquarters of West Pakistan: Lahore (population 800,000).

Governor: M. A. Gurmiani.

* Note: The area and population figures given here include those of the Federal Capital Area of Karachi.

HIGH COURT OF WEST PAKISTAN

Perm. Judges, Sheikh Mohammad Shafi; Abdul Hamid.

2. EAST PAKISTAN

The Province of East Pakistan: area 54,501 sq. miles, estimated pop. 42,063,000 (of whom 76.8 per cent. are Muslim; 10 per cent. Caste Hindu; 12 per cent. Scheduled Caste Hindu; 0.3 per cent. Christian and 0.9 per cent. others), constituted under the Indian Independence Act 1947, comprises the Eastern territories of the partitioned province of Bengal and Sylhet, formerly a district of Assam (excluding certain thanas in the Karimganj sub-division), and the Chittagong Hill Tracts.

The chief crops of East Pakistan are rice, jute, tea and tobacco. The Province is rich in raw materials, but industries are being gradually developed, especially jute, textile and paper mills. The province is served by the Eastern Bengal Railway.

CHIEF CITY (and Headquarters of East Pakistan) Dacca. Population 411,000 (1951 Census).

HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE, Dacca

Chief Justice, Amin Ahmed.

Judges, M. A. Ispahani; Fazle Akbar; Imam Husain Chowdhury; B. Z. Ahmed; Hamoodur Ahmed; Somnath Chakraborti; Syed Mahbub Murshed.

CAPITAL OF PAKISTAN

The Capital and Seat of Government of Pakistan is Karachi, which ranks as a Chief Commissioner's Province. Karachi is situated at the extreme western end of the delta of the Indus, 754 miles by rail from Lahore. It is the maritime terminus of the North Western Railway, the main gateway for the trade of West Pakistan. The population of Karachi at the Census of 1951 was 1,126,417. Chief Commissioner, A. R. Khan.

Ceylon

AREA AND POPULATION

Ceylon is an island in the Indian Ocean, off the southern tip of the peninsula of India and separated from it by a narrow strip of shallow water, the Palk Strait. Situated between 5° 55'–9° 50' N. latitude and 79° 42'–81° 52' E. longitude, it has an area of 25,332 square miles, including 296 square miles of inland water. Its greatest length is from north to south, 270 miles; and its greatest width 140 miles, no point in Ceylon being more than 80 miles from the sea.

At the Census of 1953, the population was 8,103,648, an increase of 21.7 per cent over the last Census in 1946. The following table shows a striking increase in the population of Ceylon since the first Census was taken in 1871.

Races and Religions

The races of Ceylon are low-country Sinhalese, Kandyan Sinhalese, Ceylon Tamils, Indian Tamils, Ceylon Moors, Indian Moors, Burghers and Eurasians, Malays and Veddahs. Generally Sinhalese who trace their descent to a low-country district are classified as low-country Sinhalese, others as Kandyan Sinhalese. The Western and Southern Provinces, the Chilaw District and the Western part of Puttalam District are low-country areas; the Central and North Central Provinces, Uva, Sabaragamuwa, Kurunegala and the Sinhalese divisions of the districts of Batticaloa, Trincomalee and Vavuniya are regarded as Kandyan districts. At the 1953 Census 42.8 per cent of the population were low-country Sinhalese, 26.6 per cent Kandyan Sinhalese. The religion of the great majority of Ceylonese is Buddhism, introduced from India, according to ancient Sinhalese chronicles, in 300 B.C. Next to Buddhism, Hinduism has a large following.

PHYSIOGRAPHY

Ceylon is a compact area, except for the Island of Mannar and an almost detached portion in the north, the Jaffna Peninsula and its satellite islands of Delft, Kayts, etc. The relief of the island includes a mountainous area in the south-central region of 3,000 to 7,000 feet above sea level, surrounded by an upland belt of about 1,000 to 3,000 feet and a narrow coastal plain broadening out to a vast tract in the north. The coastal plain continues for a distance out to sea as a continental shelf and a coral reef, for the most part submerged, lies close to the coast. On the Central Ridge of the hill country are some of the highest peaks in Ceylon, Pidurutalagala (8,291 ft.), Kirigalpotta (7,856 ft.) and Totapola (7,741 ft.) and the high plains Nuwara Eliya (6,700 ft.), Nuwara-Eliya (6,700 ft.) and Haycock (2,167 ft.). The other principal peaks are Adam's Peak (9,945 ft.) and Haycock (2,167 ft.).

The Mahaveli-ganga, 206 miles long, is the largest river of Ceylon. Rising on the western side of the central hilly ridge, it flows north and east to empty into the Koddidiyar Bay on the east coast. Other rivers are the Kelaniganga (90 miles), Aruvi-arū (104), Kala-oya (97), Yam-oya (94) and Deduru-oya (87). Waterfalls girdle the central mountainous massif and offer some of the best scenic features in the island; Dunhinda (Badulla), Diyaluma (Koslanda), Elgin (Haton Plateau) and Perawela are among the outstanding falls. Forests, jungle and scrub cover the greater part of the island, often being intermingled. The forests, of varying species, extend from fairly near the coast right into the hill country. In areas over 2,000 feet above sea level grasslands (patanas or tulawas) are found. Their total area is some 250 square miles, principally in the Province of Uva.

Climate.—The climate of Ceylon is warm throughout the year, with a high relative humidity. Temperatures average 80° F. during the year and few areas record less than 60° F. Humidity is over 75 per cent. Temperature ranges vary little between wet and dry seasons. In hilly areas, frost, mist and hail occur occasionally, but snow is completely absent. Rainfall is generally heavy, with marked regional variations; fall on the south-west slopes of the hill country (20–25 inches) being heaviest. Some cyclonic activity of the tropical variety experienced in the Bay of Bengal occurs, generally during the north-east monsoon period.

GOVERNMENT

Early in the sixteenth century the Portuguese landed in Ceylon and founded settlements, eventually conquering much of the country. Portuguese rule in Ceylon lasted 150 years during which the Roman Catholic religion was established among the Sinhalese inhabitants and to some extent Portuguese modes of living adopted. In 1658, following a twenty-year period of decline, Portuguese rule gave place to that of the Dutch East India Company which was to exploit Ceylon with varying fortunes until 1796.

The Maritime Provinces of Ceylon were ceded by the Dutch to the British on February 16, 1798, becoming a British Crown Colony in 1802 under the terms of the Treaty of Amiens. With the annexation of the Kingdom of Kandy in 1815 all Ceylon came under British rule.

In 1829, a Commission under William Colebrook conducted an investigation into the constitutional and administrative system of Ceylon. It recommended inter alia the unification of the Maritime and Kandyan Provinces and the establishment of nominated Executive and Legislative Councils. These reforms established the early form of representative government which lasted without substantial alteration until 1910. Further changes were effected in 1910 and 1924; introducing the election of members to the Legislative Council and a majority of unofficial members. A commission headed by Lord Soulbury visited the island and in October, 1945, recommended a series of changes which gave Ceylon a large measure of control over her internal affairs. The Soulbury Constitution was, however, short-lived and on February 4, 1948, Ceylon became a self-governing Dominion of the British Commonwealth of Nations under the Ceylon Independence Act, 1947. On February 10, 1948, H.R.H. the Duke of Gloucester opened the new Parliament.

DEFENCE

Army.—The Ceylon Army Act which came into force on October 10, 1949, provides for a Regular Force a Regular Reserve, a Volunteer Force and a Volunteer Reserve. Steady progress has been made in the formation of the Regular Force, the strength of which, on May 15, 1952, was 108 officers and 1,547 men.

Navy.—On December 9, 1950, the Navy Act, 1950, came into force and the Royal Ceylon Navy was constituted. One minesweeper is at present in commission, and there are two shore establishments. The Royal Ceylon Navy is also responsible for the boom defences of Colombo Harbour.

Air Force.—The Ceylon Air Force Act came into force on October 10, 1950, and the Ceylon Air Force was established on that date.

PRODUCTION

Agriculture.—The staple products of the island are agricultural. The most important for home consumption is rice in its two forms of paddy and husked grain. The areas under cultivation in 1955 in acres, were:—Paddy, 1,031,611; tea, 566,394; coconuts, 1,070,942; rubber, 660,985; areca nuts, 78,802; cinnamon, 29,628; citronella, 25,797; tobacco, 10,784; cacao, 28,990. The livestock in 1955 included 1,432,755 cattle, 794,714 buffaloes, 88,883 goats, 491,324 pigs, and 1,568,904 poultry.

Industry.—Plywood and leather factories have been reorganized for increased production with improved techniques. A cement factory has been established, and factories for paper, ceramics, vegetable oils and caustic soda are expected to come into production shortly.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The local government of Ceylon, under the general supervision of the Ministry of Local Government, is in the hands of 7 Municipal Councils (Colombo, Kandy, Galle, Jaffna, Kurunegala, Nuwara Eliya and Negombo), 36 Urban Councils, 36 Town Councils and 400 Village Committees, all members of which are elected. For local government purposes the island is divided into 12 administrative regions, each of which has an Assistant Commissioner of Local Government. Apart from a general duty to promote the welfare of the local inhabitants and develop amenities, local authorities have powers mainly with regard to public health and sanitation, public thoroughfares and public utility services.

EDUCATION

Education in the island underwent a far-reaching change with the introduction on October 1, 1945, of a Scheme of Free Education from the Kindergarten to the University. In 1955, there were 7,011 Government and Assisted schools. The total cost of education was Rs. 143,581,733 for 1954-55. The University of Ceylon was established on July 1, 1942, by the incorporation of the Ceylon Medical College (founded 1870) and the Ceylon University College (founded 1921) into the University. The Ceylon Technical College provides a series of full-time and part-time courses in science, engineering, commerce, arts, etc. The National Museums of Ceylon at Colombo (founded 1877), Kandy, Ratnapura and Jaffna contain valuable collections relating to the natural history and culture of Ceylon. The Colombo Museum Library containing over 60,000 volumes and 3,500 palm leaf MSS. is open to approved research students.

COMMUNICATIONS

There are about 11,190 miles of motorable road in Ceylon, of which 6,339 miles are bitumen surfaced and open to lorry traffic. On Dec. 31, 1954, there were 83,404 motor vehicles on the register (57,797 private cars and cabs, 4,223 omnibuses, 15,356 lorries, vans, etc., 1,725 tractors and trailers, and 9,805 motor cycles).

In 1955, 4,461 ocean-going merchant vessels of a total net register tonnage of 13,014,313 entered the port of Colombo.

There are 1,208 money-order offices and 746 telegraph offices with 12,718 miles of telegraph wire and 21,800 telephones. A commercial wireless telegraph station has a range of 500 miles by day and about 1,000 to 1,500 miles by night and handles ship-to-shore traffic. A beam wireless station provides wireless telephone links to the United Kingdom, Australia, Burma, Japan, Shanghai and Singapore. Programmes are broadcast in the English, Sinhalese and Tamil languages on six wavelengths.

Air Ceylon and K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines jointly operate an international air service from Amsterdam — London — Rome — Karachi — Colombo. Air Ceylon also operates regional services from Colombo to Jaffna, Madras and Tiruchirappalli. Other services are Air India (Colombo-Karachi), B.O.A.C. and Qantas (U.K. — Colombo and Singapore — Colombo) and T.W.A.

CAPITAL OF CEYLON

CAPITAL.— Ψ Colombo (population 424,816). Other centres are Ψ Jaffna (76,664), Ψ Galle (55,825) and Kandy (57,013).

Colombo is distant from London 5,700 miles, transit 17 days; by air 3 days (18 hours by "Comet" jet plane).

Dominions, Colonies and Protectorates

NOTE.—The Dominion of Canada, The Commonwealth of Australia, The Dominion of New Zealand, The Union of South Africa, and the Dominion of Pakistan, the Republic of India and the Dominion of Ceylon are shown separately in the preceding pages.

ADEN

(Aden Colony and Protectorate)

The area of Aden Colony is 75 sq. miles and of the Protectorate about 112,000 sq. miles. The population of the Colony (1955 Census) is 139,600. The estimated population of the Protectorate is about 650,000.

The peninsula of Aden, situated on the southern coast of Arabia and lying on the Red Sea trade-route between Europe and the East, was first occupied by the British in 1839. Aden was always an important centre. Its trade decayed after the Portuguese discovery of the Cape route, but with the opening of the Suez Canal it regained more than its old importance and is now a great oil bunkering and coaling station and port of call, and an emporium for the trade of the adjacent African and Arabian coasts. Aden is a free port. The chief industries are fishing, salt, soap and cigarette manufacture, aluminium pressing of domestic utensils and dyeing and printing of cloth. The traffic in arms and ammunition is subject to special regulations. The British Government has treaty engagements with, and subsidises, the neighbouring Arab tribes, both inland and along the coast, from the Straits of Bab-al-Mandeb to Muscat territory at Ras Darbhat 'Ali.

Perim.—A small unfortified island with an area of 5 square miles was occupied in 1857 and is administratively attached to Aden. The port has been closed since November, 1936, on the withdrawal of the Perim Coal Company from the island. Population, 360.

The Kurra Muria Islands, to the east of the Aden Protectorate, have been a British possession since 1854, when they were ceded to the Crown by the Imam of Muscat.

Kamaran.—The island of Kamaran in the Red Sea about 200 miles north of Perim was taken by the British from the Turks in 1915, and is administered under the control of the Governor of Aden. It has an area of 22 square miles and a population of about 2,200. A quarantine station for pilgrims travelling to Mecca from the East is maintained on the island. Commissioner, Kamaran, Col. R. G. W. E. Alban, O.B.E.

The Aden Protectorate to the West of approximate longitude 46° is bounded on the East by the Qara country, which is part of the dominions of the Sultan of Muscat and Oman, and on the North and West by the Great Desert and the Kingdom of Yemen, whose Southern boundary was temporarily fixed by Article III of the Treaty of San'a (February, 1934) by which His Majesty's Government and the Yemen Government agreed to maintain the status quo frontier as it was on the date of the signing of the treaty. The coastline of the Aden Protectorate, which is about 750 miles long, starts in the West from Husn Murad, opposite the island of Perim, and it runs eastward to Ras Darbhat 'Ali, where it meets the Sultanate of Muscat and Oman.

The Aden Protectorate is divided into two parts, the Western Aden Protectorate and the Eastern Aden Protectorate. The former consists of 19 Sultanates, the chiefs of which are all in protective treaty relations with Her Majesty's Government.

The Eastern Aden Protectorate comprises the Hadhramaut (consisting of the Quaili State of Shihir and Mukalla and the Kathiri State of Seyfun), the Mahri Sultanate of Qishn and Soqatra, the Wahidi Sultanates of Bir Ali and Balhaf, and the Sheikhdoms of Irqa and Haura, all of which are in protective treaty relations with Her Majesty's Government. His Highness the Sultan of Shihir and Mukalla, is the premier chief of the Eastern Aden Protectorate, and the Hadhramaut is the most important and best organised of these areas. It is bounded on the West by the Wahidi Sultanates and on the East by the Mahri Sultanate.

The Mahri Sultanate of Qishn and Soqatra is the most easterly area in the Aden Protectorate, for it is bounded on the East by the Sultanate of Muscat and Oman. The Sultan of Qishn and Soqatra resides on the island of Soqatra (area 1,400 square miles) which lies 150 miles from Cape Guardafui. The island was occupied by the East India Company in 1834 and it came under British protection in 1886 when the treaty with the Mahri Sultan was concluded. It contains about 12,000 inhabitants principally engaged in livestock husbandry.

GOVERNMENT

Aden was for many years administered by the Government of India, and in 1932 it was separated from the Bombay Presidency and formed into a Province under a Chief Commissioner under the direct control of the Government of India. It ceased to be a part of British India on April 1, 1937, and is now a Crown Colony. The Governor has an Executive Council and a Legislative Council was established in 1947. In July, 1955, it was announced that the membership of the Legislative Council would be increased from 16 to 18, that the number of nominated members would be reduced from 8 to 5, and that 4 unofficial seats would be filled by election. This election, the first of its kind in Aden, took place on Dec. 15, and the Legislative Council now consists of the Governor, as President, 4 ex officio members, 5 nominated official members, 5 nominated unofficial members and 4 elected unofficial members. There is a Court of unlimited civil and criminal jurisdiction called the Supreme Court from which appeals lie to the East African Court of Appeal.

The High Commissioner in the Union of South Africa for Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom holds office concurrently as Her Majesty's High Commissioner for Basutoland, the Bechuanaland Protectorate and Swaziland.

BASUTOLAND

(The Territory of Basutoland)

Basutoland is bounded north and west by the Orange Free State, east by Natal and East Griqualand, and south by the Cape Province, with an area of 11,716 square miles and is entirely a native reserve. The Census figures (1946) showed a population of 563,854, of whom 1,689 were European.

There is little prospect of industrial or mineral development in Basutoland, although diamond prospecting operations were recently begun in the northern part of the Territory.

The economy of the Territory is predominantly agrarian.

The biennial livestock census for 1955 gave the following figures:—

Cattle, 408,144; horses, 102,001; mules, 4,829; donkeys, 48,855; sheep, 1,339,019; goats, 654,800.

During 1955, 7,700,701 lb. of wool were exported to the value of £969,005 at the Coast. The total quantity of mohair exported during 1955 was 1,103,000 lb. valued at £322,627 at the Coast.

Education.—In 1955 there were 834 schools in the Territory receiving Government assistance. The total enrolment of all schools was 104,509.

Communications.—There are no railways in Basutoland with the exception of 1 mile of the South African Railways which enters Basutoland at Maseru from the Orange Free State. A main road runs from Butha Buthe in Northern Basutoland to Mophale's Hoek in the South. It connects all the Government Stations with the exception of Qacha's Nek and Mokhotlong. Qacha's Nek is accessible by road from Matatiele in East Griqualand and a jeep service up the Sani Pass to Mokhotlong has recently come into operation. There are airstrips in the Territory at Maseru, Mokhotlong, Sehonghong and Semongkong, and a number of other strips used principally by traders for transporting merchandise to and from their stores, and for the disposal of mail for the mountain areas.

FINANCE

The principal sources of revenue to the Territory are native tax, customs, income tax, and wool export duty. The following table shows the revenue and expenditure for the years 1953-1955:

	1953-54	1954-55
Revenue.....	£1,513,606	£1,477,367
Expenditure.....	£1,406,411	£1,466,783

	1954	1955
Total imports.....	£2,612,007	£3,202,337
Total exports.....	1,954,105	1,796,392

The chief articles of export are wool, mohair, wheat, cattle, hides and sorghum, the imports being chiefly blankets, ploughs, clothing, groceries, hardware and maize.

GOVERNMENT

The Territory is governed by a Resident Commissioner under the direction of the High Commissioner for Basutoland, the Bechuanaland Protectorate and Swaziland. For fiscal and other purposes the country is divided into nine districts. There is an annual session of the Basutoland Council which consists of 99 members, all Africans, 52 being elected by chiefs, four each from nine District Councils, one each from the Basuto Traders' Association, Agricultural Association, Teachers' Association, Ex-Servicemen's Association, Progressive Association and Leper Settlement and five nominated by the Government. The Resident Commissioner is President of this Council. The Basutoland courts of law consist of (a) The Court of Appeal (b) The High Court (c) the Subordinate Courts, including the Courts of Judicial Commissioners and (d) Basuto Courts. Appeals lie to the Privy Council by leave of the Chief Justice of the High Commission Territories who is also President of the Court of Appeal, and has jurisdiction in all cases, both civil and criminal, which arise in the Territory.

BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE

The Bechuanaland Protectorate is bounded on the south and east by the Cape and Transvaal Provinces of the Union, on the north and north-east by Southern Rhodesia, the Zambesi and Chobe (Linyanti) Rivers, and on the west by South-West Africa. It is about 500 miles long and 550 miles broad, with a total area of about 275,000 square miles; the Caprivi Zipfel was attached to the Protectorate for administrative purposes by Proclamation (1922), but was re-transferred to S.-W. Africa, Sept. 1, 1929, and is now administered by the Union government. The population at the census of May, 1946, was 293,964, of whom 2,325 were whites and the remainder natives with a few Indians and coloured.

The climate is healthy during part of the year. Malarial fever is prevalent in some districts during February, March, and April, but with ordinary precautions is not seriously detrimental to health. The country is essentially pastoral, although sorghum, maize, beans, pumpkins and melons are sown. Cattle thrive, and numbered 1,152,494 on Dec. 31, 1955. The population is almost entirely a native one, the principal tribes being those of Mofeti (Bakgata), of Kgari Sechele (Bakwena), of Bathoen (Bangwakete), of Mokgosi (Bamaletse), of Elzabeth Pulane Moremi, Regent during the minority of Letsholathepe Moremi (Batawana), of Kgosi Matlala (Batiokwa) and of Kebalepile (Barolong). The chieftainship of the largest tribe, the Bamangwato, is at present in abeyance.

Schemes for improvements in agriculture, medical services, education and communications, and schemes for combating soil erosion, investigating mineral resources, improving water supplies, irrigation dams, tribal granaries, roads and for improving living conditions are being carried out.

On Dec. 31, 1955, there were 9 European and 146 African schools with enrolments of 290 and 19,971. Estimated expenditure on education in the calendar year 1955 was £139,000.

The railway from Kimberley to Vryburg and Mafeking traverses the Protectorate on its way to the Rhodesias. There is a telegraph line from Cape Province through from Mafeking, via Gaberones and Francistown to Bulawayo and Salisbury. The chief European centres are Lobatsi, Gaberones, Francistown, and Serowe.

SWAZILAND

(The Swaziland Protectorate)

Swaziland (called by the natives Ka Ngwane) lies between the Drakensberg and Lubombo Mountains in South Africa. The Transvaal Province forms a boundary on the south, west and north, the eastern boundary being Tongaland (Province of Natal) and Portuguese East Africa. The total area is 6,705 square miles, and the population (census figures, 1946) 185,215, of whom 181,269 are Bantu, 3,204 Europeans and 745 Euraficans. Swaziland is divisible into three longitudinal regions: the mountainous regions of the west, with an approximate altitude exceeding 4,000 feet; the Middle Veld, about 2,000 feet lower; and the Low Veld, bounded on the east by the Lubombo Mountains, with an average altitude not exceeding 1,000 feet. The country is well watered and healthy, the annual rainfall averaging 45 inches, the mean temperature being 64° Fahr. (50°-78°). The soil is generally fertile, particularly so in the Low and Middle Veld. The whole of the Territory forms excellent grazing for cattle, and cattle-ranching is carried on by several companies. There were about 431,350 head of cattle in the Territory at the end of 1955.

The agricultural products are maize (the staple product), cotton, tobacco, millet, ground-nuts, tung-nuts, avocado pears, beans, pumpkins, bananas, rice and sweet potatoes. An important forestry industry is being developed. Citrus fruits do well, but owing to lack of transport facilities are not extensively grown. The country possesses considerable mineral wealth, including gold, tin, coal, iron, copper and asbestos; asbestos is being produced at the Havelock mine in large quantities and the tin production of the Territory is also of considerable importance. The chief exports in 1955 in order of value were asbestos, cattle seed cotton, rice, butter, hides and skins, wattle bark, tung oil, tin, tobacco and groundnuts.

In 1955 there were 8 European schools (6 maintained by the Government) with 913 pupils. African education is still largely in the hands of various church missions, many of which receive support from the Government. Apart from 205 schools falling under the direct superintendence of the Missions, there are 3 National schools financed by the Swazi National Treasury, 19 Government-controlled central schools and a number of small tribal schools, the total enrolment during 1955 being 21,563. Eurafican children have 3 Mission schools (355 pupils).

There is a daily South African Railway motor omnibus service between Breyten and Mbabane (89 miles); Mbabane and Bremersdorp (27 miles); Bremersdorp and Stegi (43 miles); Bremersdorp and Balegane (42 miles); Bremersdorp and Piet Retief (72 miles); Piet Retief and Hlatikulu (57 miles); Goedegegun and Hluti (33 miles) and Hluti and Gollei (26 miles). There are post offices and telegraph and telephone offices at all the chief centres.

Mbabane (European population, 925), the headquarters of the Administration, is situated on the hills at an altitude of 4,000 feet. There are townships in the districts at Bremersdorp (European population, 950), Hlatikulu, Stegi, Goedegegun, Emlembe, Pigg's Peak and Mankajana.

BERMUDA

The Bermudas, or Somers Islands, are a cluster of about 100 small islands (about 20 only of which are inhabited) situated in the west of the Atlantic Ocean, in 32° 15' N. lat. and 64° 51' W. long., the nearest point of the mainland being Cape Hatteras in North Carolina, about 570 miles distant. The total area is now approximately 20.58 sq. miles which includes 2.83 sq. miles leased to, or reclaimed by, the U.S. authorities between 1941 and 1943 under the terms of the 99 year lease. The estimated civil population (1955) was 41,160 (15,545 white and 25,615 coloured). The colony derives its name from Juan de Bermudez, a Spaniard, who sighted it in 1515, but no settlement was made until 1609 when Sir George Somers, who was shipwrecked here on his way to Virginia, colonized the islands.

Vegetation is prolific, the principal trees being the Bermuda cedar (juniper), formerly of great importance for shipbuilding, but since 1943 almost entirely destroyed by blight. At one time the islands enjoyed a flourishing export in onions, potatoes, and green vegetables, but the imposition of tariffs in U.S.A. made further growing for export unprofitable. The lily bud and bulb trade with Canada and U.S.A. and locally manufactured concentrates and pharmaceuticals are now the Colony's leading exports. Little food is produced except vegetables and fish, other foodstuffs being imported.

The Colony's economic structure is based on its importance as a tourist resort, and from this source most of its revenue is derived. It is now within three hours' air travel from New York, and in 1955 2,785 planes landed a total of 120,972 passengers. The island landing grounds are used by B.O.A.C., Pan-American Airways, Trans-Canada, Colonial and other Air Lines.

Education cost £303,650 in 1955. Free elementary education was introduced in May, 1949. In secondary schools, fees may reach £45 per annum.

There is a broadcasting service, and overseas telephone and telegraph services are maintained. The use of motor cars was banned in the island from 1908 until 1946.

The Government is administered by a Governor, who is advised by an Executive Council of 7 members, appointed by the Crown. There is also a Legislative Council, composed of 11 members appointed by the Crown; and a representative House of Assembly consisting of 16 members who are elected every five years. The franchise was extended to women in 1944, but is restricted in all cases to owners of freehold property not less than £60 in value.

BRITISH BORNEO

(See MALAYA)

BRITISH GUIANA

Area and Population.—British Guiana, which includes the Counties of Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, is situated on the north-east coast of South America and has a total area of 83,000 square miles with a seaboard of more than 500 miles. The population at December 31, 1955, was estimated at 492,950. There are about 19,370 aboriginal Indians, more than 6,000 of whom live in their primitive state in the remote parts of the Colony, occupied in fishing, hunting and raising crops of cassava. The colony is bounded on the south by Brazil, on the east by Surinam, on the west by Venezuela, and on the north and N.E. by the Atlantic. The coastland is very like the Netherlands, below the level of the sea, and intersected with canals constructed by its former Dutch owners. At the junction of the British Guiana-Venezuela-Brazil boundaries is Mt. Roraima, a flat topped mountain 9,100 feet above sea-level. There are many beautiful waterfalls in British Guiana: on the Potaro River (a tributary of the Essequibo) is the Kaieteur Fall, with a clear drop of 741 feet and a total fall of 822 feet, and on the Essequibo, the Horse Shoe Falls (discovered in 1934); a fall, with a drop of some 500 feet, discovered in 1934 on the Ipobe River, a tributary of the Kurubrong, has been named the Marina Fall, and other falls were discovered in 1938 on the Karanang River, 20 miles north-east of Mt. Roraima. The seasons are divided into dry and wet, the two dry seasons lasting from the middle of February to the end of April, and from the middle of August to the end of November. The climate on the coast, for the greater part of the year, is pleasant and healthy. In the Aug.-Oct. period it is hot. The mean temperature is 80.3°, its extremes during 86 years ranging between 68° and 96°, but these are very rare, the usual extremes being 70° and 90°. In the interior the mean temperature is higher—82.6°, its extremes ranging from 66° to 103°. The yearly rainfall is subject to marked variation, its mean on the coast lands averaging about 90 inches with an average of 58 inches on the savannahs. The daily average sunshine is a little over 6 hours, and, except when rain is falling, dull and cloudy weather is rarely experienced.

Production, etc.—Much of the country is forest. The cultivated portion (about 271,000 acres, of which 81,900 are under sugar-cane and 139,500 in rice) is confined to the sea coast and to a short distance from the rivers. There are extensive deposits of gold, diamonds, manganese, bauxite and mica.

Communications.—There are 55 telegraph offices including 6 radiotelegraph offices, with 317 conductor miles of telegraph lines. There are 223 route miles of telephone trunk lines, 18.76 route miles of submarine cables, and 8,278 conductor miles of telephone lines in the main telephone areas. A radiotelephone service is operated with 74 government and private stations in the interior. There are 130 post offices and postal agencies. There is one broadcasting station which is operated on a commercial basis by private enterprise. There are 95 miles of railway, while the British Guiana Airways (a government company) provides internal air-services.

Defence.—Facilities for the establishment of a base on the Demerara River, 25 miles from the sea and within 50 miles of Georgetown, were granted to the Government of the United States of America by the Anglo-American Agreement, Sept. 2, 1940, but in August, 1949, this base was taken over by the British Guiana Government for use as a commercial airfield.

Education.—There are 301 primary schools in the colony, with an enrolment of 95,285, 4 Government-aided grammar schools with an enrolment of 1,635, 2 vocational schools and a technical institute with a combined enrolment of 1,433, and several private secondary schools with an approximate enrolment of 4,950.

GOVERNMENT

The new Constitution, effected by the Order of the Queen in Council dated April 1, 1953, was proclaimed in British Guiana on April 8, 1953.

On October 9, 1953, it was announced that Her Majesty's Government had decided that the Constitution of British Guiana must be suspended to prevent Communist subversion of the Government and a dangerous crisis both in public order and in economic affairs. Armed forces were landed to prevent public disorder.

The British Guiana (Constitution) (Temporary Provisions) Order in Council, 1953, provided for a wholly nominated Legislative Council, consisting of 27 members, including the three officials, under a Speaker, with an Executive Council of 10 members, all of whom are members of the Legislative Council. The Governor presides over the Executive Council and is ordinarily obliged to consult it, but may act in opposition to its advice. An independent Commission which visited British Guiana in 1954 recommended that the temporary provisions should remain in force until 1958.

BRITISH HONDURAS

British Honduras, in Central America, lies within 18° 29' 5" to 15° 53' 55" N. latitude and 89° 0' 22" to 88° 10' W. longitude. Its extreme length and breadth are approximately 174 m. and 68 m. respectively; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Mexico (Quintana Roo Province, formerly Yucatan); on the west and south by Guatemala; and on the east by the Caribbean Sea. The total area is about 8,867 sq. miles, with a population (Census 1946) of 59,220-28,722 males and 30,498 females—estimated, Dec. 31, 1955 at 80,888. The climate generally is damp and hot, but not unhealthy. The temperature ranges from 59° to 92° F. The average lies between 75° and 80°, but this is considerably tempered by the prevailing sea-breezes. In September, 1955, a hurricane all but destroyed the entire northern part of the colony. Damage was estimated at over $4,000,000. Sixteen lives were lost in the town of Corozal, which was completely destroyed.

The greater part of the country is covered by forest, of which 72 per cent. is high rain forest, 15.5 pine forest and dry savannah, 5.5 wet savannah and mangrove forest, the remaining 7 per cent. being existing or recently abandoned cultivation. The wire grass and sedges of the dry savannahs make very poor pasturage for cattle. The north of the Colony and the southern coastal plain (10 to 12 miles wide) is nearly flat, and near the sea is low and swampy. The central mountain mass has a general altitude of 2,000 to 3,000 feet and 57 per cent. of the area of the Colony is over 1,000 feet in elevation above mean sea-level.

The staple products are obtained from the forests, and include mahogany, cedar, and chicle (the basis of chewing-gum). Agricultural crops that grow readily include sugar cane, coconuts, citrus fruit, plantains, pineapples, mangoes, maize, rice, varieties of beans and peas. Bananas also grow well in certain localities but are subject to Panama Disease. All varieties of citrus fruits flourish, and in particular grape-fruit, of which a very high grade is exported.

In 1955 there were 2 Government, 93 grant-aided and 27 private elementary schools in the Colony, the total enrolment being 16,000. There are also 5 secondary schools with a total enrolment of 1,172 students. The shipping entered and cleared at the port of Belize in 1955 was 604,755 tons.

There are 34 post offices, dealing in 1955 with 1,452,096 articles of mail. There is a radio-telegraph station for external communications at Belize. Air services are scheduled twice weekly to and from Tegucigalpa, Spanish Honduras, via San Pedro Sula, and thrice weekly to Chetumal. A weekly service exists from and to Kingston, Jamaica, direct. There is a twice weekly service from and to New Orleans and another to San Salvador and Guatemala, direct, and a weekly service from and to Miami and Tegucigalpa. A local scheduled air service linking the principal districts was inaugurated in August, 1952. In 1955 there were 3,762 extra-territorial aircraft movements and 4,073 departing and 4,056 arriving air passengers.

BRITISH WEST INDIES

Trade Enquiry Office in London, Trade Commissioner for the British West Indies, British Guiana and British Honduras, 31 Kingsway, W.C.2.

The West Indies are a number of islands and islets, some of them mere rocks, situated between 10° to 27° North and 59° 30' to 85° West. The whole archipelago extends in a curve from the Florida Channel (North America) to within 7 miles of the coast of Venezuela (South America), and is divided into three main groups: I. GREATER ANTILLES, which contain the largest islands, Cuba (44,000 sq. miles) and Hispaniola (Haiti and the Dominican Republic) (30,000 sq. miles), Jamaica and Puerto Rico; II. BAHAMAS, which are entirely British; III. LESSER ANTILLES, which are divided among the United Kingdom, France, Netherlands, the United States and Venezuela; the British colonies in the Lesser Antilles are Barbados, Leeward and Windward Islands and Trinidad and Tobago. The total area of the archipelago is nearly 100,000 square miles, of which 72,000 square miles are independent, 12,300 British, 3,800 United States, 1,350 French, 430 Netherlands, and 90 Venezuelan.

The West India Islands that lie nearest the East have been called the Windward Islands; the others the Leeward Islands, on account of the winds blowing generally from the eastern point in those quarters.

CARIBBEAN COMMISSION

Kent House,

Port of Spain, Trinidad, B.W.I.

Co-Chairmen, M. Philippe Grousset (France); Dr. H. R. van Houten (Netherlands); Sir Stephen Luke, K.C.M.G. (Great Britain); R. McIlvaine (U.S.A.).

Secretary-General, E. F. H. de Vriendt.

Deputy Secretary-General, C. F. Beauregard.

Consultant on Industrial Development, J. E. Heesterman.

The Caribbean Commission is an international advisory body of which the four member nations—France, Netherlands, the United Kingdom, and the United States—all have colonies or countries associated with them in the Caribbean area. The Commission is an expansion of the original Anglo-American Caribbean Commission which was set up by the Governments of Great Britain and the United States in 1942 "for the purpose of encouraging and strengthening social and economic co-operation between the U.S.A. and its possessions and bases in the area... and the United Kingdom and the British Colonies in the same area." The two-nation body was expanded into the present organization when the French and Netherlands Governments accepted invitations to join it at the end of 1945, with the stated purpose of "encouraging and strengthening co-operation among themselves and their territories with a view towards improving the economic and social well-being of the peoples of those territories and... of promoting scientific, technological and economic development in the Caribbean area and facilitating the use of resources and concerted treatment of mutual problems, avoiding duplication in the work of existing research agencies, surveying needs, ascertaining what research has been done, facilitating research on a co-operation basis, and recommending further research..." The Commission has two subsidiary bodies—the Caribbean Research Council, which advises the Commission on scientific and technical matters, and the West Indian Conference, a forum attended by the representatives of the peoples of the area, which assembles every two years, and in which matters of common social and economic interest can be discussed. The Commission itself meets approximately once every six months. The most recent meeting, the twenty-second, was held in Cayenne in May, 1956. The Commission issues a monthly magazine, The Caribbean, in French and English, and technical publications and reports. The Commission has also sponsored many technical conferences. The Commission's administrative and executive work is carried on by an international Secretariat with headquarters in Port of Spain, Trinidad.

THE ANGLO-UNITED STATES BASES AGREEMENT

By an exchange of notes (Sept. 2, 1940) between H.M. Ambassador in Washington and the U.S. Secretary of State, facilities were granted to the Government of the United States of America for the establishment, use, and protection of naval and air bases on a lease for 99 years on the eastern side of the Bahamas, the southern coast of Jamaica, the west coast of St. Lucia, the west coast of Trinidad, in the Gulf of Paria, in Antigua and in British Guiana, in exchange for naval and military material.

THE BAHAMAS

The Bahamas (or Lucayos) are an archipelago near the British West Indies, lying between 20° 56'—27° 25' N. lat. and 72° 40'—79° 20' W. long., and extending from the coast of Florida on the north-west to Haiti on the south-east. The group consists of twenty-two inhabited islands, and an immense number of islets and rocks, comprising an area of about 4,403 square miles, and a population estimated (1955) at 98,489, the most part being descendants of liberated Africans. The principal islands are: New Providence (containing the capital, Nassau), Cat Island, Abaco, Grand Bahama, Long Island, Eleuthera, Exuma, Harbour Island, Inagua, Andros Island, San Salvador (at one time known as Watling's Island), Rum Cay, Long Cay, Ragged Island and Bimini. Watling's Island was the first landfall in the New World made (October 12, 1492) by Christopher Columbus, who gave it the name of San Salvador, which has been restored by an Act of the Bahamas Legislature. Originally settled by Englishmen, the Bahamas were, in 1782, surprised by the Spanish, but at the Peace of Versailles were restored to the English. The climate is salubrious, and in the winter Nassau, which is outside the tropics, is frequented by many visitors from all parts of the world.

Industries.—Tomatoes and okra are cultivated in large quantities for shipment to Canada and the United States. Lumbering, salt raking and craw-fishing are the chief national industries.

Education.—Primary education is compulsory. There are 131 state-maintained schools with a total roll of 16,033; there are also 40 denominational schools with a total roll of 3,891. There are one Government and 4 denominational secondary schools.

Civil Aviation.—Facilities for external traffic are provided by Pan-American Airways, B.O.A.C., Trans-Canada Air Lines, British West Indian Airways and Mackey Air Lines, while Bahamas Airways and Skyways, Ltd. provide internal schedule and charter flights to the outlying islands. There are several daily air services between Nassau, Miami, Palm Beach, Fort Lauderdale, Tampa and St. Petersburg (Florida), and a regular service between Nassau and Montego Bay, Jamaica, besides regular trunk communication with London, New York, Toronto, Montreal, Bermuda and Kingston.

Communications.—There are 101 Post Offices which handle 6,419,000 items a year. Wireless and telephone services are in operation to all parts of the world. There are 40 radio stations among the islands.

A Ministerial System of Government was introduced in 1954 with a Premier and four other Ministers, responsible for the executive functions of Government except defence and security, personnel, establishment and external affairs.

aboriginally Xaymaca, or Land of Wood and Water—an island situate in the Caribbean Sea, about 90 miles to the south of Cuba, within $17^{\circ} 42' - 18^{\circ} 32'$ North lat. and $76^{\circ} 11' - 78^{\circ} 23'$ W long.

Jamaica was discovered on May 3, 1494, by Columbus, who called it St. Jago. It was taken possession of by the Spaniards in 1509; but in 1655 a British expedition, sent out by Oliver Cromwell, under Penn and Venables, attacked the island, which capitulated after a trifling resistance. In 1670 it was formally ceded to England by the Treaty of Madrid.

Area and Population.—It is the largest and most valuable of the British West Indian Islands, being 148 miles in length and 49 in extreme breadth, containing an area of 4,411 square miles (with Dependencies 4,706 sq. miles). The island is divided into 3 counties (Surrey, Middlesex and Cornwall) and 14 parishes. The census taken on January 4, 1943, shows a total of 1,237,063 persons resident on the island (598,267 males and 638,796 females). The estimated population in 1955 was 1,553,663.

Physical Features.—From the sea-level on all sides of Jamaica a series of ridges gradually ascends towards the central ranges, dividing the large rivers, and attaining, in the culminating Peak of the Blue Mountains, in the eastern part of the island, an elevation of 7,402 feet. From these mountains at least 70 streams descend to the north and south shores, but none is navigable except the Black River, and that only for small craft.

Communications.—There are several excellent harbours, and the island is intersected by good roads. There are 207 miles of railway open. Telegraph stations and post offices are established in every town and in very many villages. The Palisades Airport at Kingston is used by British West Indian Airways Ltd., British Overseas Airways Corporation, Pan-American Airways, K.L.M., Trans-Canada Air Lines, Avianca and Resort Airlines, which provide air communications with Europe, North and South America and the Caribbean Islands. The Montego Bay Airport is used by Delta, Chicago and Southern Airlines and the above-mentioned Airlines with the exception of K.L.M. A number of non-scheduled airlines operate through the Colony for non-traffic purposes in accordance with the provisions of International Air Services Transit Agreement.

Production and Industry.—Most of the staple products of tropical climates are raised. Sugar and rum are manufactured and exported; the latter is still counted the best in the world, and the coffee raised in certain districts of the Blue Mountains is of fine quality and fetches a high price. There is an extensive trade in fruits, chiefly bananas, with the U.K. Citrus (and juices), cocoa and pimento are important export crops. Jamaica has developed a breed of dairy cattle known as the Jamaica Hope which is being exported to other tropical countries on an increasing scale. Good beef cattle are also raised. The large bauxite deposits are worked by one Canadian and two American companies; the Canadian company processes bauxite into alumina. Gypsum is also mined. Cement is manufactured locally, the present annual output of the plant being 100,000 tons. There is a textile mill and local factories also manufacture garments, shoes, paints, corrugated cardboard containers, and small plastic articles.

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

The Cayman Islands, forming a dependency of Jamaica, between 79° 44' and 81° 26' W. and 19° 15' and 19° 46' N., consist of three islands, Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac, and Little Cayman, with a total area of 100 square miles. Population (1943) 6,670. A Commissioner, assisted by an Assembly of Justices of the Peace and vestrymen, administers the islands. The Caymanians are expert sailors and seafaring is the mainstay of the economy. The only local industries are turtle fishing, rope-making and a little shipbuilding.

The principal town is ΨGeorgetown, in Grand Cayman, population (1943) 1,462.

TURKS AND CAICOS ISLANDS

These West India islands geographically form a sort of annexe of the Bahamas group, from which Government they were separated in 1848. In 1873 they were annexed to Jamaica, from which they are distant about 450 miles. They have an area of about 166 square miles, and a population of about 6,500 of which the principal island, Grand Turk, contains about 1,800. ΨGrand Turk is an important cable station. The islands are celebrated for producing some of the finest salt in the world. Other exports are sisal, crawfish and conches. A considerable number of men are employed overseas in the Bahamas. There is a U.S. Air Force base and a Naval facility at Grand Turk, and a government-owned airstrip at South Caicos, at present used mainly for emergency purposes only.

THE LEEWARD ISLANDS

The Leeward Islands Colony of the British West Indies consists of the 4 presidencies of (1) Antigua, with Barbuda and Redonda; (2) St. Christopher, Nevis and Anguilla; (3) Montserrat; and (4) the British Virgin Islands; all having their own local Legislature. These 4 presidencies are administered by a Governor, to whom the Administrators and Commissioners are subordinate. There is a General Legislative Council of 8 official, 2 nominated and 13 elected members, with the Governor as President. The elected members are elected by the unofficial members of the Presidential Legislatures. The General Legislative Council is empowered to make laws for the Leeward Islands on a number of specific subjects and on those subjects on which the Presidential Legislatures grant it competency. The Presidential Legislatures have concurrent legislative powers with the General Legislative Council on the specified subjects insofar as their Ordinances are not repugnant to the Acts of the General Legislative Council. In Antigua, St. Christopher-Nevis-Anguilla and Montserrat, there is an elected majority in the Legislatures. Certain measures of constitutional reform were introduced in the British Virgin Islands in 1954 as a result of which there is now a majority of elected members on the Presidential Legislature. The estimated population of the colony at Dec. 31, 1954 was 125,651.

(1) ANTIGUA AND BARBUDA

Antigua is the seat of government and residence of the Governor of the Leeward Islands. It lies in 17° 6' N. lat. and 61° 45' W. long., and is nearly 108 square miles in area with a coast line of about 70 miles. Antigua was first settled by the English in 1632, and was granted to Lord Willoughby by Charles II. It is much less hilly and wooded than the other Leeward Islands, and is largely given up to the cultivation of sugar, for which one central sugar factory has been erected. Cotton is now planted on a large scale and the island also exports molasses, tomatoes and rum. The population, with Barbuda (estimated, 1955) was 52,454.

Barbuda, formerly a possession of the Codrington family, is situated 30 miles N. of Antigua, of which it is a dependency, in lat. 17° 35' N., long. 61° 42' W. Area, 62 square miles. Population, 1,000. The island is flat and mostly stony, producing cotton, corn and ground-nuts. Wild deer are found, and there is good tarpon and other fishing. Warden, R. S. Byron (acting) (and quarters), £550 to £650.

(2) ST. KITTS-NEVIS WITH ANGUILLA

The islands of St. Kitts, Nevis, and Anguilla were united in 1882 to form one Presidency, and taken together they have a population (1955) of 54,230, and a total area of about 170 square miles. The climate is decidedly healthy for the tropics, the temperature being from 66° to 88°.

St. Kitts (population 1955, 34,192), the principal island, was the first possession of the British West Indies to be colonized (1633); it is situated in lat. 17° 18' N. and long. 62° 48' W., and comprises an area of 68 square miles, its greatest length being 28 miles, and greatest breadth about 5 miles. It is one of the most effectively cultivated sugar islands in the West Indies, a continuous line of green estates sweeping up all round the coast from the sea towards the central range, which rises to a height of 3,711 feet (Mount Misery). Cotton is also grown to a considerable extent. The capital, Ψ Basseterre, is a port of registry.

Nevis (population 1955, 14,611) is separated from St. Kitts by a strait 3 miles wide and has an area of 50 sq. miles. Cotton and coconuts are exported, and cattle and vegetables are raised. Its greatest elevation is 3,996 feet. The chief town, Ψ Charlestown, is a port of entry.

Anguilla (population 1955, 5,527) is about 60 miles N.W. of St. Kitts, 10 miles in length, and varies in breadth from 1 to 3 miles, containing an area of 35 square miles. There are no hills. Salt is the principal product, and small stock are raised.

is situated in 16° 45' N. lat. and 61° 15' W. long., 27 miles S.W. of Antigua. It is about 11 miles in length and 7 in breadth, comprising an area of 32½ square miles, population (1953) 13,685. Discovered by Columbus in 1493, it was settled by Irishmen, conquered and held by the French for some time, and finally assigned to Great Britain in 1783. It is justly considered one of the most healthy and beautiful of the Antilles; it contains three active souffrières and several hot springs, while the scenery is charmingly diversified. About two-thirds of the island is mountainous, the rest well cultivated. The chief exports are sea island cotton, tomatoes, carrots, onions, limes and lime products. There is a wireless station on the island.

(4) THE BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS

The Virgin Islands are a group of islands at the eastern extremity of the Greater Antilles, divided between Great Britain and the U.S.A. Those of the group which are British number about 36, of which 11 are inhabited, and have a total area of about 67 square miles. The principal are Tortola (the largest, situated in 18° 27' N. lat. and 64° 40' W. long.), Virgin Gorda, Anegada and Jost Van Dykes. The population is approximately 7,600 (1954). Communication is by launch to St. Thomas (Virgin Islands of the U.S.), where there are air, sea and cable services to continental America and the rest of the West Indies. The principal exports are livestock, fish, charcoal, vegetables and fruit, for which the principal market is St. Thomas. Rum is distilled on a small scale.

TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO

Trinidad, the second largest and most southerly of the West Indian Islands, lies close to the north coast of the continent of S. America, the nearest point of Venezuela being 7 miles distant. The island is situated between 10° 2'—10° 50' N. lat. and 60° 55'—61° 56' W. long., and is about 50 miles in length by 37 in breadth, with an area of 1,864 square miles, and a population estimated (June 30, 1955), at 720,450 (including Tobago). The majority are natives of the West Indies of African and East Indian descent. The racial groups at the 1946 census were: African 47 per cent., East Indian 35 per cent., Mixed or Coloured 14 per cent., European 3 per cent., Chinese 1 per cent. The island was discovered by Columbus in 1498, was colonized in 1532 by the Spaniards, capitulated to the British under Abercromby in 1797, and was ceded to Britain under the Treaty of Amiens (March 25, 1802). Two mountain systems, the Northern and Southern Ranges, stretch across almost its entire width and a third, the Central Range, lies somewhat diagonally across its middle portion; otherwise the island is mostly flat. The highest peaks are in the Northern Range (Aripo 3,085 ft., El Tucuche 3,072 ft.). The climate is tropical with temperatures ranging from 70° to 88°F, and a rainfall ranging from 100 inches in the northeast to 50 inches in the west. There is a well-marked dry season from January to May and a wet season from June to December. The nights are invariably cool. The main tourist season is from December to April.

Oil is the principal export. A remarkable phenomenon is the asphalt lake, 114 acres in extent, near the village of La Brea, from which in 1955 136,729 tons of natural asphalt were removed. The soil of Trinidad is rich and productive, the most important products being sugar, molasses, rum, cocoa, coconuts and coconut products, citrus and coffee. Agricultural exports totalled $53,093,160 in 1955.

On December 31, 1955, there were 545 primary schools, 67 being Government, 321 assisted and 157 private, and 15 secondary schools (3 Government and 12 assisted). There were 146,716 pupils attending the primary schools, 6,150 attending the intermediate schools, and 7,235 receiving secondary education. In addition, there is a technical college in San Fernando.

In 1955 the Government of the Colony allocated $9,653,677 for expenditure on medical services for hospitals and clinics, malaria, tuberculosis, dental services, leprosy, hookworm, maternity and infant welfare, nutrition and health education.

There are 108 miles of public railway and 1,891 miles of main roads. There are 168 post offices and postal agencies, 54 of which transact savings bank and money order business. There is an internal telegraph system and a local broadcasting station.

Trinidad is well served by steamship lines and there are deep water wharf facilities at Port of Spain. Ten international scheduled airlines operate to and through Trinidad (Piarco), which acts as a focal point for air traffic between the Americas. There were 13,970 movements of aircraft in 1955. A domestic air service between Trinidad and Tobago is operated by B.W.I.A. Flights in 1955 averaged two per day.

The chief town and port of entry, Plymouth Port of Spain (pop. 117,000), is one of the finest towns in the West Indies, with sewerage, electric lighting, trolley-bus and telephone services. Other towns of importance are San Fernando (pop. 36,700), about 33 miles south of the capital, and Arima (pop. 11,200).

Tobago lies between 11° 8' and 11° 21' N. lat. and between 60° 30' and 60° 50' W. long., about 75 miles south-east of Grenada, 19 miles north-east of Trinidad, and 120 miles S.W. of Barbados. It was ceded to the British Crown in 1814 and amalgamated with Trinidad in 1888. The island is 26 miles long, and 7½ broad, and has an area of 116 square miles, with a population estimated (1955) at 33,550. It is one of the healthiest of the West Indies and a popular tourist resort. The main town is Scarborough (estimated pop. 15,000).

Other Islands.—Corozal Point and Icacos Point, the N.W. and S.W. extremities of Trinidad, enclose the Gulf of Paria, and west of Corozal Point lie several islands, of which Chacachare, Huevos, Monos and Gaspar Grande are the most important. On Chacachacare is a leper settlement, the Medical Superintendent of which appeals for Sunday and weekly editions of British newspapers.

GOVERNMENT

The Colony is administered by a Governor in accordance with the provisions of the Trinidad and Tobago (Constitution) Order in Council, 1950, which provides for Executive and Legislative Councils, on which there are unofficial elected majorities. The Executive Council, which is the chief instrument of policy, consists of the Governor, as chairman, 3 ex officio members, 1 nominated member, and 5 elected members of the Legislative Council. The Legislative Council consists of a Speaker who presides, 3 ex officio members, 5 nominated members and 18 elected members.

GRENADA AND THE GRENADINES

Grenada is situated between the parallels of $12^{\circ} 13' 11''$ N. lat. and $61^{\circ} 20' 61''$ 35' W. long., and is about 21 miles in length and 12 miles in breadth; it is about 96 miles north of Trinidad, 68 miles S.S.W. of St. Vincent, and 100 miles S.W. of Barbados. Area, about 133 square miles; population (including some of the Grenadines), 86,600 (1954). The country is mountainous and very picturesque, and the climate is healthy. Grenada was discovered by Columbus in 1498, and named Conception. It was originally colonized by the French, and was definitely ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Versailles in 1783.

The soil is very fertile, and cocoa, spices, sugar cane, cotton, coconuts, limes and fruit are grown. The imports chiefly comprise dry goods, wheat flour, dried fish, bread-stuffs, hardware, etc.

Ψ St. George's (population approximately 6,000), on the south-west coast, is the chief town, and possesses a good harbour.

The Grenadines are a chain of small islands lying between Grenada and St. Vincent (within which Governments they are included), comprising an area of 8,462 acres. The largest island is Carriacou, attached to the Government of Grenada, pop. (1946), 7,237.

ST. LUCIA.

the second largest and the most picturesque of the Windward group, situated in $13^{\circ} 54'$ N. lat. and $60^{\circ} 50'$ W. long., at a distance of about 90 miles W.N.W. of Barbados, 21 miles N. of St. Vincent, and 24 miles S. of Martinique, is 27 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 14 miles. It comprises an area of 238 square miles with a population (1955) of 88,150. It possesses perhaps the most interesting history of all the smaller islands. Fights raged hotly around it, and it constantly changed hands between the English and the French. It is mountainous, its highest point being 3,145 feet above the sea, and for the most part it is covered with forest and tropical vegetation. The principal exports are sugar, bananas, copra, coconuts, cacao, edible oil, lime oil, fresh fruit and vegetables.

Castries, the capital, is recognized as being one of the finest ports in the West Indies on account of its reputation as a safe anchorage in the hurricane season. The town was greatly damaged by fire in 1948, but the work of reconstruction and rehabilitation has been made possible by a grant from H.M. Government. In 1954, 846 vessels with a total tonnage of 501,471 called at Castries.

an island about 95 miles west of Barbados, situate in $13^{\circ} 10'$ N. lat. and $60^{\circ} 57'$ W. long., is 18 miles in length and 11 in breadth, comprising an area, with its dependencies, of 150 sq. miles, and a population (1955) of 76,800. In 1846, a large number of Portuguese labourers, amounting to 2,400, entered the island, and proved a valuable acquisition. St. Vincent is more thoroughly English than the three other islands of the group. In 1783 it was secured to Great Britain.

The chief products are arrowroot, cotton, copra, coconuts, rum, sugar, bananas, cassava, cocoa ground provisions, and spices. Its chief imports are foodstuffs (including canned and pickled meat, salted and pickled fish, butter, rice and flour), cotton and woollen piece goods, hardware, lumber, iron and steel manufactures, cement and fertilizers.

There were 43 primary schools with 16,871 pupils enrolled in 1955, and a secondary schools with an attendance of 489.

DOMINICA

Dominica, the loftiest of the Lesser Antilles, was transferred from the Leeward to the Windward Group on Jan. 1, 1940. It is situate between $15^{\circ} 20'$ — $15^{\circ} 45'$ N. lat. and $61^{\circ} 13'$ — $61^{\circ} 30'$ W. long., 95 miles S. of Antigua, and is about 29 miles long and 15 broad, comprising an area of 305 sq. miles, or 195,200 acres, of which about 70,000 acres are under cultivation. The island is of volcanic origin and very mountainous and picturesque, abounding in streams fairly well stocked with fish, and the soil is very fertile. The temperature varies, according to the altitude, from 55° to 85° . The climate is healthy, and during the winter months very pleasant. Yellow fever is unknown, and from November to June the island is suitable as a health resort for pulmonary and rheumatic invalids. The exports consist almost entirely of agricultural produce, principally bananas, lime oil, lime juice, oranges, bay oil, cocoa, copra and vanilla. The population was (1954), 61,358. Included in this total are about 400 Caribs, of whom about 40 are of pure blood. The principal towns are Roseau, on the south-west coast, population 12,000, and Portsmouth, population 1,800.

Education.—There are 50 elementary schools, of which 47 are Government and 3 assisted. Of the 4 secondary schools, 3 receive a grant-in-aid and one is maintained by Government.

CYPRUS

Area and Population.—Cyprus is a large island in the Mediterranean Sea, between N. lat. $34^{\circ} 33'$ and $35^{\circ} 41'$, and E. long. $30^{\circ} 21'$ and $30^{\circ} 35'$. It is about 40 miles distant from the nearest point of Asia Minor, and 60 miles from Latakia, on the Syrian coast. The distance to Port Said, at the entrance of the Suez Canal, is 238 miles. The larger part of the island is an irregular parallelogram, 100 miles long and 60 to 30 broad, from which a narrow peninsula, 5 or 6 miles wide, runs out for 40 miles towards the north-east. The area is 3,572 square miles. In 1955 the estimated population was 520,500, of whom nearly 81 per cent, were Greek-Orthodox and 18 per cent, Moslems. In summer it is hot and dry on the plains and humid on the seashore, but the climate of the hills inland is equable and bracing. The winter is mild and invigorating and, except in the mountains, the temperature rarely falls below freezing point. Owing to the eradication of malaria, the intensive efforts to improve rural sanitation, and the establishment of an increasing number of infant welfare clinics, the death rate of the island has been reduced to the low figure of 5.01 per thousand.

Production and Industries.—Agriculture is the industry which provides the greatest employment in Cyprus, the chief agricultural products being:—Cereals, carobs (locust beans), vine products, potatoes, onions, cheese, almonds, citrus and other fresh and dried fruit, tobacco and legumes. Various kinds of livestock are raised, donkeys and mules being the principal exports. The total value of agricultural and livestock exports in 1955 was £5,600,000. By value of product the main industry of Cyprus is mining. The chief mineral extracted is pyrites. Some is exported in the raw state as cupreous pyrites, but most of it is treated. Copper concentrates and cement-copper are extracted for export as such and the residue is exported as iron pyrites. Other minerals are asbestos, chrome ore and concentrates, gypsum and earth colours. The value of minerals exported in 1955 was £10,200,000. In addition to the major industries of agriculture and mining there are many light manufacturing industries, including the following:—beer, aerated and other soft drinks, buttons, artificial teeth, cotton yarn, textiles, footwear, cigarettes, leather and leather goods, lithographed crown corks, soap, gypsum and plasterboard, asbestos, cement tiles, bricks, roofing tiles, macaroni, Turkish delight, caramels, sugared almonds, jams and marmalades, canned fruit and vegetables, carob gum, olive and olive kernel oil, cotton-seed oils, essential oils, furniture, nails, grape juice, animal fodder, perfumery, polishes, pottery and earthenware, baskets, metal containers, motor bodies, ice and brooms. A factory for tyre retreading is also operating in the island.

On Jan. 1, 1956, a Department of Commerce and Industry was formed to take over various functions previously performed by other sections of the Government and to explain Government services to the business community.

Education.—Each religious denomination has its own elementary schools under the general control of the Government. During the school year 1954-55 there were 737 schools (Greek 499; Turkish 224; Armenian 4; Maronite 5; Latin 6; others 9) with a total enrolment of 76,474. Secondary education is for the most part on a similar denominational basis with a total enrolment of 18,992.

Language and Literature.—Modern Greek and Turkish are the languages of the principal communities, English and French being spoken by the educated classes. The use of English is increasing. In 1955 there were 10 daily and 19 other newspapers (3 English, 11 Greek and 5 Turkish) in addition to government publications.

Communications.—Famagusta is the main seaport. There were (December, 1955) 23,473 motor vehicles on the register, including 9,062 private cars and 5,368 motor cycles. In 1955 1,644 steamships (tonnage 2,730,124) and 357 sailing vessels (tonnage 19,442) engaged in the foreign trade, in addition to 47 steamships (tonnage 35,065) and 36 sailing vessels (tonnage 2,003) engaged in the coasting trade, called at Cyprus ports.

Air traffic in Cyprus increased considerably during 1955. Eleven schedule airlines maintained frequent direct services to Adana, Ankara, Athens, Bahrain, Bangkok, Basra, Beirut, Benghazi, Bombay, Cairo, Colombo, Dacca, Damascus, Frankfurt, Haifa, Hong Kong, Istanbul, Jerusalem, Karachi, Kuwait, London, Malta, Rangoon, Rhodes, Rome, Singapore, Tel Aviv, Tokyo, Tripoli (Libya). Twenty-one non-scheduled operators also carried traffic to Cyprus during 1955. Over 118,000 civilian passengers passed through Nicosia airport during the year.

The chief imports in 1955 in order of magnitude were machinery and electrical goods (£5,300,000); metals and metal manufactures (£2,800,000); textile fabrics (£1,800,000); wheat (£1,300,000); ready-made clothing and footwear (£1,200,000); cement; timber; leaf tobacco and cigarettes; fertilizers; edible oils; sugar; tyres; preserved milk; refrigerators; leather; coffee. The chief exports were minerals (£10,200,000); locust bean products (£1,100,000); wheat (£1,100,000); citrus fruit (£1,100,000); vine products; potatoes; wool; tobacco; cheese; plasterboard; canned fruits and juices; hides and skins; cotton; barley; buttons; confectionery; live animals.

The Roman supply of copper was chiefly drawn from Cyprus and was known as aes cyprum (Cyprus brass) which was shortened to cyprum, whence is derived the English word copper.

GOVERNMENT

On June 4, 1878, the Sultan of Turkey "assigned the island of Cyprus to be occupied and administered by England." The island was formally annexed to Great Britain on Nov. 5, 1914, on the outbreak of war with Turkey. From March, 1925, when it became a Crown Colony, until Nov. 1931, the Government was administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive and a Legislative Council, the latter containing 9 official and 15 elected members, but after the disturbances of 1931, the clauses in the Letters Patent of March, 1925, dealing with the constitution of the Legislative Council were revoked, and the island has since been administered by the Governor, assisted by an Executive Council which at present has 4 official and 3 non-official members (two Greek Cypriot and one Turkish Cypriot).

In 1946 a Consultative Assembly drawn from representative elements in the island was called together to consider the framing of proposals for constitutional reform, including the re-establishment of a central Legislature. The efforts of the Consultative Assembly were not successful in bringing about the result which was hoped for, but the offer of constitutional reform has been kept open, a new constitution being offered in July, 1954.

For administrative purposes the island is divided into six districts, in each of which Government is represented by a commissioner. This division also obtains for judicial purposes. The Law Courts comprise a supreme court, 6 assize courts, and 6 district courts. In all these courts, Cypriot judges take part. The family laws of the various communities in the island are expressly saved.

EAST AND WEST AFRICAN HIGH COMMISSIONS, ETC.

EAST AFRICA HIGH COMMISSION

The East Africa High Commission, consisting of the Governors of Kenya, Tanganyika and Uganda, was constituted by the East Africa (High Commission) Order in Council, 1947, and came into operation on January 1, 1948. The Governor of Kenya is the Chairman of the High Commission, and in his absence the High Commission appoints one of its members to be Chairman.

The High Commission administers certain inter-territorial services such as: The East African Directorate of Civil Aviation, the East African Income Tax Department, the East African Posts and Telecommunications Administration, the East African Railways and Harbours Administration, the East African Customs and Excise Department, the East African Meteorological Department, the East African Statistical Department, the East African Literature Bureau, Inter-territorial Research Organizations and services connected with the maintenance of contact between the territories and the Defence Services. These services are grouped for purposes of administration under four Principal Executive Officers to the High Commission: The Administrator, the Commissioner for Transport, the Finance Member and the Postmaster General.

The East Africa Central Legislative Assembly was established by the Order in Council, and by a further Order in Council in 1951 had its life extended until December 31, 1955. It is presided over by a Speaker and consists of seven ex officio members who are officers in the High Commission's service, three nominated official members (one from each Territory) and thirteen unofficial members, one elected by the unofficial members of the Legislative Council of each Territory, one European, one Indian and one African member appointed by the Governor of each Territory (in Kenya the European and Indian members are elected by the European and Indian members respectively of the Legislative Council) and one Arab member appointed by the High Commission.

The High Commission has power to legislate, with the advice and consent of the Assembly, in respect of certain matters of common interest to the three territories, such as Civil Aviation, Customs and Excise, Defence, Income Tax, Inter-territorial Research, Makerere College, Posts and Telegraphs, Meteorological Services, Statistics, Railways, Harbours and Inland Water Transport, etc. It has also power to legislate with the advice and consent of the Legislative Councils of the three Territories on any matter concerned with the peace, order and good government of the territories.

FALKLAND ISLANDS

These, the only considerable group in the South Atlantic, lie about 300 miles east of the Straits of Magellan, between 52° 15'–53° S. lat. and 57° 40'–62° W. long. They consist of East Falkland (area 2,580 sq. miles), West Falkland (2,038 sq. miles) and upwards of 100 small islands in the aggregate, the total population in 1953 being 2,220. Mount Adam, the loftiest peak, rises 2,315 feet above the level of the sea. The Falklands were discovered by Davis in 1592, and visited by Hawkins in 1594. A settlement was made by France in 1764; this was subsequently sold to Spain, but the latter country recognized Great Britain's title to a part at least of the group in 1771. The settlement was destroyed by the Americans in 1831. In 1833 occupation was resumed by the British for the protection of the seal-fisheries, and the islands were permanently colonized as the most southerly organized colony of the British Empire. The climate is cold, the thermometer ranging in winter from 20° to 50°, and in summer from 46° Fahrenheit; it is notably windy. The islands are chiefly moorland. The population is mainly British, and is principally engaged in sheep-farming, to which practically all the land in the colony is devoted, 597,781 sheep being carried in 1955. The chief exports are wool, tallow, hides and sheepskins. The only important settlement is Stanley, on the coast of East Falkland.

CHIEF TOWN, Ψ Stanley. Estimated population (1955), 2,212.

DEPENDENCIES.—South Georgia, an island 800 miles east-south-east of the Falkland Group, with an area of 1,450 square miles. An Administrative Officer and other officials reside there. In the South Shetlands, Deception Island contains the harbour at Port Foster, ice-free for about five months in the year. On the South Orkneys the Argentine Government has, with the permission of H.M. Government, established a meteorological station, in connexion with a discovery that a cold winter in the Weddell Sea is a precursor of drought in the maize and cereal area of Argentina 3½ years later. The other dependencies, of which the principal units are the South Sandwich Islands and Graham's Land (a peninsula of the Antarctic Continent) are even more inhospitable than those already named, being covered with snow and ice and almost completely destitute of plant life. In spite, however, of the climatic and other disadvantages, the revenue derived from all the dependencies in 1954-55 amounted to £300,327 and the expenditure to £308,511. There is a whaling industry in South Georgia. One British, 1 Argentinian and 1 Norwegian company operated during the 1955-56 season, 185,739 barrels of whale oil being exported. Sealing operations yielded 12,068 barrels of seal oil in 1955. A chain of meteorological stations is maintained in the Dependencies.

ψ Stanley, the capital of the Falkland Islands, is distant from England about 8,103 miles; transit by steamer via Montevideo. Telegrams by wireless U.K. direct. The journey from U.K. to Falkland Isles can be accomplished in 8 days travelling to Montevideo by air and thence by local steamer to the Falklands.

FIJI

This is a group of 322 islands (of which only 106 are inhabited) in the South Pacific Ocean, about 1,100 miles north of New Zealand. The gross area of the group, which extends 300 miles from east to west, and 300 north to south, between 15° 45'—21° 10' S. lat. and 176° E.—178° W. long, is 7,083 square miles. Many of the islands are of volcanic origin, with lofty mountains, and well wooded. The principal are Viti Levu, Vanua Levu, Taveuni and Kandavu. The climate is oceanic. Shade temperatures seldom rise above 93°F. or fall below 60° except in the mountains. On the windward sides of the larger islands rainfall is copious and vegetation luxuriant; on the leeward (or dry) sides the vegetation is sparse and scattered. The chief products are coconuts, sugar cane, gold, rice, bananas, pineapples, yams, and dalo or taro (colocasia).

The population (estimated, Dec. 31, 1955) was 345,164 (166,262 Indians, 146,842 Fijians, 7,965 part Europeans, 9,391 Europeans, 5,689 Polynesians, Melanesians and Micronesians, 4,247 Rotumans, 4,183 Chinese and 594 others).

GOVERNMENT

The Governor is appointed by the Crown, and is assisted by an Executive Council. Laws are passed by a Legislative Council (of which the Governor is president) containing 16 official members, 5 European members (3 elected, 2 nominated), 5 Native members (nominated from a panel submitted by the Council of Chiefs) and 5 Indian members (3 elected and 2 nominated).

The executive officer of the native administration is the Secretary for Fijian Affairs, who is responsible to the Governor and, in appropriate matters, to the Legislative Council. The controlling financial authority is the Fijian Affairs Board whose members are the Secretary for Fijian Affairs (Chairman), the five native members of Legislative Council, a legal adviser, and a financial adviser. The Board has power to make regulations affecting the Fijians, but such regulations are subject to approval by the Legislative Council.

CAPITAL. ψ Suva, in the island of Viti Levu.

Population (1955), about 32,000.

Suva is 11,000 miles from London; transit from London, via Auckland, about 30 days; via Vancouver or San Francisco, about 30 days; via Panama, about 30 days; by air, via Canada, U.S.A., or Sydney, about 4 days. Fiji is on the main air route between North America and Australia and New Zealand. It is a base for South Pacific regional air services, covering New Zealand Western Samoa, New Caledonia, Tahiti, Cook and Norfolk Islands.

GAMBIA

The West African river Gambia, which is navigable for some 300 miles from its mouth, was discovered by the Portuguese in 1447; and in 1583, the year of the Spanish Armada, Queen Elizabeth I. being then at war with Spain and Portugal, gave a charter to a British Company to trade with the Gambia, and as early as 1618 an effort to do so was made, but it was not successful. In 1686 a fort was built upon a rocky island, and, in honour of the new King, was named Fort James; but the English merchants had formidable rivals in the Portuguese and French, and it was not until 1783 that the river was recognized, by the Treaty of Versailles, as British. The Colony had no regular political institutions until 1807, when it was put under the Government of Sierra Leone. The Colony of the Gambia was created in 1843, and was constituted a separate government in 1888. It now consists of the Island of St. Mary, British Kombo, Albreda, the Ceded Mile, MacCarthy Island, and various other islands and territories on the banks of the river. The total area is estimated at 4,003 sq. miles. The population of the Island of St. Mary, at the census of 1951 was 27,297, and that of the Protectorate was 260,160 (estimated, 1954, 253,234). The climate is unhealthy during the rainy season, viz., from June to October; but during the rest of the year it is pleasant and generally healthy. The rainfall is extremely variable from year to year, ranging between 30 and 59 inches. Internal communication is by motor vessels and launches; there are no railways. There are 5 Government wireless stations.

Education.—Government expenditure on education amounted to £73,265 in 1954. In 1945 all primary education in Bathurst was taken over by and is now financed by Government, and the schools have been reorganized as follows:—3 Boys', 1 mixed and 2 Girls' primary schools each taking children from Standard I to Standard VII, and 4 infant schools. Children in these 10 schools numbered 2,665. There are 2 Boys' and 2 Girls' Mission secondary schools in Bathurst with a total of 512 children. A School of Science serving all four secondary schools was opened in Bathurst in January, 1947. In the Colony there are a Government and 1 Mission primary schools with a total of 674 children. In the Protectorate there is 1 Government school giving secondary modern education, 8 Mission schools and 25 District Authority schools of a primary type. Over 70 per cent. of children attending school live in Bathurst.

The chief export is ground-nuts, which form over ninety-six per cent. of the total exports; practically all of this crop is sent to Europe, where the oil is extracted and used for the same purpose as olive oil. Palm kernels, hides and skins, and beeswax are also exported; and rice, cotton, maize, and a kind of millet called kous are produced in the countries bordering the Gambia, but not in sufficient quantities to meet local requirements. The chief imports are apparel, cotton goods, flour, kola nuts, oil, rice, soap, spirits, metals of all kinds, sugar, tobacco and motor vehicles.

Total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in 1954 was 876,827.

a rocky promontory, 3½ miles in length, ½ of a mile in breadth and 1,396 feet high at its greatest elevation near the southern extremity of Spain, with which it is connected by a low isthmus. It is about 14 miles distant from the opposite coast of Africa. The estimated population (1955) is 24,829.

Ψ Gibraltar is a naval base of vital strategic importance to Great Britain. It was captured in 1704, during the war of the Spanish Succession, by a combined Dutch and English force, under Sir George Rooke, and was ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713. Several attempts have been made to retake it, the most celebrated being the great siege in 1779-83, when General Elliot, afterwards Lord Heathfield, held it for 3 years and 7 months against a combined French and Spanish force. The town stands at the foot of the promontory on the N.W. side. Gibraltar is a free port, and enjoys the advantages of an extensive shipping trade. It is a popular tourist centre. The chief sources of revenue are the port dues, the rent of the Crown estate in the town, and duties on wine, spirits, tobacco, beer, motor spirit, perfumery, coffee and fuel oil.

A Department of Education has been established. There are now 5 secondary schools, 17 primary and also infant schools. Teacher training and University Scholarships have been provided, 3,554 pupils are at present in Government schools, and the Government expenditure on education in 1955 was £85,025.

GOLD COAST

Area and Population.—The Gold Coast Colony, with Ashanti, the Northern Territories and Togoland under United Kingdom Trusteeship, is situated on the Gulf of Guinea, between 3° 15' W. long. and 1° 22' E. long., and is bounded on W. by the French Ivory Coast, on E. by Togoland, under French Mandate, on N. by the French Sudan, on S. by the sea. It extends about 334 miles along the coast-line and inland to an average distance of 440 miles or to 1° N. lat. The area of the Colony is 23,937 sq. miles, of Ashanti 24,379 sq. miles, of the Northern Territories 30,486 sq. miles, and of Togoland under U.K. Trusteeship 13,041—a total of 91,843 sq. miles. Although a tropical country, the Gold Coast is rather cooler than many countries within similar latitudes. With increased medical facilities and improved sanitation a healthy life can now be enjoyed.

The population (1948) was: Gold Coast Colony 2,222,810; Ashanti, 818,944; Northern Territories, 1,076,696. Total, 4,118,450, including 6,770 non-Africans; the figure for Togoland under United Kingdom Trusteeship included in the total was 382,768 (including non-Africans).

The total population of the Gold Coast at June, 1955, was estimated at 4,620,000.

Education and Social Conditions.—In February, 1955, there were in the Colony, Ashanti and the Northern Territories, excluding Togoland under United Kingdom Trusteeship, 3,903 primary and middle schools with an enrolment of 491,458 (342,499 boys and 148,959 girls) and 54 secondary schools with an enrolment of 9,485 (8,035 boys and 1,450 girls). Post-middle trade and technical institutions had an enrolment of 1,792 (1,982 boys and 148 girls) and 2,644 students were in teacher-training colleges (2,043 men and 939 women). Togoland under United Kingdom Trusteeship had at the same date 465 primary and middle schools with an enrolment of 51,949 (33,025 boys and 18,924 girls); there were 5 secondary schools with an enrolment of 532, of which 28 were girls. Four teacher-training colleges had between them 516 students (425 men and 91 women). The five-year intensive literacy campaign which started in June, 1952, continued, and during 1955, 2,460 literacy classes were established, 7,783 people were trained as voluntary teachers, and 32,502 achieved the Gold Coast Literacy Certificate.

There are 4 central hospitals (Government) with specialist facilities, in addition to 26 Government, 9 mines, 10 mission and 14 private hospitals with a total of 2,893 beds and 490 cots. The number of beds is distributed as follows:—Government 2,063, mines 403, mission 250, private 177. These hospitals are supplemented by 18 Government and 110 non-Government dressing stations in rural areas. Five Government health centres have been completed. Two training colleges for State Registered Nurses and 6 training hospitals for less highly qualified nurses are maintained by Government and training facilities are provided at several mission and mines hospitals. Midwifery training is given at 2 Government Centres and 2 mission hospitals. There are 3 schools of hygiene (Accra, Tamale and Kintampo) for the training of health superintendents and inspectors. Medical Field Units make surveys and initiate mass treatment of trypanosomiasis and yaws, and undertake enquiries into the incidence of other endemic diseases, such as guinea-worm, bilharzia, onchocerciasis, leprosy, malaria, etc.

Communications.—There are four aerodromes in the Gold Coast, situated at Accra, Takoradi, Kumasi and Tamale. Accra Airport is an international airport and is the terminus for the B.O.A.C. trunk route and Hunting-Clan/Airwork Coach Class service from the United Kingdom. Other airlines using Accra are Pan American World Airways, operating between New York and Johannesburg, Air France and Union Aeromarine de Transport operating from French West Africa, Air Liban operating between Lebanon and the Gold Coast and West African Airways Corporation, operating between the British West African territories and internally within the Gold Coast. The aerodromes at Takoradi, Kumasi and Tamale are used by West African Airways Corporation on their internal services and connect the Northern Territories, Ashanti and the Western Province to the capital. In addition to its function as an internal aerodrome, Takoradi is also used by the Hunting-Clan/Airwork Coach Class service from the United Kingdom. There is a National Meteorological Service, providing forecasting, climatological and agro-meteorological services. Fully staffed meteorological stations are maintained at all the airfields and at 10 other places in the Gold Coast. Pilot-balloon observations are made at 5 places. Other Government departments, local government authorities, commercial organizations, schools, colleges and private individuals co-operate in maintaining 40 climatological, 17 agricultural and over 200 rainfall stations.

The total number of railway miles open to traffic on March 31, 1956, was 617, of 3 ft. 6 ins. gauge. The gross railway earnings for the year 1954-55 were £3,425,854 and the working expenditure including provision for renewals and pensions was £2,541,441. The capital cost was £17,148,038. The railways carried 4,803,051 passengers during the financial year 1954-55, and 1,612,679 tons of freight.

The total mileage of trunk and secondary motorable roads is 8,000 miles, of which approximately 1,360 miles are bitumen surfaced. There are also some 5,000 miles of local roads of unspecified standard.

Takoradi Harbour, four miles west of Sekondi, with 220 acres of water enclosed within two breakwaters and accommodation for 10 deep-draught ocean-going vessels, was opened in 1928 and is equipped with modern facilities and deep-water berths. The extensions to Takoradi Harbour which provide for three additional quay berths and improved facilities for handling timber traffic are virtually completed. The surf ports of Accra, Cape Coast and Winneba together with 6 light-houses, are also under the control of the General Manager of the Railway. The principal exports brought down by rail are cocoa, timber, manganese and bauxite. The gross earnings from Takoradi Harbour for the year 1954-55 were £1,047,428 and the working expenditure was £479,210, the total capital expenditure being £7,439,317.

The Black Volta rises in the hills near Soukouraba, and the White Volta rises near Quashigouga, both in the French Colony of Haute Volta. These two rivers converge some 280 miles from the sea on the Ashanti-Northern Territories border and become the River Volta which flows into the sea at Ada. This river is navigable for light draught launches as far as Akuse, and with the exception of the Krachi rapids, can be used for canoe traffic during certain seasons of the year as far as Yeji. The Ankobra River is navigable for many months of the year by surf-boats and light draught launches for a distance of 50 miles. The Tano, connected with Half Assini by the main lagoon, is navigable for light draught launches and canoes as far as Tanoso, a distance of about 60 miles. The Sutri rapids prevent this river being further used.

GOVERNMENT

Under Letters Patent which came into force on June 18, 1954, there is a Governor and Commander-in-Chief who may appoint a Deputy Governor. Under a Constitution which came into operation on the same day there is a Cabinet of Ministers of not fewer than eight Members of the Legislative Assembly appointed by the Governor acting in accordance with the constitutional convention applicable to the exercise of such function in the United Kingdom by Her Majesty the Queen. The Prime Minister presides at meetings of the Cabinet but at any special meeting summoned by the Governor the latter presides. The Prime Minister may charge any Minister with the responsibility for any department or subject other than certain subjects involving matters relating to defence and external affairs for which the Governor is responsible. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Speaker elected by the Assembly and 104 Members elected by direct election and representing 7 municipal and 97 rural districts.

Seat of Government, Ψ ACCRA, population (1948) 135,926.

Accra, sea distant from Liverpool, 3,920 miles; transit, 12 to 30 days, is governed by a Municipal Council of 31 members (27 elected and 4 appointed). A 24 hours air service operates to and from the U.K. five times a week.

ASHANTI

Ashanti was placed under British protection in 1896, and is now administered, under the Governor of the Gold Coast, by a Chief Regional Officer, with an Assistant Regional Officer as relieving officer, and a staff of 3 Senior Administrative Officers and 21 Administrative Officers. Local Government is in the hands of a number of District, Municipal, Local and Urban Councils.

In January, 1935, the Confederation of Ashanti, which was broken up and had remained inoperative for 35 years, was re-established with Otumfuo Sir Osei Agyeman Prempeh II, K.B.E. (a nephew of the late Nana Prempeh) at its head. The Confederacy has now been renamed the Asanteman Council.

The area is 24,379 square miles, with a population (Census of 1948) of 823,672 (including 1,187 non-Africans). In 1955 there were 1,835 children in the Government schools, and 137,926 in the assisted and approved mission and local authority schools. There are 12 hospitals, 31 health centres and dressing stations and 43 midwifery clinics. 3,309 miles of motor roads afford access to all parts of the country. Agriculture is the staple industry; 120,364 tons (middle and main crops) of cocoa were exported in the crop year 1955-56. Approximately 16,750,000 cu. feet of logs were extracted from the forests of the southern part of Ashanti in 1955-56, of which approximately 8,750,000 cu. feet were sawn locally or in the Colony; gold output (1955-56), 192,836 oz.; average number employed in mining industry, 229 non-Africans, 5,000 Africans. The Mampong Scarp divides Ashanti into two natural divisions; the southern part being tropical rainfall forest, rich in mahogany, cedar, and trees yielding fruits, oil, rubber and gum copal, the eastern side being heavily planted with cocoa and the western side expanding its cocoa planting rapidly. The northern part of the Dependency is orchard savannah, the main products being maize, yams, cocoyams, bananas, plantains, and ground-nuts.

NORTHERN TERRITORIES

The Northern Territories lie to the north of the parallel 8° N. lat. and are bounded on the west and north by French possessions, on the east by Togoland and on the south by Ashanti. They came under British Protection in 1901 and are administered, under the Gold Coast Government, by a Chief Regional Officer with his headquarters at Tamale, an Assistant Regional Officer and 26 Administrative Officers. The local government reforms which took place in 1951-52 have established local district and urban district councils with elected majorities throughout the Protectorate to replace the former native authorities whose membership was entirely traditional. Universal adult suffrage was introduced in 1954, and the Territory returns 26 members to the Legislative Assembly. The total area is 41,063 sq. miles (including the Northern section of Togoland under U.K. Trusteeship), varying in type from the forests in the extreme south of the Gonja district to the rolling open country on the northern frontier. Figures of the Census taken in 1948 give the population as 1,076,696 (including the part of Togoland under U.K. Trusteeship which is administered jointly with the Northern Territories). The principal occupations of the people are agriculture and animal husbandry. Maize, millet and guinea-corn are grown, mainly for local consumption, and with yams and rice form the staple food of the people. Yams, groundnuts, shea butter and rice are exported to Ashanti. The live-stock industry is the principal source of wealth, and cattle, sheep, goats and poultry are exported to Ashanti and the Colony. There are about 3,000 miles of motor roads. There are 10 local authority middle schools for boys and a co-educational, 109 local authority primary day schools and 11 primary boarding schools. The White Fathers Mission operates 1 secondary school, 3 middle schools and 10 primary schools. Other Missions run 1 middle school and 6 primary schools. There is 1 Government girls' middle boarding school and 2 primary schools. The number of children in Northern Territories schools in January 1955 was 14,916. There is a Government secondary school and a trade school at Tamale with training colleges for teachers at Tamale and Pusiga. There is also a school for lepers at Oti. There are 10 hospitals and 63 dispensaries, and a health centre at Bimbilla, in Togoland.

CHIEF TOWN, Tamale, population, 16,055 (1948).

Assistant Regional Officer, J. H. F. MacGiffin 2,100

TOGOLAND

The western portion of the former German Colony of Togoland was placed under mandate by the League of Nations to the United Kingdom. After the second world war the United Kingdom entered into a trusteeship agreement with the United Nations. The territory is administered as part of the Gold Coast in two sections, Northern and Southern, covering an area of 13,041 sq. miles with a population (1948 census) of 382,564, including 121 non-Africans. The administrative centre for the Southern Section is Ho. A plebiscite was held in May 1956 to decide whether, on the attainment of independence by the Gold Coast, the British Trust Territory should or should not be unified with the Gold Coast. The United Nations General Assembly was to consider at the end of 1956 the result of the voting which was: for Union, 92,775; for Separation, 67,529. The main export is cocoa (1955, 22,071 tons valued at £227,635).

HONG KONG

The Crown Colony of Hong Kong, consisting of a number of islands and of a portion of the mainland, on the south-eastern coast of China, is situated at the eastern side of the mouth of the Pearl River, between 22° 9' and 22° 37' N. lat. and 113° 52'–114° 30' E. long.

The capital city, Victoria, situated on the island of Hong Kong, is 91 miles S.E. of Canton and 40 miles E. of the Portuguese colony of Macao at the other side of the Pearl River. It lies along the northern shore of the island and faces the mainland; the harbour (17 sq. miles water area) lies between the city and the mainland, on which is situated Kowloon with a population equalling that of Victoria. The total area of the Colony is 391 sq. miles with a population which has varied considerably during recent years owing to unsettled conditions in China. In Jan. 1956 it was thought to be about 2,400,000.

The island of Hong Kong is about 11 miles long and from 2 to 5 miles broad, with a total area of 32 square miles; at the eastern entrance to the harbour it is only separated from the mainland by a narrow strait (Lyemun) not more than a quarter-mile wide. It was first occupied by Great Britain in January, 1841, and formally ceded by the Treaty of Nankin in 1842; Kowloon was subsequently acquired by the Peking Convention of 1860; and the New Territories, consisting of a peninsula in the southern part of the Kwangtung province, together with adjacent islands, by a 99-year lease signed June 9, 1898.

The island is broken in shape and mountainous, the highest point being Victoria Peak, which is 1,809 feet high. The New Territories contain several peaks higher than this, the highest being Taiomshan, 3,141 feet. The hot season lasts from May to October. During the winter months, from November to March, the climate is cooler, drier, and more invigorating. The average daily maximum temperature ranges from 87° in July to 69° in February, and the average daily minimum temperature from 82° in July to 56° in February. The average annual rainfall is 84.76 in., of which no less than 75 per cent. falls between May and September, when the S.W. monsoon prevails.

Communications.—Hong Kong, one of the world's finest natural harbours, possesses excellent wharves and dry docks, capable of holding vessels up to 750 ft. in length. Shipping tonnage for the year ending March, 1956, was 25,756,509. A railway, 221 miles in length, owned by the Government, runs between Kowloon and the Chinese frontier. It forms a direct overland communication with Canton, Hankow and Shanghai, but since October, 1949, all through passenger traffic has been suspended.

Hong Kong Airport is on the north shore of Kowloon Bay, some 4 miles from the centre of Kowloon and is regularly used by 15 international airlines which provide frequent services to Europe, U.S.A., Canada, Australia and neighbouring territories, China excepted. The Colony is an important link on the main air routes of the Far East. B.O.A.C. operates 5 services per week to London, the route on two days being the longer one via Singapore; the journey on the direct route via Bangkok takes about 48 hours. The airport is normally open from dawn to dusk, but can be opened for night flying in emergency. A flying boat base is adjacent to the airfield.

Education.—In 1956 there were 1,150 schools with 262,850 pupils. 37 per cent. of all schools are financed wholly or in part by the Government. The University of Hong Kong, opened in 1912, has a full-time residential student strength of 905 in Faculties of Arts, Science, Medicine, Engineering and Architecture. There is also an Institute of Oriental Studies.

TRADE

The ban on the export of goods of a strategic nature to China and North Korea remained in force during 1955, but for the first time since 1953 the downward trend of Hong Kong's trade was altered, the total value of trade being $6,253.3m. compared with $5,852.4m. in 1954. The rapid growth of manufacturing industries has been largely responsible for this improvement. Exports rose by $117m. to a total of $2,534m., local products being responsible for $48.4m. of this increase. Trade with China fell appreciably, but was compensated by increases in other markets. Hong Kong's principal customers for 1955, in order of value of trade, were Malaya, Indonesia, United Kingdom. The colony's products include a wide range of textile piece-goods, rubber footwear, enamel and aluminium ware, electric appliances, hats, umbrellas and vacuum flasks.

GOVERNMENT

Hong Kong is administered as a Crown colony with a Governor, aided by an Executive Council and a Legislative Council, which consists of nine official and not more than eight unofficial members. There is also an Urban Council in which is vested, inter alia, power of making bye-laws in respect of certain matters of public health and sanitation.

KENYA

Kenya Colony and the Kenya Protectorate are situated in Eastern Equatorial Africa. Kenya (Colony and Protectorate) is bounded on the North by the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Abyssinia, on the South by Tanganyika Territory, on the East by the Indian Ocean, and on the West by Lake Victoria and Uganda Protectorate. The total area is 224,960 sq. miles (including 5,224 sq. miles of water). The total population at the 1948 censuses was 5,405,966; this included 5,251,120 Africans, 20,660 Europeans, 90,528 Indians, 7,159 Goans and 24,174 Arabs. The estimated population in July, 1954, was 5,900,000.

Arabs predominate on the coasts, the majority of the Africans (Bantu and other tribes) living inland. Discoveries in the Great Rift Valley, near Mount Olorgesalie, mark the site of one of the most important prehistoric areas in the world.

Production.—Although the Colony lies astride the Equator, the range of altitude from sea level to 17,000 feet enables most types of crops, both indigenous and introduced, to be grown. In the coastal region the principal crops are copra, maize, sisal, sugar and cotton, while the yield of a comparatively new crop, cashew nuts, is steadily increasing. Passing from the coastal strip the country becomes flat, dry and in some places semi-desert of very little agricultural value. At about two hundred and fifty miles inland the first rise of the Kenya Highlands is met. Farming in this extremely fertile upland area at altitudes between 5,000 feet and 9,000 feet are some thousands of European farmers who produce among other crops wheat, coffee maize, sisal, wattle, pyrethrum and tea. Extensive herds of native and imported stock are maintained, and there is considerable production of meat and butter. Some 7,000,000 acres are under white occupation in this area. There are also very extensive forests in the Highlands, cedar for the pencil industry being a valuable export. Towards the area of Lake Victoria, which forms a natural boundary with Uganda, the African population grow large quantities of maize and millets, which are their staple foods, and cotton which has considerable export value. The value of domestic exports in 1955 was £25,666,650. Contributing to this total were sisal (£1,958,631), coffee (£8,904,654), hides and skins (£1,302,280), tea (£2,761,151), wattle bark extract (£2,260,853), sodium carbonate (£1,276,941), pyrethrum (£284,732) and maize (£1,665,422).

Prospecting and mining are carried on in many parts of the Colony, the principal minerals at present produced being soda ash, salt, limestone, gold, kyanite and diatomite. The value of the production of main minerals in 1955 was as follows: soda ash £1,308,250, gold £116,500, kyanite £76,000, salt £201,000 and diatomite £52,000.

Since the end of the war there has been a great increase in the number of secondary industries, many of which are engaged in processing agricultural produce but which also manufacture an increasing range of products from local and imported raw materials to meet the needs of the East African Territories. Industrial areas are being developed or planned in all the principal towns.

Communications.—The postal service handled 73,534,600 postal packets in 1955. The telegraph and telephone system has 4,025 miles of line. The number of telephones is now 27,141. A cable connects Mombasa with Zanzibar, and a wireless station in Nairobi works direct with the United Kingdom, providing both telegraph and telephone facilities. There is a coast wireless station at Mombasa with a radio-telephone service for the marine mobile service. Telephone and/or telegraph communication by both line and radio exists in the majority of the settled areas of the Colony and to Uganda, Tanganyika, Belgian Congo, Nyasaland and South Africa.

The East African Railways and Harbours are State-owned; the railway, which is metre gauge, has a total route mileage of open line of 3,394 miles, made up as follows: Kenya and Uganda Section—Main Line: Mombasa-Kampala-Kasese (1,083 miles); Principal Lines: Nakuru Junction-Kisumu (134), Tororo-Soroti (100), Voi-Kahe Junction (94); Minor and Branch Lines: Rongai-Lake Solai (27), Kisumu-Butere (43), Leseru-Kitale (41), Mbulamuti-Namasagali (19), Kampala-Port Bell (6), Gilgil-Thomson's Falls (48), Nairobi-Nanyuki (145), The Konza-Lake Magadi Line (91 miles) is worked but not owned by the Railway Administration. Tanganyika Section—Main Line: Dar-es-Salaam-Kigoma (780 miles); Principal Line: Tabora-Mwanza (236); Branch Line: Kaliuwa-Mpanda (131). The Tanga Line runs from Tanga to Arusha (274 miles). Southern Province Railway: Mtwara-Nachingwea (145 miles). Under construction; Nkougwe-Kasese (92 miles). In addition the Administration operates a marine service on Lakes Victoria, Kioga, Albert and Tanganyika, and also on the River Nile, with a route mileage of 6,300 miles. There are also 1,838 miles of road services in Tanganyika connecting the Central and Tanga Lines and providing regular transport to the Southern and Usambara Highlands. There are a further 485 miles of subsidiary road services in Kenya and Uganda.

Scheduled trunk airline services during 1955 were operated to or through Kenya by B.O.A.C., Air India, South African Airways, Air France, Central African Airways, Scandinavian Air Services, El Al

Israel and Airwork and Hunting Clan, while regional scheduled services were also run by East African Airways, Sabena, Ethiopian Air Lines and Aden Airways.

There are 22,072 miles of road in Kenya, varying in standard from good bitumen surfaced highways to barely motorable tracks in the more remote areas. The main roads, except during exceptional rains, are for the most part all weather.

The Great North Road from Cape Town to Cairo (Route A.104) passes through Kenya by way of Namanga, Nairobi (3,662 miles from Cape Town), Nakuru and Mau Summit, entering Uganda at Tororo.

A construction programme is in hand and several new roads are being built. These include the completion of the last 11 miles of the new road from Thika to Sagana for Mount Kenya traffic and an extension of the Great North Road from Broderick Falls (N.W. of Eldoret) towards Tororo. In addition to this construction programme, a considerable amount of betterment work is being carried out on roads in various parts of the Colony.

In 1949 the Customs Departments of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika were amalgamated under the title of the East African Customs and Excise Department as an East Africa High Commission Service. The main imports to East Africa Territories are cotton piece goods, vehicles and transport equipment, base metals and manufactures thereof, machinery, apparatus and appliances, products for heating, lighting and power, and non-metallic minerals and manufactures thereof. The principal exports are sisal, cotton and lint, coffee, hides, skins and leather, wattle extract, diamonds, gold, pyrethrum, sodium carbonate and tea.

Kenya Protectorate is under the same government. It consists of the mainland dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar (a strip extending 10 miles inland along the coast from the Tanganyika mandated territory frontier to Kipini and the islands of the Lamu Archipelago), for which Kenya Colony pays the Sultan an annuity of £10,000 per annum. The Protectorate also includes the Witu Protectorate, a small tract of country at the mouth of the Tana River.

The Colony and Protectorate is divided into 6 Provinces (Nyanza, Rift Valley, Central, Coast, Southern and Northern) and an extra-provincial district (Nairobi).

The Supreme Court Central Registry is situated at Nairobi and has district registrars at Mombasa, Nakuru, Eldoret, Kisumu and Nyeri. Periodic sessions are held at these towns and elsewhere as required. In all cases to which natives are parties native law and customs are considered. Resident Magistrates are stationed at all important centres throughout the Colony.

The Eastern African Court of Appeal was re-constituted in 1951, as a permanent court for the

GOVERNMENT

The Government is that of a Crown Colony under a Governor and Commander-in-Chief who is advised by a Council of Ministers consisting of 14 Ministers in addition to the Deputy to the Governor. Of these 14 Ministers, 8 are ex officio and 6 are appointed by the Governor. There is also provision for not fewer than 3 nor more than 5 Parliamentary Secretaries, of whom 4 have so far been appointed. Under the constitution brought into effect after the 1952 General Election, the Legislative Council consists of the Governor who is President, a Vice-President who is the Speaker and 54 Members, of whom 8 are ex officio Members, 18 Nominated Members, 14 European Elected Members, 6 Asian Elected Members (4 non-Muslim and 2 Muslim), 1 Arab Elected Member, 6 African Representative Members and 1 Arab Representative Member. In the East Africa Central Legislative Assembly, Kenya is represented by one Official and four Unofficial Members, of the latter 2 being European, 1 Asian, 1 Arab and 1 African. Temporary constitutional changes, to be in force until the next General Election, were promulgated in April, 1954. A Council of Ministers was set up consisting of the Governor and Deputy Governor, 6 official members, 6 unofficial members, and 2 nominated members. The Executive Council was to remain in being and to continue to exercise certain functions of government. All members of the Council of Ministers would be members of it, and it would include in addition 1 Arab and 2 additional African members. Further members may be added by agreement of all members of the Council of Ministers.

NAIROBI, the capital of the Colony, possesses a Cathedral (All Saints) and is the central station of the East African railways and harbours. There are about 3,500 European farmers throughout the Colony, the most closely settled part being the good coffee soil near Nairobi. Ψ Mombasa, which is connected with Europe by telegraph, possesses perhaps the finest harbour on the east coast of Africa; other centres are Eldoret, Kisumu, Nakuru, Kitale, Nyeri, and Ψ Lamu.

MALAYA AND BRITISH BORNEO

The British and British-protected territories in South East Asia are located principally in the Malay Peninsula and in the island of Borneo, and consist of the following five separate units:

(1) The Federation of Malaya, composed of the nine British-protected Malay States of Johore, Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, Pahang, Kedah, Kelantan, Trengganu and Perlis, and the two British Settlements of Penang and Malacca which were formerly part of the Crown Colony of the Straits Settlements.

(2) The Colony of Singapore, formerly one of the Straits Settlements.

(3) The Colony of Sarawak in North-West Borneo.

(4) The Colony of North Borneo (including Labuan, formerly part of the Straits Settlements).

(5) The British Protected State of Brunei.

THE FEDERATION OF MALAYA

The Federation of Malaya consists of 9 sovereign Malay States and the two British Settlements of Penang and Malacca. Together they make up the whole of the Malay Peninsula from the Straits of Johore (which divide the territory from Singapore Island) on the south, to the Siamese frontier on the north.

Johore (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Ibrahim ibni Almarhum Sultan Abu Bakar, G.C.M.G., G.B.E., K.B.E. (Mil.)) is the most southerly state of the Federation, the Straits of Johore forming the boundary with the island of Singapore Peninsula. Its area is approximately 7,330 square miles, with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 947,755. It is connected with the island of Singapore by a causeway over which run a road and the main railway line between Singapore and Bangkok. The seat of Government is at Johore Bahru.

Negri Sembilan (Ruler, H.H. the Yang di Pertuan Besar, Tuanku Abdul Rahman ibni Almarhum Tuanku Muhammad, K.C.M.G.) lies on the west coast of the Malay Peninsula to the north of Johore. The area of the State is approximately 2,580 square miles with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 352,292. The seat of Government is Seremban (pop. 42,200).

Pahang (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Abu Bakar Ri'ayatu'ddin Al-Muadzam Shar ibni Almarhum Almu'tasim Bi'llah Abdullah, G.C.M.G.) lies on the eastern side of the main range to the north of Johore. It comprises 13,280 square miles, with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 298,828. The State includes the island of Tioman, lying about 25 miles off the coast in the China Sea. The seat of Government is at Kuantan.

Selangor (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Hisamuddin Alam Shah ibni Almarhum Sultan Alaiddin Sulaiman Shah, K.C.M.G.) lies on the west coast, north of Negri Sembilan, and has an area of 3,160 square miles with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 926,205. The seat of Government, Kuala Lumpur (pop. 300,000) is also the seat of Government of the Federation of Malaya. Ψ Port Swettenham, the principal mainland port, is situated about 28 miles distant by road and rail.

Perak (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Puduku Sri Sultan Yussuf Izuddin Shah ibni Almarhum Sultan Jalil Radzillah Hu'-an-hu, K.C.M.G., O.B.E.) is on the west coast, north of Selangor. It comprises 7,980 square miles with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 1,204,785. Ipoh is the seat of Government. Situated in the rich tin-producing Kinta valley, it is the largest town, with a population of over 100,000.

Kedah (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Tunku Badlishah ibni Almarhum Sultan Abdul Hamid Alim Shah, K.C.M.G., K.B.E.) lies on the north-west coast to the north of Perak, and is bordered on the north-east by the Siamese States of Sangkhla and Patani. The State includes the island of Langkawi, and adjoining islands. Its area, including the Langkawi group of islands, is about 3,660 square miles with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 692,329. The seat of Government is Alor Star.

Perlis (Ruler, H.H. the Raja Syed Putra ibni Almarhum Syed Hassan Jamalullail, K.C.M.G.), about 310 square miles in area, with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 86,423, is the smallest of the Malay States. It lies on the north-west border of Kedah and adjoins the Siamese Provinces of Nakon Sridhammaraj and Setul. Padang Besar on the main trunk line to Bangkok is the frontier railway station between Siam and Malaya. Kangar is the seat of Government.

Kelantan (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Ibrahim ibni Almarhum Sultan Mohamed IV, K.C.M.G.) is the north-east border state, adjoining the Siamese Province of Patani. Its area is 5,750 square miles, with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 520,640. The seat of Government is Kota Bharu. Kuala Krai is the headquarters of the southern, and Pasir Puteh of the eastern, administrative districts.

Trengganu (Ruler, H.H. Sultan Nasiruddin Shah ibni Almarhum Sultan Zainal Abidin; K.C.M.C.) lies on the east coast between Kelantan and Pahang. The area of the State is about 5,050 square miles, with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 255,200. The western and inland half of Trengganu is mountainous and almost uninhabited. The population is concentrated on the rivers and along the coast-line. The highest peak is Gunung Lawit (4,385 feet). The three principal administrative centres are Besut in the north, Kuala Trengganu in the centre and Kemaman in the south. The seat of Government is at Kuala Trengganu.

Penang is an island 15 miles long and 11 miles broad, containing an area of 110 square miles with a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 550,470. It is situated off the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, at the northern extremity of the Straits of Malacca. The chief town is officially styled George Town (pop. about 250,000), but is generally known as *Ψ*Penang. It is the chief port of the Federation. On the opposite shore of the mainland, from which the island is separated by a strait from 2 to 10 miles broad, is Province Wellesley, a strip of territory 11 miles in width and extending 31 miles along the coast, with an area of 290 square miles, the chief town being Butterworth.

Malacca is situated on the western coast of the Peninsula, 154 miles by road from Singapore and 347 miles by road from Penang, and consists of a strip of territory about 43 miles in length, and 27 miles in breadth. The total area is about 640 square miles. It has a population estimated at the end of 1955 at 307,232, that of the town itself being about 65,000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

The Federation of Malaya is primarily and overwhelmingly a producer of raw materials, the chief of which are rubber and tin (of which it is the world's biggest individual supplier), palm oil, coconut oil and copra and other agricultural products. These constitute about four-fifths of the total export trade, the other one-fifth being entrepôt trade consisting of re-export of raw materials and produce of neighbouring countries and manufactured and industrial goods of foreign countries. Imports consist essentially of foodstuffs, beverages and tobacco, mineral fuel and lubricants, chemicals, textiles and manufactured goods and raw products of neighbouring countries. The chief suppliers are the United Kingdom, Australia, the United States of America, India, Japan, the Netherlands, China, Thailand and Indonesia. Domestic rice production totalled 411,000 tons in the 1954-55 season. The balance was imported mainly from Thailand and Burma. At the end of 1954, the rice trade passed from Government to commercial hands. Measures to increase the home-grown rice output are being actively pursued. Domestic industry includes manufacture of rubber goods, pottery, cement, matches, pewter-ware, furniture, timber, bricks, tiles, soap, biscuits, aerated waters and other small scale industry.

GOVERNMENT

The Federation of Malaya Agreement, originally made between King George VI and the Rulers of the Malay States in 1948, provides in its present amended form for a Federal Executive Council presided over by the High Commissioner consisting of not fewer than 12 or more than 26 members, and a Federal Legislative Council of 98 members presided over by a Speaker; 52 are elected members, 33 are appointed members, representing commerce, rubber, tin, trade unions, agriculture and husbandry, racial minorities and other interests, 9 are the Mentri Mentri Besar (Chief Ministers) of the Malay States, 2 represent the Settlements of Penang and Malacca and 2 are ex officio members. Elections are based on universal adult franchise for all Federal citizens on a common electoral roll. Most of the members appointed to represent specific interests are required to be chosen by independent organisations and associations.

The Agreement also established a conference of Rulers, consisting of the 9 Rulers of the Malay States which meets the High Commissioner for consultation at least three times a year.

The individual State Agreements made in 1948 between King George VI and the Ruler of each State provide for State Executive Councils and State Legislatures, called Councils of State. There are similar Councils in the Settlements. All the State and Settlement Legislatures have a majority of unofficial members, part elected and part appointed. Penang, however, has an elected majority in the Settlement Council.

THE COLONY OF SINGAPORE

The Crown Colony of Singapore consists of the island of Singapore and Christmas Island, with a total area of 217 sq. miles.

Singapore is an island situated off the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula, to which it is joined by a causeway, carrying a road and a railway, across the Straits of Johore, which are about three-quarters of a mile in width; its length is 26 miles, and its breadth 14 miles; it comprises, with the adjoining islets, an area of 224 square miles, and a population in 1955 of 1,236,609, of whom 945,644 were Chinese, 96,565 Indians and Pakistanis, 150,967 Malaysians, 19,236 Europeans, 11,878 Eurasians and 12,319 others. Singapore was in the 13th century a Malay city of importance till it was destroyed by the Javanese about 1365. The present settlement was founded on January 30, 1819, by Sir Stamford Raffles, then Lieut.-Governor of Bencoolen, Sumatra. The original lease by the Sultan of Johore and the Dato Temenggong, the Chief of Singapore in 1819, was followed in 1824 by the cession of the island in perpetuity by the Dutch in the Treaty of Holland. The island was surrendered to the Japanese on Feb. 15, 1942; it was restored to British rule Sept. 5, 1945, and returned to civil government on April 1, 1946, at the end of the period of the British Military Administration.

Christmas Island, in the Indian Ocean, about 190 miles S. of Java Head and 529 miles E. of the Cocos-Keeling Islands, has an area of 64 square miles and a population (1955) of 2,201. It is administered as a part of the Colony of Singapore, represented by a District Officer. The island, which is densely wooded, contains extensive deposits of phosphate of lime worked by the Christmas Island Phosphate Company. The amount exported in 1955 was 390,226 tons.

TRADE

Singapore is primarily a commercial and strategic centre. It handles 71 per cent. of the external trade of Malaya and is the chief entrepôt centre for south-east Asia and Indonesia. Its total trade in 1955 reached the value of $5,647,235,041. 41 major shipping-lines and 9 international air-lines serve Singapore. The new International Airport, with a runway of 8,000 feet, is now in operation. Tin smelting, the manufacture of rubber goods, saw-mills, brick works, oil wells, and the canning of locally-grown pineapples are the more important of these; products of secondary importance are beer, biscuits, soap, furniture, asbestos packing, aluminium manufactures, paints, rattan works, etc.; but the prosperity of the colony mainly depends on the production and volume of trade of the surrounding territories.

GOVERNMENT

The Crown Colony of Singapore is a separate unit of Government. In 1955 a new constitution giving a large measure of internal self-government came into force. It provides for a Legislative Assembly of 32 members, presided over by a Speaker. There are 25 members elected from 25 one-member constituencies. The electorate of 347,000 consists of resident citizens of the U.K. and the Colonies (and those born in the Federation of Malaya) over 21 years of age. The remaining 7 members are the 3 ex officio members (the Chief Secretary, the Attorney-General and the Financial Secretary) and 4 members nominated by the Governor. The Government consists of a Council of Ministers collectively responsible to the Assembly and individually responsible for the administration of a department or group of departments. It consists of 7 unofficial members, including the Chief Minister, of whom 6 must be elected members of the Assembly, and the three ex officio members of the Assembly. The Governor, who presides over the Council, is responsible for defence, foreign affairs and internal security, and has certain emergency reserve powers. The first elections were held on April 2, 1955. The municipal area is administered by a two-thirds elected City Council of 27 members.

BRITISH BORNEO

Borneo is a large island in the Eastern Archipelago, extending from lat. 7° 4' N. to 4° 10' S. and from long. 108° 50' to 119° 20' E. It is about 850 miles in length and 600 in breadth, and contains an area of 284,000 square miles, divided by the equatorial line into two nearly equal portions. The population is probably about 2,750,000. It is thought that the island was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521. About 202,000 sq. miles are included within Indonesia. Of the remainder of the island (the North Coast) approximately 50,000 sq. miles form the Colony of Sarawak and 30,000 sq. miles the Colony of North Borneo (including Labuan), all British.

NORTH BORNEO

The former State of North Borneo was governed by the British North Borneo (Chartered) Company, the last Chartered Company to administer an area of the British Empire, from 1882 to 1942, and became part of the new Crown Colony of North Borneo on July 15, 1946.

The Colony of North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island of Borneo, and has an area of 29,388 square miles with a coast-line of approximately 900 miles. The interior is mountainous. Mt. Kinabalu, sacred to the Dusuns, is the highest mountain in the East Indies, rising to 13,455 feet. Most of the Colony is densely timbered. On the west coast there is a narrow coastal plain which supports the main agricultural and rubber production of the Colony.

The census of the population was completed in June, 1951. The Census Report shows that since 1931, the year in which the last census was held, the total population of the Colony has increased by 20.4 per cent. from 277,476 to 334,141 and the native population by 18.4 per cent. from 205,218 to 243,009. The Chinese population has increased by 48.6 per cent. from 50,056 to 74,374. The number of Europeans, including Eurasians, has increased from 647 to 1,213. The native population comprises Dusuns (mainly agricultural), Bajaus and Bruneis (fishing and agricultural), Muruts and Suluks and several smaller tribes. Labuan has a population of 8,784 (mainly Malays and Chinese).

The main towns of the Colony are situated on the coast. These are Jesselton (the capital) (11,704), Kudat (1,895), Sandakan (12,499) and Tawau (4,282) on the mainland and Victoria (2,526) on the island of Labuan.

Climate.—North Borneo is favoured by a relatively cool climate for a place situated so near the Equator. The average mean temperature varies between a maximum of 88° and a minimum of 66° F. The annual rainfall varies from 60 to 180 inches according to locality.

Communications.—The only railway is a metre gauge line running from Jesselton on the coast through Beaufort (57 miles) to Melalap in the interior, a distance of 96 miles, with a branch line from Beaufort to Weston (20 miles). There are 248 miles of metalled road, 249 miles of earth roads and 560 miles of bridle paths. There is an airstrip suitable for Skymaster aircraft at Labuan, and Dakota strips at Jesselton and Sandakan. The construction of additional landing grounds for the operation of an internal air service has been completed, and the service is now in operation. There is a daily service to and from Singapore, a weekly service from Labuan via Manila to and from Hong Kong, and a weekly service via Labuan to and from Australia and Hong Kong.

Production.—The main industries of the Colony are the cultivation of rubber (estimated at 122,200 acres), rice (71,700 acres), coconuts and coconut products (45,700 acres), tobacco (1,600 acres) and hemp (3,700 acres). Fishing gives employment to a large number of local natives and Chinese. About nine-tenths of the territory is still heavily timbered with many valuable species of hardwoods and soft hardwoods, of which the more important are seraya (Borneo cedar) and camphor.

Trade.—The main imports in 1955 were provisions, metals, oils and rice. Rubber is the greatest export (valued in 1955 at $45,900,000); other exports are timber, copra, tobacco, cutch and hemp.

Currency.—The Malayan dollar is the currency of the colony, and is valued at 2s. 4d. Sterling.

SARAWAK

Sarawak is a British Colony on the north-west coast of the island of Borneo, with a seaboard of about 500 miles, an area of about 50,000 square miles, and a population estimated in 1955 at 613,879, composed of various races, of whom the Sea Dyaks (Ibans), Malays, Chinese, Land Dyaks, Melanau, Kayans and Kenyahs are the most numerous. The government of Sarawak was granted in 1841 by the Sultan of Brunei to Sir James Brooke, who became well known as Rajah Brooke of Sarawak. Other concessions were made in 1861, 1882, 1885, and 1890, when the Limbang River was obtained. The Lawas River was added in 1905. In 1864 Great Britain recognized Sarawak as an independent State, and under an agreement of 1888 the State was placed under British protection. In 1941 the centenary of Brooke rule was celebrated throughout the State.

Sarawak was ceded to Great Britain by the Rajah on July 1, 1946.

The territory of Sarawak extends from Cape Datu in the south to the Lawas District, where it touches the boundary of North Borneo. The southern boundary is, except for a few short stretches, formed by outstanding ridges of hills; the eastern boundary is a broken range of mountains with peaks rising to 10,000 feet. The principal rivers are the Rejang (navigable for about 160 miles), the Baram (navigable for about 100 miles), the Batang-Lupar, and the Limbang. Kuching, the capital, stands on a small river (the Sarawak) which is navigable from its mouth to Kuching (23 miles).

The country produces rubber, oil, sago, rice, illipe nuts, birds' nests, gold, pepper, rattans and jungle produce. There are also known coal and cinnabar deposits.

GOVERNMENT

On May 21, 1946, H.H. the Rajah signed an instrument ceding Sarawak to the British Crown. This was made effective by an Order-in-Council on July 1, 1946, from which date Sarawak became a Crown Colony. The constitution provides for a Governor, Supreme Council, which at present consists of 6 European, 2 Chinese and 1 Malay and 1 Dyak members, and a Legislative Council, known as the Council Negri, composed at present of 13 Official Members, 10 Unofficial Members and 14 Standing Members. Divisional and District Advisory Councils, composed of representatives of all races, and 16 Native Authorities controlling their own finances, have been constituted since the territory became a Crown Colony.

THE MALDIVES ISLANDS

The Maldiv Islands, 400 miles south-west of Ceylon, are a group of 12,000 coral atolls, richly clothed with coconut palms, and yielding millet, fruit and edible nuts. About 200 islands are inhabited. The old form of Government was abolished in 1932, and a new Constitution was introduced. In February, 1954, after a short period of republican government, the Sultanate was restored. The international relations of the Maldives, which is a Protected State, are conducted in accordance with the advice of the United Kingdom Government, which does not interfere with the internal affairs of the islands.

Population over 93,000. The people are Moslems. They are highly civilized and are great navigators and traders.

The Capital of the Maldives is Malé, on King's Island.

an island in the Mediterranean Sea, 58 miles from Sicily and about 180 from the African coast, about 17 miles in length and 9 in breadth, and having an area of 94.9 square miles. The colony includes also the adjoining island of Gozo (area 25.9 sq. miles); Comino and several islets. The estimated population in February, 1956 was 313,823.

The island of Malta is said to have been converted to Christianity on the occasion of the shipwreck of St. Paul in A.D. 58. In the Dark Ages it was taken by the Moors, its commerce was destroyed, and it was used mainly as a base for piratical expeditions. In 1090 it was again brought under Christian rule, being conquered by the Norman Count Roger of Normandy. It passed successively under the rule of the Angevins and Aragonese, and followed the fortunes of their kingdoms. In 1530 it was handed over to the Knights of St. John, who made of it a stronghold of Christianity. In 1565 it sustained the famous siege, when the last great effort of the Turks was successfully withstood by Grand Master La Valette. The Knights expended large sums in fortifying the island and carrying out many magnificent works, until they were expelled by Napoleon in 1798. The Maltese rose against the French garrison soon afterwards, and, with the assistance of some British and Neapolitan troops, compelled the French to capitulate in 1800. The islands were then, at their own wish, admitted into the British Empire, the act being confirmed by the Treaty of Paris of 1814.

Malta was again closely besieged in the late war and again withstood the attacks of all its enemies. From June, 1940, to the end of the war, 432 members of the garrison and 1,540 civilians were killed by enemy aircraft, and about 35,000 houses were destroyed or damaged.

Parliament of the United Kingdom made a free grant of £10,000,000 for restoring war damage, and for rebuilding after the war. A further grant of £20,000,000 has been made.

The climate, although not tropical, is hot in summer. The islands are intensively cultivated. The chief export crops are potatoes, onions and cumin seed. Wheat, barley, clover and tomatoes are extensively grown on dry lands, while on irrigated land all the usual temperate climate and sub-tropical vegetables are grown. Tomatoes are grown on irrigated and non-irrigated land. Agriculture and fishing are among the principal occupations of the inhabitants.

Mdina (Notabile), the former capital of the island, contains the ancient palace of the courts of justice, the Cathedral, and the Old Seminary; its population has now dwindled to 1,122, but its suburb, Rabat, has 23,388 inhabitants. Notabile has been entirely eclipsed in importance by the modern capital of Valletta, which was founded in 1566. The principal harbour is one of the finest in the world; it is very deep, and large vessels can anchor alongside the shore. It is an important port of call for vessels passing to and from the East and the Suez Canal, being about half-way between Gibraltar and Port Said. There is an extensive arsenal and important dockyard, Malta being the headquarters of the Mediterranean Fleet and N.A.T.O. Mediterranean Command.

Malta possesses a University (about 300 students) and a Lyceum (1,030 students); 120 Government primary schools, 6 secondary schools (one of them preparatory) and a technical schools. There are numerous private elementary and secondary schools. English and Maltese are the only languages taught in the primary schools. In religion the Maltese are Roman Catholics. The islanders are mainly Punic in origin. The Maltese language is of Semitic origin, and is held by some to be derived from the Carthaginian and the Phœnician tongues. There is a Maltese order of nobility, recognized by the Crown, consisting of 20 families.

English and Maltese are the official languages of administration and Maltese is the official language in all the Courts of Law and the language of general intercourse in the islands. Provision has been made by ordinance for the use of the English language in any proceedings before any Court where any party or any accused person does not speak Maltese as the principal language to which he is accustomed. Where the proceedings are in a language not known to the party or parties or to the accused they are translated. In 1934, Maltese was substituted for Italian as the principal language of the Courts of Law.

GOVERNMENT

By Letters Patent dated September 5, 1947, Responsible Government was re-established in Malta and the new Legislative Assembly was opened by H.R.H. The Duke of Gloucester on November 20, 1947. The Maltese Legislature may not pass laws touching the public safety or defence of Her Majesty's dominions and the general interests of British subjects outside Malta. In addition to this general reservation, certain subjects are specifically withheld from the Legislature's competence. The principal subjects so reserved are matters dealing with the defence of the island and naval, military or air force matters generally, aliens, immigration, currency and treaties and relations with foreign states except in so far as it may be necessary for laws to be made in Malta to enable effect to be given to any treaty extending to Malta. Laws dealing with "reserved matters" may be made by the Governor subject to Her Majesty's approval, or by Order in Council.

The Governor is assisted by two Councils; the Executive Council, consisting of such Ministers as he selects; and the Nominated Council, consisting of the Lieutenant-Governor, the Legal Secretary (who are ex officio members) and three Officers chosen from the Navy, the Army and the Air Force. There is a Privy Council which consists of the members of the Executive Council and the members of the Nominated Council, and the Governor may, as occasion may require, appoint a Joint Committee of the Privy Council consisting of three members of the Executive Council, nominated by the Prime Minister, and three members of the Nominated Council selected by the Governor.

MAURITIUS

Mauritius is an island lying in the Indian Ocean, 550 miles east of Madagascar, between 57° 17'–57° 46' E. long. and S. lat. 16° 58'–20° 33', and comprising with its dependencies an area of 805 square miles. The resident population at the census of 1952 was 501,415, made up of Indians, Europeans (mainly French), and persons of mixed descent. The total population, including dependencies, was estimated (Dec. 31, 1954) at 555,536.

Mauritius was discovered in 1511 by the Portuguese, but they never formed any settlement on it. The Dutch visited it in 1598, and named it Mauritius, in honour of the Stadtholder, Prince Maurice of Nassau. In 1638 they established a small colony on the shore, but in 1710 they abandoned the island, and in 1715 the French took possession of it and changed the name to Isle de France, but did not settle it until 1721. Under the French it became a great centre of trade. In 1789 the seat of French Government in the East was removed to it from Pondicherry, and it was taken by a British force in 1810. The French language and French law have been preserved under British rule though the ancient name, Mauritius, was restored.

Of the total cultivable area of about 210,000 acres, 187,800 are under sugar, about 3,200 under aloe (regular plantations), 3,500 under maize, 3,000 under tea, 40 under rice, 500 under tobacco and the rest under other foodcrops and mixed farming. The sugar crop of 1955 was about 533,000 metric tons.

Situated just within the tropics but being a small land mass in a large ocean area, Mauritius has a climate more subtropical than tropical except at low altitudes. In summer conditions are sometimes trying because of high humidities and light winds rather than because of the relatively high temperatures. The island lies in that region of the South Indian Ocean where tropical cyclones are most frequent. At times, as in 1892, 1931 and 1945 they are very severe and do much damage to crops and buildings.

Railways and Shipping.—There is an excellent harbour on the N.W. coast, on which the capital, Port Louis, stands, and the annual trade of the island passes entirely through Port Louis. The shipping entered in 1955 amounted to 1,230,000 tons, and the shipping cleared to 1,227,000 tons. In 1955 there were 82 miles of railway (4 ft. 8½ in. gauge), 76 post-offices and postal agencies, 47 telegraph offices and 13 telephone-exchange offices in the island, with 210 miles of telegraph, including block telegraph of the railway and 10,710 miles of underground and overhead (Government) telephone wires and 6,875 telephone installations.

Civil Aviation.—The island is linked by air with Africa, U.K. and Europe through the scheduled services of Air France, three times a week with Super Constellation aircraft. The airport at Plaisance, in the Grant Port district, received the first passenger aircraft on July 15, 1946. At the beginning of September, 1952, Qantas Empire Airways (of Australia), now flying Super Constellation aircraft, started a fortnightly scheduled service from Sydney to Johannesburg, via Perth, Cocos Islands and Mauritius.

The inhabitants of European descent are mostly Roman Catholic. Educational facilities are available up to University entrance level. Primary education is provided in 324 schools, of which 86 are Government, 78 aided and 160 unaided schools. There are 3 Government Secondary Schools, 2 for boys and 1 for girls, and a large number of non-Government day institutions, 8 of which are grant-aided.

The necessities of life have all to be imported from abroad. In 1955 rice and grain were obtained from Siam, Burma, India and South Africa, flour from Australia, oxen from Madagascar and minor food imports from South Africa, Australia and elsewhere; 89.6 per cent. trade of the island was with Great Britain and British Dominions and Colonies in 1955.

GOVERNMENT

The Government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council.

Under the Constitution promulgated June 5, 1948, the Legislature consists of the Governor (as President), 3 ex officio members (the Colonial Secretary, the Procureur and Advocate General and the Financial Secretary), 12 nominated members and 19 elected members. The franchise was also extended and women are admitted thereto. The executive includes 4 members selected from the Legislative Council in accordance with regulations made by the Governor.

Total exports	1,217,276	864,810

Other Dependencies.—Most of the scattered groups of coral islands belonging to Great Britain in the Indian Ocean are administered by the Mauritius Government, being visited periodically by two magistrates, whose duty it is to inquire into the condition of the labourers, and settle any disputes which may be referred to them. The chief product is coconut oil. The most important are the Oil Islands Group, the largest of which, Port Diego Garcia (pop. 1952, 619), lies on the direct route from the Red Sea to Australia, and possesses a good harbour; other islands are Six Islands, Peros Banhos, Agalega, St. Brandon, Salomon, and Trois Freres. The total area of the "Other Dependencies" is about 47½ square miles, with a population (1952) of 1,752.

THE NEW HEBRIDES

The New Hebrides Group, in the South Pacific Ocean, situated between the 13th and 21st degrees of South latitude and the 166th and 170th degrees of East longitude, of an area of roughly 5,700 square miles, is administered by a British-French Condominium Government.

The principal islands are Espiritu Santo, Malekula, Epi, Ambrym, Efate or Sandwich, Erromanga, Tanna, Anietyum, Lopevi, Maewo, and Pentecost. The executive consists of a British and a French Resident Commissioner assisted by a staff of officers. The population (Dec. 31, 1955) was 53,739, of which 48,900 is the estimated number of native inhabitants. Principal products, copra, coffee, cocoa, wool, sandalwood and shell. Imports for 1955 totalled £1,339,758, of which £911,233 was the value of imports from Australia. Exports in 1955 were valued at £1,487,729, £1,293,045 being the value of exports to France. Joint revenue, 1955, £278,485 (estimated); expenditure, £302,328 (estimated).

NIGERIA

Nigeria, the largest British Colonial Territory, is situated on the west coast of Africa. It is bounded on the south by the Gulf of Guinea, on the west and north by Dahomey and French Niger and on the east by the French Cameroons. A small portion of the old German colony of the Cameroons is under United Kingdom Trusteeship and this is administered as an integral part of Nigeria. The area including this portion is about 373,250 sq. miles. A belt of mangrove swamp forest 10-60 miles in width lies along the entire coastline. North of this there is a zone 50-100 miles wide of tropical rain forest and oil-palm bush. North of this the country rises and the vegetation changes to open woodland and savannah. In the extreme north the country is almost desert. There are few mountains except along the eastern boundary, where the highest peak is the 13,000-foot Cameroon Mountain. The Niger, Benue, and Cross are the main rivers.

The climate varies with the types of country described above, but Nigeria lies entirely within the tropics and temperatures are high. Temperatures of over 100° in the north are common while coast temperatures are seldom over 90°. The humidity at the coast, however, is much higher than in the north. The rainy season is from about May to October; rainfall varies from under 25 inches a year in the extreme north to 150 inches on the eastern coast line. An area at the foot of the Cameroon Mountain has a freak rainfall of over 350 inches. During the dry season the harmattan wind blows from the desert; it is laden with fine particles of dust.

The 1952-53 Census returns gave a total population of 31,200,000 (Northern Region 16,800,000; Eastern Region 8,000,000; Western Region 6,400,000). It is estimated that at mid-1954 the total population was about 31,800,000. The population is almost entirely African. There are some 15,000 Europeans, Americans, Lebanese and others engaged in Government posts, commerce and Missionary work. The most important towns are Lagos (pop. 267,000), Ibadan (459,000), Kano (130,000), Iwo (100,000), Ogomosho (139,000), Oyo (72,000), Oshogbo (122,000), Onitsha (77,000), Ife (111,000), Abeokuta (84,000), Ilesha (72,000), Enugu (63,000), Aba (58,000), Yerwa (55,000), Katsina (53,000), Port Harcourt (72,000), Sokoto (48,000), Zaria (54,000).

Health Services.—There are 124 general hospitals and nursing homes in Nigeria and the Cameroons and 392 doctors. There are also 419 maternity hospitals and homes and 1,120 dispensaries. The country has many formidable health problems, chief among which are annual outbreaks of small-pox and cerebrospinal fever (mainly in the Northern Region), and of yellow fever (mainly in the Eastern Region), and the widespread prevalence of malaria, yaws, bilharziasis, intestinal helminth infestations and malnutrition. These are being combated by the expansion of medical facilities as fast as finance and the training of staff will allow, the emphasis being on preventive medicine, raising the standard of living and education of the people.

Education.—On October 1, 1954, on the revision of the Constitution, education became the responsibility of the Regional Governments, the Federal Government retaining responsibility for education in Lagos and for those institutions of higher learning which have Nigerian significance, such as the University College at Ibadan, the Nigerian College of Arts, Science and Technology, King's College and the Man O' War Bay Training Centre. After that date education, which was already expanding rapidly at all levels, received an extra impetus, especially in the sphere of primary education. In the Western Region the plan for free and universal primary education for all children within the 6-12 year age group was implemented in January 1955, the changes involved being embodied in a new Education Law.

Production and Industry.—Nigeria is mainly an agricultural country. Five of the country's main agricultural products, viz. palm-oil and palm kernels, cocoa, cotton, bananas (from the Cameroons) and ground-nuts are of the greatest importance in Nigeria's export trade (see figures under "Trade" below). Other crops include beniseed, capsicums, cassava, coffee, copra, guinea-corn, gum arabic, kola-nuts, maize, millet, piassava, rice, rubber, tobacco and yams. There are important tin and coal-mining industries, at Jos and Enugu respectively. The coal is mainly used within the country; in 1954 636,000 tons were produced. Nigeria supplies 95 per cent. of the world's requirements of columbite. Timber and hides and skins are other major exports. Industrial products include soap, cigarettes, beer, margarine, groundnut oil, meal and cake, concentrated fruit juices, soft drinks, canned food, metal containers, plywood, textiles and ceramic products.

Railways.—The Nigerian railway system, which is controlled by the Nigerian Railway Corporation, is the most extensive in any British Colonial territory. There are 1,903 route miles of line. There are two major bridges, one over the Niger at Jebba and one over the Benue at Makurdi. The latter is 2,624 ft. long, and it is believed to be the second longest in Africa. The North-western main line runs from Lagos to Kano (700 miles) through the important towns of Abeokuta, Ibadan, Ilorin, Jebba, Minna, Kaduna and Zaria. From Kano the line continues for another 143 miles in a north-easterly direction to its terminus at Nguru, and there is a branch line from Zaria via Gusau to Kaura Namoda to serve north-western Nigeria. This line is also linked with Sokoto by a scheduled railway road service from Gusau. The eastern line runs from Port Harcourt deep-water quay on the Bonny river through the thickly populated oil palm area to Enugu, where it serves the collieries. It then crosses the Benue and joins the north-western line at Kaduna, 569 miles from Port Harcourt. A branch line of 63 miles from Kafanchan serves the tin mines at Jos. The railway hauled 2,602,000 tons of freight in 1954-55, and its passenger traffic totalled over 349,000,000 passenger miles.

Roads.—There are 31,184 miles of motorable road. Most of the roads have gravelled or earth surfaces, but about 2,022 miles are tarred. An extensive programme of bituminous surfacing is now being carried out.

Civil Aviation.—Trunk route services operated by British, Netherlands, French and Belgian airlines bring Nigeria within less than 20 hours of the Western European capitals and South Africa. There are also connections to French Africa and the United States. A network of internal air services operated by the West African Airways Corporation connects the main internal centres, the annual number of aircraft movements at Nigerian airfields exceeding 30,000. Comprehensive radio navigational aids are installed at Kano and Lagos airports, and basic radio navigational facilities are provided at the twelve other aerodromes in regular use. There is a network of meteorological reporting stations.

GOVERNMENT

Nigeria is divided into three Regions known as the Northern Region, the Eastern Region and the Western Region (with Regional Headquarters at Kaduna, Enugu and Ibadan respectively), the quasi-Federal Trusteeship Territory of the Southern Cameroons (with Headquarters at Buca), and the Federal Capital of Lagos. On October 1, 1954, Nigeria became a Federation. The Nigeria (Constitution) Order in Council, 1954, provides for a Council of Ministers for the Federation and for Executive Councils for the three Regions and the Southern Cameroons. The Council of Ministers consists of the Governor-General as President, ten Federal Ministers (three from each Region and one from the Southern Cameroons) and three ex officio Members. The Executive Council of the Northern Region is composed of the Governor as President, thirteen Regional Ministers and three ex officio Members. The Executive Councils of the Eastern and Western Regions consist of the Governor as President and not fewer than nine Regional Ministers. In the Southern Cameroons, the Executive Council consists of the Commissioner of the Cameroons as President, four Unofficial Members and three ex officio Members.

There is a House of Representatives for the Federation consisting of the Speaker and 184 elected Members, 92 from the Northern Region, 42 each from the Western and Eastern Regions, 6 from the Southern Cameroons and 2 from Lagos. There are also three ex officio Members and there may be Special Members, not exceeding six, appointed by the Governor-General to represent communities and interests not otherwise adequately represented in the House. In the Northern and Western Regions there are two-chamber systems of Government consisting in each case of a House of Chiefs and a House of Assembly. In the Eastern Region and in the Southern Cameroons there are Houses of Assembly only.

The executive authority of the Federation extends to all matters with respect to which the Federal legislature has power to make laws. Under the 1954 Constitution certain subjects became exclusively a matter for the Federal Legislature. Such subjects include external affairs, aviation, banks, census, customs, defence, police, shipping, mines and minerals, posts and telegraphs, trunk roads and railways.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government is the main responsibility of a large number of Native Administrations. Throughout the country, in recent years, the influence of British local government institutions has been increasingly marked. The Northern Region Native Authority Law, 1954, incorporates as many of the provisions dealing with the functions of native authorities as can be conveniently grouped together in a single Law. The Law deals inter alia with the establishment and appointment of native authorities and lays down their powers and duties.

The expansion of the system of local government councils in the Eastern and Western Regions continues and the system has been further extended and modernised by the Eastern Region Local Government Law, 1955, and the Western Region Local Government Law, 1952, as amended by the Western Region Local Government (Amendment) Law, 1955.

CAMEROONS

(Trusteeship Territory of the Cameroons)

The German Protectorate of Kamerun on the west coast of Africa between (British) Nigeria and French Congo was obtained by conquest by Franco-British forces during the War of 1914-18.

The approximate geographical limits of the German territory were 2°-11° 30' N. lat. and 8° 30'-16° E. long. and the area was about 177,496 square miles. By the Milner-Simon Agreement of July 10, 1919, the whole area was divided into a British sphere (about 34,081 square miles) and a French sphere (about 143,415 square miles). In 1922 the territories were placed by the League of Nations under British and French Mandates, and in 1946 by the United Nations under British and French Trusteeship. The Cameroons under United Kingdom Trusteeship marches the whole distance of the Nigerian Eastern boundary, save for one short break. A census conducted in 1952 and 1953 showed the population of the British sphere to be 1,083,000.

The two narrow strips of territory reach from the Atlantic Ocean to Lake Chad, a distance of 700 miles, and lie diagonally between 4°-12° 30' N. lat. and 8° 30'-14° 45' E. long. The nature of the country varies to a remarkable extent, from the coastal mangrove swamps and thick forest regions to the grasslands at heights of 4,000 ft. to 7,000 ft. and more, and again to sandy and swampy areas in the region of Dikwa and Lake Chad. The highest point is the peak of the Cameroon Mountain, which rises to a height of 13,350 ft. It is volcanic and erupted in 1954, though without discharging lava, as it did on the previous occasion in 1922.

The Cameroons under United Kingdom Trusteeship is administered as part of Nigeria. The Northern areas, which are administered as part of the Northern Region of Nigeria, are administered by the Residents of the adjoining Provinces of Adamawa, Bornu and Benue. The Executive Council of the Northern Region of Nigeria includes a Minister with a portfolio for Northern Cameroons Affairs who is a representative of the Territory. The Southern section, formerly administered as two provinces of the Eastern Region of Nigeria, became, on October 1, 1954, quasi-Federal territory within the Federation of Nigeria, with its own Legislature (known as the Southern Cameroons House of Assembly) and Executive Council, competent, subject to the assent of the Governor-General of Nigeria, in all matters reserved to the Regions by the Federal constitution of Nigeria. A Commissioner of the Cameroons continues to be responsible for the overall administration of the Southern section as well as acting as the United Kingdom's special representative for the whole territory when Cameroons affairs are before the Trusteeship Council. His headquarters are at Buea.

Cattle breeding and the production of guinea corn are the chief occupations of the population of Dikwa, which consists mainly of Shuwa Arabs and Kanuri. The inhabitants of the areas which for administrative purposes form part of the Adamawa Province are mostly primitive hillmen whose chief occupation is agriculture. Cattle breeding and agriculture, of which coffee is becoming the main economic group, are the chief occupations in the Bamenda area, which consists mostly of high grassland.

The country nearer the sea-coast is rich in timber, and the volcanic soil of the lower slopes of the Cameroon Mountain is particularly fertile. 250,000 acres of this land, formerly German-owned plantations, have been leased to the Cameroons Development Corporation, which was set up in 1946 for the production of bananas, oil palm products, rubber and cocoa, almost all of which are exported. Profits earned by the Corporation accrue to the general revenue of the Southern Cameroons, in which section the properties operated by the Corporation are situated.

The chief exports from the Territory are cocoa, palm oil and kernels, rubber and bananas; the chief imports are textiles, motor spirit, provisions, iron-ware and salt.

A Colonial Development and Welfare allocation of about £1,500,000 will be available for the territory's development plan for 1955-60. The major part of this will be devoted to the improvement of the territory's road system. Other schemes will include the provision of water supplies in urban and rural areas, the development of medical and health services and the expansion of educational facilities in the territory.

The seaports of Victoria and Tiko are connected with Buea and all divisional headquarters by motor road.

The principal groups under the High Commissioner in, over, and for the Western Pacific Islands are (1) The Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony; (2) The British Solomon Islands Protectorate; (3) The New Hebrides; (4) There are also a number of scattered groups and isolated islands, including Caroline, Flint, Malden, Starbuck and Vostock Islands, which are not attached to any group.

The Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony, which includes Ocean, Christmas, Fanning and Washington Islands, besides the Gilbert, Ellice and Phoenix Groups, was formerly a Protectorate, and was formally annexed to the Empire in November, 1915. The total land area of the Colony is about 360 sq. miles with a population (Census, 1947) of 36,000 (304 Europeans, 142 Chinese, 29,923 Micronesians and 5,066 Polynesians), estimated at 40,665 at the end of 1954. Expressed in Australian currency, the revenue of the Colony in 1954 was £505,720; expenditure £362,815. Exports (1954) £1,147,080; imports £782,013.

The Government maintains one boys' boarding school and 14 primary mixed schools. Village school primary education is mainly run by missionary societies, with financial assistance from the Government, and at the end of 1953 these schools were attended by 7,408 pupils.

The Gilbert Group, situated between 4° N. and 3° S. latitude and 172° and 177° E. longitude, consists of 16 islands, Makin, Butaritari, Marakei, Abaiang, Tarawa (Headquarters of the Colony), Maiana, Abemama, Kuria, Aranuka, Nonouti, Tabiteuea, Beru, Nikunau, Onotoa, Tamana and Arorae. The area of the group is 114 sq. miles and the population estimated at 37,327. The Ellice Group of 9 islands (Nukunono, Nukunono, Nukunono, Nui, Nukunono, Nukunono, Nukunono, Nukunono and Nukunono) lies between lat. 5° 30' and 11° SE. and long. 176° E. and 180° E. The area of the group is 91 sq. miles and the population (estimated 1954) 5,123. Ocean Island (or Banaba), in lat. 0° 54' S. and long. 169° 35' E. was proclaimed British in 1900. The Line Islands between lat. 4° 40' and 2° N. and long. 160° 20' and 157° W. include Fanning, Washington and Christmas Islands. Fanning and Washington Islands were included in the Colony in 1916. Christmas Island in 1919. Christmas Island is the largest atoll in the Pacific. The boundaries of the Colony were extended (March 18, 1937) to include the Phoenix Islands (Birmie, Canton, Enderbury, Gardner, Hull, McKean, Phoenix and Sydney Islands), between 3° and 5° S. and 170° and 175° W. Enderbury and Canton Islands are for common use of Gt. Britain and U.S.A. for aviation and communications, under an agreement made on April 6, 1939. Canton Island is an international airport on the Trans-Pacific route between Fiji and Honolulu.

In each island of the Gilbert and Ellice Groups (except Niulakita) and in three islands in the Phoenix Group there is a Native Government under an appointed native Magistrate whose court administers a code of native laws. The Colony is administered by the High Commissioner through a Resident Commissioner.

Resident Commissioner, Gilbert and Ellice Islands, Michael Louis Bernacchi, C.M.G., O.B.E., (1952) (+ allc. £175) £2,820

The British Solomon Islands Protectorate, established in 1893, now includes all the islands in the Solomons Archipelago S. and S.E. of the large island of Bougainville. The main islands in the Protectorate are Choiseul, Santa Ysabel, Shortland Group, Vella Lavella, Kolombangara, Ganongga, Gizo, New Georgia, Florida, Guadalcanal, Russells, Malaita and San Cristobal, and the outlying islands of Bellona, Rennell, Santa Cruz, Vanikoro, Tikopia, Cherry, Mitre, Utupua, Swallow (or Reef Islands) and Duff Groups, Sikaiana (or Stewart) and Ontong Java (or Lord Howe Atoll). The Protectorate is situated between 5°-13° S. lat. and 155°-170° 20' E. long. It has a total land area of about 11,500 square miles and ocean area of about 270,000 square miles, and a population (est. 1955) of 590 Europeans, 260 Chinese and other Asiatics, 94,000 Melanesians and 4,350 Polynesians. Estimated revenue (1956) £A1,192,064; estimated expenditure (1956), £A1,192,064 (including Colonial Development and Welfare Funds and Grant-in-Aid from the United Kingdom); imports (1955) £A1,294,827; exports £A1,999,485. The main imports are foodstuffs and building materials. Principal exports are copra, trochus shell and timber. The headquarters of the Western Pacific High Commission were moved from Suva in Fiji to Honiara, the capital of the British Solomon Islands Protectorate, in December, 1952, and the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific assumed the direct administration of the Protectorate on Jan. 1, 1953.

SOUTH PACIFIC COMMISSION

The South Pacific Commission, an advisory and consultative body set up by the six Governments responsible for the administration of island territories in the South Pacific region, recommends to the member Governments means for promoting the well-being of the peoples of these territories. It is concerned with social, economic and health matters. Headquarters, Nouméa, New Caledonia.

The Commission was established by an Agreement between the Governments of Australia, France, the Netherlands, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States of America, signed at Canberra in 1947 and ratified on July 29, 1948. Until November 7, 1951, the area of the Commission's activities comprised territories lying generally south of the Equator from and including Netherlands New Guinea in the west to the French Establishments in Oceania and Pitcairn in the east. On November 7, 1951, an additional Agreement was signed extending the scope of the Commission to include Guam and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands under United States administration. The Commission consists of twelve Commissioners, two from each Government, and meets once or twice a year. The first Session was held in May, 1948.

There are two auxiliary bodies, the Research Council and the South Pacific Conference. The Research Council assembles once a year. Members are appointed by the Commission and are selected for their special knowledge of the questions with which the Commission is concerned, and the problems of the Territories in these fields. The chief function of the Research Council is to advise the Commission what investigations are necessary. Arrangements to carry out those which are approved are the responsibility of the Secretary-General and other principal officers. The South Pacific Conference, which meets at intervals not exceeding three years, consists of delegates from the territories who may be accompanied by advisers. Secretary-General, Dr. Ralph Clairon Bedell.

Deputy Secretary-General, J. Ryan.

Executive Officers, Dr. E. Massal (Health); Dr. A. H. J. Kroon (Economic Development); Dr. R. Seddon (Social Development).

FEDERATION OF RHODESIA AND NYASALAND

AREA AND POPULATION

The Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland covers an area of 486,973 square miles (S. Rhodesia, 150,333; N. Rhodesia, 287,640; and Nyasaland, 49,000 square miles), including approximately 12,000 square miles of water.

Population.—The total population of the Federation (preliminary results of 1956 Census) is 7,000,000 of all races (S. Rhodesia 2,300,000; N. Rhodesia 2,100,000; Nyasaland 2,600,000).

PHYSIOGRAPHY

Boundaries.—The Federation extends from latitude 22° 30' South to latitude 8° 15' South. On the South it is bordered by the Union of South Africa, on the West by the Bechuanaland Protectorate, and Portuguese West Africa, on the North-West and North by the Belgian Congo, on the North by Tanganyika and on the East by Portuguese East Africa.

Relief.—Most of the two Rhodesias is at an altitude of between 3,000 and 5,000 feet above sea level, the highest land lying on the eastern border of Southern Rhodesia where some mountains rise above 8,000 feet above sea level. In the large river valleys, the Zambezi, Sabi, Kafue and Luangwa the level of the land falls to below 2,000 feet.

In Nyasaland the level of the littoral of Lake Nyasa and of parts of the Shire River Valley is 1,500 feet above sea level. Elsewhere the altitude varies between 2,500 and 7,000 feet with the crest of the Manje Mountain massif rising to 10,000 feet above sea level. Lake Nyasa itself, the greatest depth of which is 2,300 feet, is a southward extension of the Great Rift Valley.

Rivers.—Portions of the Zambezi River, Lake Nyasa, Lake Bangweulu, the Luapula River and the Chambeshi River are navigable and are extensively used by waterborne transport. The Federation has, however, no great natural waterways, either to provide access to the sea or to connect major industrial centres, but there are a number of large rivers which could be brought into the service of agriculture for irrigation and of power supplies for hydro-electric schemes. The principal rivers of this type, in addition to the Zambezi, are—In Southern Rhodesia: the Sabi River and its tributaries (irrigation and power potentialities); the Hunyani River (already dammed at several points); and the Umfoli River (irrigation potentialities). In Northern Rhodesia: the Kafue River (power potentialities); the Mulungushi and Lunsemfwa Rivers (already supplying hydro-electric power to Broken Hill mine and town); and the Zambezi River at the Victoria Falls (supplying hydro-electric power to Livingstone). In Nyasaland: the Shire River (power and irrigation potentialities).

Climate.—Though the entire Federal area lies within the tropics most of it is at an altitude which gives climatic conditions favouring permanent European settlement. The main rainfall throughout the area is concentrated into a season extending from about November to March. Average rainfall (except for certain somewhat arid low-lying regions on the one hand and some high altitude areas of very heavy rainfall on the other) is in the vicinity of 25 to 30 inches a year.

HISTORY

The Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland came into being on September 4, 1953, when the first Governor-General assumed office. The Order-in-Council authorizing the setting up of the Federation was approved by Her Majesty the Queen on August 1, 1953. An interim Ministry was sworn in on September 7. The first elections to the Federal Assembly took place on December 15, 1953. In the first months of the Federation only the minimum administrative machine was created and the Federal Government assumed its functions from the territories by degrees. By July 1, 1954, the Federal Ministries had taken over most of their duties.

British rule and occupation in Southern Rhodesia followed the march into Mashonaland in 1890 of Cecil Rhodes' Pioneer Column. British influence was extended northwards to Northern Rhodesia from Southern Rhodesia during the nineties and eastwards from Nyasaland where a protectorate had been declared in 1889. Both Rhodesias were administered till 1923 by the British South Africa Company, the Resident Commissioner at Salisbury represented the United Kingdom in respect of both countries, the Rhodesias shared the same railway system and all three countries made use of the same port, Beira. In more recent years the two northern territories provided an important and growing market for the manufactures of Southern Rhodesia and the three countries have shared in the provision of a number of technical services such as airways, currency, statistics, archives, town planning and broadcasting.

The suggestion for closer association seems to have been mooted first in about 1910 and a proposal to amalgamate the Rhodesias was made officially by Dr. Jameson in 1916 on behalf of the British South Africa Company. It was opposed by the settlers of Southern Rhodesia who feared that amalgamation would defer indefinitely hopes of responsible government. The changes of status of the two Rhodesias in 1923 diverted attention for the time being from the question of closer association but the issue was raised a few years later. The Bledisloe Commission, appointed in 1938, reported against immediate amalgamation but recognized the community of interest between the three territories by suggesting the creation of a body to co-ordinate common services. The suggestion was implemented in 1945 when the Central African Council was established. Conferences were held in London and at Victoria Falls in 1951-53 to examine the possibility of a closer working arrangement and to frame recommendations. The final proposals were endorsed by a referendum in Southern Rhodesia in April, 1953, by approximately a two-thirds majority. Later, the proposals were approved by the United Kingdom Parliament and the Legislative Councils of Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, and the final steps to set up the new Federation were taken.

Military Adviser, Brig. J. O. Crewe-Read, O.B.E.
Air Adviser, Wing Commander H. D. Clark, R.A.F.

LEGISLATURE

The Federal Assembly consists of 35 members and is composed as follows: twenty-six elected members (Southern Rhodesia, 14; Northern Rhodesia, 8; Nyasaland, 4); six African elected members (two from each territory); and three European members charged with special responsibility for African interests, of whom one is elected in Southern Rhodesia and the other two appointed, one each by the Governors of Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland.

The main matters on which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws are external affairs, defence, immigration, financial and economic affairs, inter-territorial roads, railways, European agriculture in Southern Rhodesia, posts and telegraphs, education except African primary and secondary education and Federal courts. In addition, there are a number of matters on which both the Federal and Territorial Legislatures have powers to make laws. They include the development of industries, electricity, scientific and industrial research, health, town planning, archives, census, and statistics.

African Affairs Board.—A Standing Committee of the Federal Assembly, known as the African Affairs Board, consists of the three European members representing African interests and one of the elected African members from each territory. The Board makes representations to the Federal Government on matters within the authority of the Federation in the interests of Africans and assists a Territorial Government, at its request, in the study of matters affecting Africans. It is also the function of the Board to draw attention to any Federal legislation of a differentiating character and to ask that it should be reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure.

Speaker of the Federal Assembly, Hon. T. I. F. Wilson.
Clerk of the House, Col. G. E. Wells, O.B.E., E.D.

DEFENCE

The regular and Territorial forces of the Federation form the Central Africa Command which has its headquarters in Salisbury. The permanent forces are small, consisting of a battalion of the Rhodesian African Rifles in Southern Rhodesia, a battalion of the Northern Rhodesia Regiment and two battalions of the King's African Rifles in Nyasaland and a fighter squadron of the Southern Rhodesia Air Force equipped with Vampire jet fighters. In addition, Southern and Northern Rhodesia have an European Territorial Force comprising three battalions of The Royal Rhodesia Regiment, with headquarters at Salisbury, Bulawayo, and in Northern Rhodesia respectively. There is also the Southern Rhodesia Transport Corps in which coloured and Indian Territorials serve.

EDUCATION

The Federal Government is responsible for all education other than that of Africans, that is for European, Asian and Coloured children. In 1955 the numbers of such children at school were as follows: Southern Rhodesia, 38,887 (187 schools); Northern Rhodesia, 11,866 (55 schools); Nyasaland, 1,687 (16 schools). The majority of the schools are Government schools but the total of 258 includes 63 State-aided private schools.

The Rhodes-Livingstone Institute for Social Research in British Central Africa, founded in 1937, is situated in Lusaka, N. Rhodesia. The Rhodes-Livingstone Museum, at Livingstone, is the National Museum of Northern Rhodesia.

FINANCE

The third Federal Budget was presented on June 28, 1956. Loan vote estimates for 1956-57 totalled £37,731,600, of which £20,231,600 related to the second year of the Federal Development Plan for 1955-59, the remaining £17,500,000 of the loan vote being applied towards meeting part of the fiscal year's expenditure on the Kariba hydro-electric project. This project is now estimated to cost £80,000,000 in its first stage. A total of £46,600,000 has been secured from external sources, the International Bank contributing £28,600,000, the Colonial Development Corporation £15,000,000, the Commonwealth Development Finance Co. Ltd., £3,000,000 and £34,000,000 is being found from internal sources.

Revenue vote expenditure in 1956-57 is estimated at £53,859,885 against a total estimated revenue of £54,449,344 (including an accumulated surplus of £4,000,344 estimated carried forward from 1955-56).

	(1955-56) (Estimated)	(1955-57) (Estimated)
Revenue.....	£41,000,700*	£50,049,000
Expenditure from revenue funds....	£40,178,000	£53,859,885
Expenditure from loan funds.....	£15,421,000	£27,731,600
* A surplus of £2,678,324 carried forward from 1954-55. The total available revenue for the fiscal year 1955-56 was therefore £44,378,324.
The public debt amounted to £150,722,833 at June 30, 1956.

Currency.—Federal currency is linked to British sterling and currency backing is held in London in balances, in British Treasury Bills and in Government securities issued in the United Kingdom. The Bank of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, which was established by an Act of the Federal Assembly in 1956, is responsible for the issue of the currency. Notes are issued in denominations of £10, £5, £1 and 10s.

PRODUCTION, TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Agriculture.—European agriculture in Southern and Northern Rhodesia is the administrative responsibility of the Federal Government, the remainder of the agricultural industry of the Federal area being in the charge of the various Territorial Governments. Sales of principal crops in 1955 were:

	Southern Rhodesia '000 lb.	Northern Rhodesia '000 lb.	Nyasaland '000 lb.	Total '000 lb.

MINERAL PRODUCTION, 1955

	Quantity	Value
Copper	384,000 tons	£114,150,000
Gold	525,000 oz.	6,518,000
Asbestos.....	105,000 tons	7,052,000
Chrome	449,000 tons	2,192,000
Zinc	31,000 tons	2,530,000
Coal	3,654,000 tons	3,422,000
Lead	18,000 tons	1,700,000
Cobalt.....	—	1,557,000

The total value of all mineral production was £140,820,000.

Manufactures.—Up to the present, the most significant development of manufacturing industry has been in Southern Rhodesia. The net value of the output (after deducting the value of raw materials used) was £26,000,000 in 1953. The most important industries are those producing tobacco, cotton, textile and metal products. In these cases, as well as those of processed foodstuffs, the raw materials were supplied wholly or in large part from local sources.

In Northern Rhodesia at the end of 1954 there were 209 factories including 19 saw mills (one of them the biggest in southern Africa) and wood-working factories and 17 flour mills.

EXTERNAL TRADE

In 1955, the second year for which statistics of external trade are available for the Federation as a single trading entity, total external trade was valued at nearly £318,000,000.

With exports valued at £179,000,000 and imports at £139,000,000 there was a visible favourable balance of trade of £40,000,000.

About three-quarters of the exports consisted of minerals—copper, gold, asbestos, lead, zinc, chrome being the most important. About 14 per cent. of all exports consisted of tobacco.

The remaining 11 per cent., was made up of a wide range of products, including manufactured articles of which textiles are the most important.

Over 40 per cent. of imports in 1954 were in the metal manufactures category, a high proportion being mining, electrical and agricultural machinery, railway materials and other durable producers' goods required for the growth of industry, agriculture and basic services such as communications and the provision of electric power.

The most important market for the Federation's products and supplier of its requirements was the United Kingdom. Imports from the United Kingdom in 1955 were valued at over £59,000,000, and exports to the United Kingdom were worth over £93,000,000, made up mainly of copper (£66,000,000) tobacco (£16,000,000), asbestos and tea.

COMMUNICATIONS

Railways.—The two Rhodesias are served by the Rhodesia Railways which connect with the South African Railways at Mafeking. The main line forks at Bulawayo; the northern branch runs via the Victoria Falls through Northern Rhodesia to the Copperbelt and on to the Belgian Congo Border where it connects with the Belgian system. The eastern branch runs along the watershed of Southern Rhodesia to serve the main centres and ends at Umtali where it joins the Portuguese system to provide access to Beira. With branch lines, the total mileage of the Rhodesia Railways is nearly 2,500 miles, but an important new line, linking the Midlands of Southern Rhodesia with the port of Lourenço Marques in Portuguese East Africa was completed in 1955.

Nyasaland is served by the Nyasaland Railway system (the Trans-Zambezi Railway, the Central African Railway and the Nyasaland Railways) which connects Beira with Nyasaland. The total length of the system is nearly 500 miles.

Roads.—Main roads, which are in process of modernization, connect all the main centres of the Federation with one another and with adjacent territories, and secondary roads serve rural areas. The total route mileage of roads is over 51,000 miles (28,500 miles in Southern Rhodesia, 18,000 miles in Northern Rhodesia and nearly 5,000 miles in Nyasaland) of which some 11,000 miles are designated as main or principal roads (6,000 miles in Southern Rhodesia, excluding roads in towns, 4,300 miles in Northern Rhodesia and 1,700 miles in Nyasaland). Major bridges, the gift of the Beit Trustees, span the larger rivers on main roads, the Beit Bridge over the Limpopo, the Ottobert Bridge at Chirundu over the Zambezi and the Birchenough Bridge over the Sabi River being noteworthy. American financial aid has been given for the up-grading of the Northern Rhodesia section of the Great North military road which links the railhead at Broken Hill with Nafrobi in Kenya.

Air Services.—Civil aviation has made rapid progress in the Federal area since the war. The existing airline was reconstituted in partnership between the three territories as the Central African Airways Corporation. Flying Viscount, Viking, Dakota and Beaver aircraft, Central African Airways provide daily services between the major towns of the Federation and between them and Nairobi and Johannesburg, as well as a weekly service to London, and services to out-lying parts of the Federation. In addition there are many air charter firms and the major world airlines link the Federation with overseas countries. The international airport at Livingstone, whose main runway is over two miles long, can carry aircraft of about 150,000 lb. all-up weight. A new international airport, under construction at Salisbury, is in use and will be completed at the end of 1956.

Broadcasting.—European listeners are served by the Federal Broadcasting Service with headquarters at Salisbury. It is a department of the Federal Information Department. African listeners are served by the Central African Broadcasting Station at Lusaka.

CAPITAL

SALISBURY, the Federal capital, is also the principal city of Southern Rhodesia. It is built round the site where the Pioneer Column ended its march into Mashonaland in 1890. Situated in the north-east of Southern Rhodesia, it is on the main railway line which traverses the more closely settled areas of the Colony. Branch railway lines run north-east and north-west. It is the centre of the tobacco industry—the tobacco auction sales at Salisbury are the largest in the world—and an industrial centre of considerable importance. Estimated population, including townships on the periphery of Salisbury: Europeans, 55,000; Africans, 125,000; Asians and Coloured (mixed race), 3,300.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA

Southern Rhodesia, comprising Matabeleland, Mashonaland and Manicaland, is that part of the territory named after Cecil Rhodes lying south of the Zambesi River, its political neighbours being Northern Rhodesia and Portuguese East Africa on the N.; the Transvaal and Bechuanaland on the S. and W.; and Portuguese East Africa on the E. The total area is 150,333 square miles. The population (1951 census) numbered 136,000 Europeans, 4,292 Asiatics and 5,991 Coloureds; Natives are estimated at 2,000,000, giving a combined total of approximately 2,146,000. In 1951 there were 3,049 European births and 957 deaths, the death-rate being 6.9 per 1,000.

The Natives of Southern Rhodesia (members of the Bantu race) are Amandebele (known more usually as Matabele); Kalanga, who occupy Matabeleland, the western portion of the Colony; and Wazezuru, Wakaranga and a number of other tribes which grouped together are broadly described as the Mashona, who are settled (for the most part) in Mashonaland, the eastern part of the territory.

On the grant of Responsible Government in 1923, the British South Africa Company relinquished all rights and interests in the land of Southern Rhodesia except in the estates which it was already developing and working on July 10, 1923. The mineral rights (originally granted by Lobengula, king of the Matabele, under the famous Rudd Concession) were purchased by the Government from the Company in 1933 for £2,000,000. Considerable efforts have been made by the Government in recent years to increase the number of new European settlers on the land, and the settlement of some 500 Rhodesian ex-Servicemen on Crown land farms since the end of the war has been very successful. A Land and Agricultural Bank grants loans for farm development and acquisition of residential property on easy terms of repayment. Of the Colony's 96,000,000 acres, some 32,000,000 have been set apart for native occupation (Native Reserves) and purchase (Native Purchase Areas).

(A large proportion of the Public Debt has been taken over by the Federal Government.)

GOVERNMENT

The Colony obtained self-government in 1923 and has a Parliament of 30 members and a Cabinet of 5 members. The Queen is represented by a Governor who presides over the Executive Council. The Southern Rhodesian Government is responsible for native policy and differential legislation affecting the native population, which is subject to the consent of the Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations.

Municipal self-government has been established in the city of Salisbury, the city of Bulawayo, and in the towns of Umtali, Gwelo, Gatooma, Que Que and Fort Victoria. Smaller areas are administered by Town Management Boards.
